RUSSIANS FORCING AUSTRIANS TO RETIRE

SKIRMISHES REPORTED BETWEEN BULGARIA AND GREECE

Heavy Losses In Gallipoli

407 Officers Killed, 959 Wounded and 136 Missing, the List to Date

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Officers' casualty lists for the fortnight ended August 30 indicate the severity of the recent fighting in the Gallipoli Peninsula, whence the bulk of the casualties are announced.

They show that the British army lost 407 officers killed, 959 wounded and 136 missing, a total of 1,502 for the fortnight. This number has been exceeded only once in any fortnight since the beginning of the war, 1,627 casualties having been announced between May 5 and May 18.

Losses of officers since the outbreak of hostilities reached a total of 15,840, of whom 4,790 have been killed, 9,886 wounded and 1,352 reported missing. During the past fortnight Brigadier-General . H. Baldwin has been killed, three other brigadier-generals have been wounded, nine lieutenant-colonels killed and two reported missing.

The Australian contingent has been the greatest sufferer, having lost 68 killed, 150 wounded and 15 missing.

KRUPP'S GREAT SALE.

Krupps are credited by the American consul at Nuremburg with having just turned out a safe which will baffle even scientists to open. In order to make a hole large enough to admit the hand 2,642 gallons of oxygen and 2,378 gallons of acetylene would be needed. It is believed that this safe has been specially constructed for the Kaiser as a haven of refuge for him when the final crash comes.

AUSTRIANS FORCED BY RUSSIANS TO MAKE A GENERAL RETIREMENT

On the Galician Front—Greece and Bulgaria Reported to Have Flashed in a Frontier Skirmish—Great Increase in Munitions Output is Needed.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—It is apparent the Austrians have been forced by the Russians to make a general retirement on the Galician front.

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 13.—Greece and Bulgaria have clashed in a frontier skirmish.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Lloyd George says a great increase in munitions is the vital need.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—It is probable that Captain Von Papen of the German Embassy will be sent home at the request of the United States Government.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13.—(Official)—We continued an advance in the direction of Tarnopel breaking the enemy's stubborn resistance and destroying one entire battalion taking 31 officers and 2,500 men prisoners, and 16 machine guns. On the lower Sereth our advance developed successfully, expelling the enemy from the town of Tlust taking 800 prisoners.

ROME, Sept. 13.—Several minor successes have been gained by Italian troops in the mountains.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13.—Germans have been repulsed at all points during the last few days. Our troops are still defeating the Austrians in Galicia.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The British steamer Nimrod has been torpedoed. Some of the crew were lost.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13.—German submarines have penetrated and are operating in the Black Sea. Russian destroyers are in pursuit.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—On the Yser Canal the Germans attempted several surprise attacks on the British positions, but all were checked with heavy losses.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Germans in Peril of Russian Winter Declares Expert

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The London Times military expert writes:

"In the midst of desolation and at the opening of the bad season the Germans will have to decide what they will do next. It is true that the comparative proximity of the German bases and the German method* give them advantages which Napoleon never possessed in Russia, but armies in winter must be sheltered or perish.

"The systematic destruction of towns, villages, and farms, and the withdrawal of all local supplies will certainly affect the German operations most injuriously.

"In Russia vast hosts are preparing to renew the war. In every allied and neutral country all available factories are working day and night to supply the munitions that Russia needs. The effect of these preparations is already becoming manifest in the firmer countenance of the Russian rearguards and in the offensive operations which have been undertaken at several points.

"Even if during the winter 1,000,000 Germans could be transferred from the east to the west to join the 1,800,000 Germans now in the west they would find themselves faced by greater numbers of French, British and Belgians to say nothing of the mud of Flanders—and after immense losses such as they would assuredly suffer they would be unable to pursue their campaign either east or west, with any hope of success.

Russians Left Wing to Retire

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13. — While fierce attacks by the Russian troops have given them marked success in Galicia, it became known Saturday that the present line held by the army of General Ivanoff will be abandoned. The main forces of the Russian left wing are already executing a retrograde movement.

Behind this front, large industrial centres such as Kiev and Smolensk are being cleared of their civilian population. It is apparent that the Russian general staff anticipates a continuation of the German campaign through the fall, though this will necessarily slow up as the rains increase in violence.

The evacuation of Kiev began last Tuesday and of Smolensk the following day. The order for the departure of civilians was not given in the belief that either city would soon be taken by the Teutonic troops, but in order to turn over the resources of both to the military establishments.

Fabre Liner "Santanna" is Afire at Sea

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. — Several steamers are believed to be rushing to the aid of the Fabre Liner Sant Anna, afire at sea, 1,000 miles due east of New York. Between 1,600 and 1,700 Italian reservists and forty other passengers, including a number of women and children are aboard. The Italian liner Ancona is believed to have caught the Sant Anna's wireless call for assistance, flung out late last night. The Ancona left New York for Naples last Wednesday and is believed to have been less than 200 miles from the French steamer when the fire broke out.

GERMAN CAPITALISTS SENDING GOLD ABROAD

Report of $250,000,000 in Private Hands in Country Is Doubted.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—German journals announce that there is at least $250,000,000 in gold still in Germany in private hands.

The special correspondent of the Echo de Paris at Geneva, however, says that it is very likely that this gold already has crossed the frontier. For some time German capitalists have very prudently been putting their gold in places of safety abroad.

Within three months, says the correspondent, Swiss banks have received from Germany nearly $8,200,000 in gold. Deposits in other neutral countries are said to be even greater.

FAMILY FOOD

Crisp, Toothsome, and Requires No Cooking.

A little boy asked his mother to write an account of how Grape-Nuts food had helped their family.

She says: "Grape-Nuts was first brought to her attention when she visited

"While I was there I used the food regularly. I gained weight and felt so well that when I returned home I began using Grape-Nuts in the family regularly.

"My little 10-months-old baby shortly after being weaned was very ill with teething. She was sick nine weeks and we tried everything. She became so emaciated that it was painful to handle her and we thought we were going to lose her. One day a happy thought urged me to try Grape-Nuts soaked in a little warm milk.

"Well, it worked like a charm and she began taking it regularly and improvement set in at once. She grew well and round and fat as fast as possible on Grape-Nuts.

"Sometime ago several of the family were stricken with La Grippe at the same time and during the worst stages they could not relish anything in the shape of food but Grape-Nuts and oranges, everything else was nauseating.

"We all appreciate what your famous food has done for our family."

"There's a Reason."

UNITED STATES COURSE IS PUZZLING SAYS THE LONDON TIMES

Why Breach of Etiquette is Punished Before Killing of Americans—"Passing From Diplomatic Controversies to Acts"

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Times in an editorial, finds the President's affirmation of the legitimacy of American trade in munitions in his decision regarding Dr. Dumba as important "since it foreshadows the full use of the presidential veto should congress be weak enough to pass a bill forbidding the export of war materials." "Dumba's dismissal," it add "at any rate will convince Austro-German propagandists that there are limits even to American forbearance and that when those limits are passed retribution is apt to be swift and peremptory." Commenting on what it terms the difficulty of understanding the American attitude which results in the first definite step taken being to punish a breach of diplomatic etiquette instead of exacting reparation for the loss of American lives, the Times says it is willing to believe some governing principle exists although it may not be apparent to British observers and that President Wilson, having taken his stand, is not the man to be put off with any false issues.

AS PARIS VIEWS IT

PARIS, Sept. 23.—"The die is cast and Washington now is passing from diplomatic controversy to acts," says the Petit Parisien. "The note is courteous in style but at the same time imperative. Whatever Austria's response, the energetic act will have its effect upon the world."

Alfred Capus says in the Figaro: Nothing marks better the universal moral discredit to which our enemies have fallen than the note pointing out that Dumba no longer is acceptable. Certainly it is not a declaration of war, but it is a declaration of incompatibility.

WAR OFFICE CONSIDERING USE OF ARMOUR FOR BRITISH ARMY IN OPEN ATTACK

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The 1916 British army may be an armoured army.

The casualty list that filters through the War Office every day from the front; the convalescent wounded and battered soldiers that are always on the streets and the overflowing hospitals are beginning to have their effect.

Many ask: "Isn't there a way to minimize this appalling situation?"

Sombody has answered: "Armour."

And it's beginning to look like armour for the British soldiers of 1916.

While the British War Office is considering whether it shall slip back to medieval methods of warfare so far as the protection of the soldier is concerned, well known Britishers are telling the War Office through the press that armour is a natural necessity in these days of machine guns and high-powered rifles.

Scores of suggestions for modern 1916 armour emanating from scientists have narrowed down to the practicability of a three-piece suit of tempered steel that would protect the forehead, breast and abdomen—the three vital spots of the body. The favoured headpiece will, if authorized by the War Office, take the form of the highly tempered steel skull cap-like protector now worn by the French to minimize the danger of shrapnel. The breastplate would be a thin, leather covered, hardened plate of steel curved to fit over the breast and held by straps that go over the shoulders and around the waist. The abdominal protector is suggested in the form of another curved sheet of steel fitting over the lower ribs and extending down to the bones of the hips.

The British War Office four years ago experimented with a bullet proof breastplate at Aldershot where the device shed all the rifle and machine gun bullets that were fired against it at ranges of one foot to five hundred yards. The breastplate was rejected on the ground that it added too much weight to the equipment of the soldier and reduced his marching efficiency.

With a war of great proportions that will probably last many more months and with the thousands of dead and the tens of thousands of wounded, the War Office is believed to be reconsidering its objection to armour.

The men of the trenches at least probably will be thus equipped, according to information to-day.

"SHERLOCK HOLMES" IN FAVOUR

One of Britain's leading advocates of armour is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the noted author of "Sherlock Holmes."

In a lengthy message from his home at Windlesham, Crowborough, Sussex, to a London daily, Sir Arthur cited an action of the British in Northern France on May 9, when several brigades were decimated in an effort to rush across 300 yards intervening between the British and German trenches. He warned:

"You must either abandon such attacks or you must find artificial protection for the men."

Sir Arthur suggests, three-piece suits of steel plates for the soldiers but goes further in advocating a modern "testudo"—a cover used by the Roman soldiers in attacking a wall, formed by overlapping their oblong shields above their heads. Sir Arthur's modern testudo he would put on wheels to cover the men as they charge the German trenches. He says:

"These numerous armour plated bodies could rush with small loss over a space which had already been cleared as far as possible of obstacles and so have some chance of reaching the enemy's line not as an exhausted fragment, but as a vigorous storming party with number intact. Such apparatus would not necessitate a great addition to the impedimenta of an army. It would be a separate item, like the pontoons or the siege train, only to be brought up on special occasions to the point where it is needed for the assault. The vital body plates, however, should be used in the every day equipment of a fighting soldier."

Armoured shields on wheels such as Conan Doyle suggests were used by the United States infantry during the last days of the Spanish American war in Cuba, according to an English authority on armour. They were invented by Gen. Roy Stone, of the British army. Each shield lay horizontally and carried the impedimenta to marching soldiers when not placed vertically for sterner use.

Due to the rough character of the ground and the predominance of mounted forces in the Cuban campaign, the American experiment was a failure, it was stated. Whether the Government will accept the "testudo" is uncertain, but it is strongly whispered that armour will have to do with British armies of the coming year.

SUPERLATIVE PESSIMISM

At the octagonal [illegible] Press Club [illegible] were discussing [illegible] as we declared [illegible] about Paris.

"I'll tell you a story," said one. "I knew a Spaniard who lived in a small village in the south of Spain. Once upon a time a man went out to look for a goat for his wife. He was unsuccessful and when he returned he declared: 'Really, I have not been able to find the goat, but I have heard that it is [illegible]. We agree! with the Spaniard."

A Clergyman's Great Relief

A clergyman wrote us recently:- "It is a great relief as well as a great satisfaction that, after so many years of serious effort, I will have no further premiums to pay, but will have a little surplus until the endowment is due in 1917."

He had taken a Canada Life endowment for $3,000 twenty-five years ago. In two years he will receive this amount in cash.

Would you not like to be in a similar position when approaching the sunset of life? You can manage it by easy steps through a Canada Life endowment policy if you will start now.

It will give you the added advantage of protection from time of payment of the first premium, and the profits will be substantial as it is in the

EDINBURGH REGIMENTS

Only the Borderers May Fix Bayonets in Streets

The King's Own Scottish Borderers, occasionally known as "The Bothers," alone among Scottish regiments have the privilege of marching through the streets of Edinburgh with bayonets fixed and flags flying. On all occasions the right is exercised to the full. A petition has been presented to the Lord Provost of Edinburgh on behalf of the 15th Battalion Royal Scots (1st City of Edinburgh) asking the grant of a similar privilege. The Lord Provost has intimated that he is to inquire as to how the distinction was granted, whether a similar privilege could again be bestowed, and who has the power to bestow it. The 15th Royal Scots is the battalion which was raised by the Lord Provost for service in the present war, and when the war is over it will probably be disbanded; and it is pointed out that the 4th and 5th Battalions Royal Scots are also Edinburgh regiments which still receive their more familiar title of "The Queen's."

"I see that. In my own castle too!"

"There is ample room for both of us," she said sharply. "I shan't be here for more than a month or six weeks, and I am sure we can get along very amiably under the same roof for that length of time if you'll only forget that I am here."

"I can't very well do that, madam. You see, we are making extensive repairs about the place, and you are proving to be a serious obstacle. I cannot grant your request. It will grieve me enormously if I am compelled to smoke you out, but I fear"—

"Smoke me out!"

"Perhaps with sulphur," I went on resolutely. "It is said to be very effective."

"Surely you will not do anything so horrid."

"Only as a last resort. First we shall storm the east wing. Failing in that, we shall rely on smoke. You will admit that you have no right to poach on my preserves."

"None whatever," she said rather plaintively.

I can't remember having heard a sweeter voice than hers. Of course by this time I was thoroughly convinced that she was a lady, a cultured, nigh bred lady, and an American.

That plaintive note in her voice served its purpose. My firmness seemed to dissolve, even as I sought to re-enforce it by an injection of harshness into my own manner of speech.

"Then you should be willing to vacate my premises—er—or"—here is where I began to show irresolutaness—"or explain yourself."

"Won't you be generous?"

I cleared my throat nervously. How well they know the cracks in a man's armor!

"I am willing to be—amenable to reason. That's all you ought to expect." A fresh idea took root. "Can't we effect a compromise—a truce, or something of the sort? All I ask is that you explain your presence here. I will promise to be as generous as possible under the circumstances."

"Will you give me three days in which to think it over?" she asked, after a long pause.

"No."

"Well, two days?"

"I'll give you until tomorrow afternoon at 5, when I shall expect you to receive me in person."

"That is quite impossible."

"But I demand the right to go wherever I please in my own castle. You"—

"If you knew just how circumspect I am obliged to be at present you wouldn't impose such terms, Mr. Smart."

"Oh, circumspect! That puts a new light on the case. What have you been up to, madame?" I spoke very severely.

She very properly ignored the banality. "If I should write you a nice, agreeable letter, explaining as much as I can, won't you be satisfied?"

"I demand the right to go wherever I please in my own castle."

"I prefer to have it by word of mouth."

She seemed to be considering. "I will come to this window tomorrow night at this time and—and let you know," she said reluctantly.

"Very well," said I. "We'll let it rest till then."

"And, by the way, I have something more to ask of you. Is it quite necessary to have all this pounding and hammering going on in the castle? The noise is dreadful. I don't ask it on my own account, but for the baby. You see, she's quite ill with a fever, Mr. Smart. Perhaps you've heard her crying."

"The baby?" I muttered.

"It is nothing serious, of course. The doctor was here today and he reassured me"—

"A—a doctor here today?" I gasped.

She laughed once more. Verily, it was a gentle, high bred laugh.

"Will you please put a stop to the noise for a day or two?" she asked very prettily.

"Certainly," said I, too surprised to say anything else. "Is—is there anything else?"

"Nothing, thank you," she replied. Then: "Good night, Mr. Smart. You are very good."

"Don't forget tomorrow"—

CHAPTER V.

I Become an Ancestor.

TRUE to the promise she had extracted from me, I laid off my workmen the next morning. They trooped in bright and early, considerably augmented by fresh recruits, who came to share the benefits of my innocuous prodigality, and if I live to be a thousand I shall never again experience such a noisome half hour as the one I spent in listening to their indignant protests against my tyrannical oppression of the poor and needy. In the end I agreed to pay them, one and all, for a full day's work, and they went away mollified, calling me a true gentleman to my face and heaven knows what to my back.

Punctually at 9 o'clock that evening I was in the balcony, thanking my lucky stars that it was a bright moonlit night. There was every reason to rejoice in the prospect of seeing her face clearly when she appeared at her secret little window. But she wore a white, filmy veil. I naturally concluded that she was homely.

"Good evening," she said on opening the window.

"Good evening," said I, contriving to conceal my disappointment. "How is the baby?"

"Very much better, thank you. It was so good of you to stop the workmen."

"Won't you take off your veil and stay awhile?" I asked, politely facetious. "It is not quite fair to me, you know."

Her next remark brought a blush of confusion to my cheek. A silly notion had induced me to don my full evening regalia, spiketail coat and all. Nothing could have been more indigenously incongruous than my appearance, I am sure, and I never felt more uncomfortable in my life.

"How very nice you look in your new suit," she said, and I was aware of a muffled quality in her ordinarily clear, musical voice. She was laughing at me. "Are you giving a dinner party?"

"I usually dress for dinner," I lied with some haughtiness. "And so does Poopendyke," I added as an afterthought. My blush deepened as I recalled the attenuated blazer in which my secretary breakfasted, lunched and dined without discrimination.

"For Gretel's benefit, I presume."

"Aha! You do know Gretel, then?"

"Oh, I've known her for years. Isn't she a quaint old dear?"

"I shall discharge her in the morning," said I severely. "She is a liar, and her husband is a poltroon. They positively deny your existence in any shape or form."

"They won't pay any attention to you," said she, with a laugh. "They are fixtures, quite as much so as the walls themselves. You'll not be able to discharge them. My grandfather tried it fifty years ago and failed. After that he made it a point to dismiss Conrad every day in the year and Gretel every other day. As well try to remove the mountain, Mr. Smart. They know you can't get on without them."

"I have discharged her as a cook," I said triumphantly. "A new one will be here by the end of the week."

"Oh," she sighed plaintively, "how glad I am! She is an atrocious cook. I don't like to complain, Mr. Smart, but really it is getting so that I can't eat anything she sends up. It is jolly of you to get in a new one. Now we shall be very happy."

"By Jove!" said I, completely staggered by these revelations.

"I have thought it over, Mr. Smart," she went on in a businesslike manner, "and I believe we will get along much better together if we stay apart."

Ambiguous remarks ordinarily reach my intelligence, but I was so stunned by preceding admissions that I could only gasp:

"Do you mean to say you've been subsisting all this time on my food?"

"Oh, dear me, no! How can you think that of me? Gretel merely cooks the food I buy. She keeps a distinct and separate account of everything, poor thing. I am sure you will not find anything wrong with your bills, Mr. Smart. But did you hear what I said a moment ago?"

"I'm quite sure that I did."

ONLY TRUE SOURCE OF LIFE ETERNAL

"Thou Hast the Words of Eternal Life."

Divine Method of Selecting the Church—Deep Spiritual Truths a Cause of Separation—How We Eat Our Lord's Flesh—The Class That Drink His Blood — Our Lord's Life Laid Down at Calvary —The Merit of His Sacrifice to Be Given to the World Soon.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publiction.]

Sept 12.—Speaking at Hershey, Pa., before the I. B. S. A. Convention in session at Hershey Park, Pastor Russell delivered an able discourse to-day, from the text, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." (John 6:68.) He said:

The most of us probably remember the connection of our text. Jesus had been stating a very deep truth; and many of those who had followed Him seemed unable to comprehend it or receive it. We read that they were perplexed, offended, and walked no more with Him. Then Jesus said to The Twelve, "Will ye also go away?" Simon Peter, speaking for The Twelve, said, "To whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

It would seem as though God has put His Message in such a way that whoever accepts it and becomes a follower of the Lord Jesus Christ has at any time the opportunity of withdrawing. In the various churches, sects, and systems, there is a kind of bondage, as there is to some extent in certain secret orders—a sort of obligation from which one cannot easily get away after having entered it. But no one is under obligation to remain a Christian; and should one desire to withdraw, the Lord would not hold him back. Apparently there is much misunderstanding of the Lord's method. We find some of God's dear people, contrary to the Scriptures, urging and threatening people, trying to drive them to the Lord. But we never heard of Jesus doing this, or His Apostles.

To some the Gospel is an attractive Message; to others it has no attraction. Some are drawn just as a piece of steel is drawn by a magnet. Others have "hated Him without a cause." To some the Lord's Message is a savor of life unto life. It has a sweet odor; it tells them about the everlasting life which God has provided. To others it is a savor of death unto death. They do not care for it. This same thought is brought out in Daniel's interpretation of King Nebuchadnezzar's dream. The Stone cut out of the mountain without hands represented the true Church. All followers of Christ are fragments of that Stone. It is being made up from all nations and denominations.—Daniel 2:36-45.

The Stone Cut Out "Without Hands."

For nearly nineteen centuries God has been gathering this Church, which altogether is only a "little flock." (Luke 12:32.) With the close of this Age these faithful ones shall be made joint-heirs with Jesus, shall be the Kingdom class, shall be His Bride, shall be on the spirit plane, and with Jesus shall be given great power for the blessing of all the families of the earth, bringing mankind back to perfection and to a world wide Eden.

But this class, this Stone, is taken out of the mountain without hands. In symbolic language a hand means power. "Without hands" means that God did not exercise force to take the Church out. Yet, the Apostle says, "We are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works." (Ephesians 2:10.) God works in this class by His promises. As St. Peter says, "God hath given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these we might become partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4.) Not by pushing, not by thunderings or imprecations, but by these promises does God work in us. He does not pull; He does not push. He merely draws us, as the magnet draws the piece of steel.

The Class Now Sought.

When Jesus gave that dark saying which offended some of His followers, He knew what effect it would have. He knew that some would not be able to appreciate what He was saying. This was equivalent to inviting them to leave. It is the Father's will to separate every individual from that elect class that can be separated. He wishes to put away any not of the right character, so that all who remain will be of the right sort. In every Christian's life there have been opportunities to take an easier way. If any are merely seeking easy paths, and rejecting the paths which the Lord has marked out, then He wishes all such to take that easier path.

In the Dark Ages, when eternal torment was invented, people got to thinking that God would do nothing to hinder anybody, lest that one fall into eternal torment. But no one was ever in danger of eternal torment. The class that fall away merely fail to measure up to their privileges. So the Great Company, the antitypical Levites, have had the privilege of being Priests. They all made consecration. They all belong to the class "passed over" during this Age. They had the privilege of becoming members of the Royal Priesthood, but they have not sufficiently valued the honors held out to them, of spending all of life's energies in the service of the King of kings; and He lets them take their course. He seeks those who delight to do His will, not those who must be compelled to do so.

During the Millennial Age, all will be compelled to do God's will or be destroyed; but even though for a while they must do that will under compulsion, yet they will be expected to learn to love that will when they perceive its desirability. At the conclusion of that Age any human being who has not a love of righteousness and a hatred of iniquity, a sympathy for the things which are good, will not be counted worthy of eternal life. Such will have no life beyond the Millennial reign of Christ.

At the time of our Lord's consecration, He came voluntarily to do the Father's will, although that will was more or less hidden. Jesus did not understand it fully as His consecration; but His thought was that, what ever it should be, it would be His will. So it is with His followers. At the time that you gave yourself up to be a child of God and a joint-heir with Jesus Christ our Lord, you agreed to do whatever God's providence might mark out for you. There is a great deal in having that fact in mind; for the changing affairs of life are bound to test us. The Lord is gathering a people who not only make a covenant at the beginning, but keep that covenant. If they cannot do it fully according to the flesh, they will at least do it in the spirit of their minds. If there be fleshly weaknesses which they cannot wholly overcome, the Lord makes provision for these. He looks at the heart, the New Creature.

The Hard Saying—Who Can Hear It?

The dark clause which the disciples did not understand was, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood, ye have no life in you." These were mysterious words. They said "How can this man give us His flesh to eat? This is a hard saying. Who can understand it?" It requires the Holy Spirit to understand these words. Even The Twelve could not understand such deep things of the Spirit until after Pentecost; then they began to understand. But they knew that they were expected to hold on even when they did not comprehend. (John 14:16.) So it is with us. God expects us to hold on to certain parts of His Word when we do not understand. We know about our Saviour and the great Divine Plan. It is the most wonderful thing in the world; and if there are a few texts that we do not understand, it will still be our duty and privilege to remain loyal.

We are helped when we see that there is One who will teach us and that we are to receive as we are able. Thank God for the assurance that He is keeping close watch-care over us! We are glad to have a Teacher who is so considerate of us. We are glad to know that He has this arrangement by which our minds open more and more to see greater lengths, breadths, heights and depths of the Love of God. These "dark sayings" are stumbling blocks still to many.

Eating the Flesh of the Son of Man.

It is just as true to-day as when Jesus said it, that unless we eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man we have no life in us. The eating of His flesh signifies the appropriating of the merit of His flesh. Mentally we appropriate the merit of His flesh, His human nature, which He sacrificed for Adam and all of Adam's family. Adam's life was forfeited; his future life was forfeited. All the children of Adam thus lost their rights to the earthly life. Jesus laid down His flesh for the whole world, that all the Adamic race might have the right to this earthly life. Jesus' new life is not earthly, not fleshly; He has a spiritual body now. Therefore He has this fleshly life to give to the world—to Adam and all his children. Our Lord never forfeited His life; He was not a sinner. He still has the right to a human life and organism. But now He is glorified on the Divine plane, and He will give away the merit of His human life. He has not yet done so.

The Bible tells us that he will give the merit of His human life to Adam and his race at the end of this present Age. When the Church shall be glorified, Jesus will pray the Father on behalf of the world. (John 17:9; Psa. 2:8.) God having these two parts in His Plan, Christ has already secured blessings for the Church, and during His Second Presence He will do His work for the recovery of the world. As He said, "My flesh I will give for the life of the world." He will give it to the Father; for it was the Father who was the great Judge, and who, dealing with Adam, condemned him to death—"Dying, thou shalt die." Unless a provision would be made that a perfect human being would take the place of the fallen human being, Adam, there would be no opportunity for a future life for either Adam or his race.

This is what Jesus has done; He has given His life for Adam's life, His human nature for Adam's human nature. Over eighteen centuries ago Jesus laid down His life, but did not give it. He still has the right to it; but He is to give it up forever, as the offset for Adam. Then Jehovah will turn over Adam and all his race to Jesus, who will then take His great power and reign. Then He will have the right to bless the world. Why is not the world turned over now? How inappropriate it would be if Jesus should give the purchase-price for the world, have them turned over to Him, and then do nothing for them! But the world will not be purchased until after the Church is glorified with the Lord, after He has added the Church to Himself.

In one picture the Church is counted as members of Christ's Body; in another, He is the Bridegroom and the Church the Bride. The marriage of the Lamb comes, after which He enters upon His glorious work for the world. All the accounts on the books of Justice against Adam and his race will be cancelled; and the great work will begin of blessing the world of mankind. During that time Jesus will be giving them His flesh to eat, the merits of His sacrifice, that they may take on all those perfect human qualities which He laid down, sacrificed, for them. They will eat His flesh throughout the Millennial Age.

Drinking the Blood of the Son of Man

Having seen what the world is to get, let us see what the Church will receive. To the Church Jesus said, "Except ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man, ye have no life in you." The Church is not only to eat the flesh, but also to drink the blood, of the Son of Man. We do not eat the flesh in the same way that the world does. Those blessings that are coming to the world by and by, we appropriate now by faith. We accept the Call of this Age, to be the followers of Jesus our Saviour, to sacrifice our earthly life as He sacrificed His earthly life. It is an invitation to leave the world and its ambitions, hopes, and relationships, and become New Creatures in Christ Jesus, to be begotten to the spirit nature, and finally to be born of the Spirit—higher than angels, principalities, powers, and every name save the Jesus and the Father. This is the invitation, and we have accepted it.

We are to do as Jesus did. But first His merit is imputed to us. To impute is to reckon. There is a difference between reckoning and giving. He is actually to give these blessings to the world during the Millennium. Mankind will be getting more health, more power, more moral energy; they will get back actually what they lost. To the Church these things are imputed or counted, by faith. To illustrate: If you had not chosen this High Calling, you would have had the right to the earthly restitution provided for all mankind. But in this arrangement of this present Age the Lord imputes to you whatever you lack of perfection. This means that to whoever has only twenty-five per cent. of perfection of character, Jesus will impute seventy-five per cent., etc. Instead of actually giving you what you lack, lifting you up to perfection, He imputes it to you.

Thus the Church are feeding upon

His flesh. We realize that God is giving us now, in this imputation, a great blessing in the forgiveness of our sins, a compensation for all our weaknesses. But this would only make us on a parity with the world in the Age to come. We are to do more. It is for the Church to drink His blood; it is for us to give up our life with His life. The world will not make a sacrifice of their earthly life But we who become joint-sacrificers with Jesus sacrifice our earthly lives —the blood, in the figure. We give up all our rights to earthly life and nature, even as our Lord gave up His earthly rights And as the Father gave Him the higher life, so He has promised to give us that life if we will do the same.

That is our Covenant, the agreement to drink of His blood, to share with Him in His sufferings and death. That is the special Covenant that brings us now into the family of God. It was Jesus' cup, because for Him primarily the Father poured it. He drank of it gladly, in full submission to the Father's will. We have heard that we have the privilege of coming in with Him and laying down our lives; and here we are. We have laid our all at the Lord's feet, that He might give us the new life, the new nature, the spiritual life, the Divine nature, far above angels, principalities and powers.

Christ's Members to Have Immortality.

At the beginning of your Christian experience, you did not understand all about this, any more than did the twelve Apostles and those others. But now we see that we cannot get eternal life except we eat Jesus' flesh and drink His blood. This means something more than merely everlasting life. Adam had life, but not "life in himself," inherent life. He did not have immortality. The angels have not life in themselves; God makes provision for their necessities. And so He will provide for the necessities of the whole human family. When Adam was perfect, God made provision for his maintenance.

"As the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." (John 5:26.) He is to give it to His Body members. Great as will be the privileges and honors of the angels and great as will be the blessings of perfected mankind, yet to the Church of God, because they have eaten the flesh and drunk the blood of the Son of Man, will be the superlative glory and honor—immortality, the sharing of the Divine nature.

Nevertheless, the conditions imposed upon those who would make sure their calling and election to this exalted position are exacting, though a "reasonable service." They shall share in their Redeemer's exaltation if they share His ignominy by walking in His steps—following His example in this present time when evil is permitted to triumph. The Master was despised and rejected of men, and finally was crucified by those who professed to love and follow righteousness. Similarly, throughout the Gospel Age whoever has faithfully performed his Covenant of Sacrifice has speedily known something of the sufferings of Christ.—Colossians 1:24; Romans 8:17; 2 Timothy 2:11, 12.

Blood Thin and Weak Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend an excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating mediences which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own cases. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Intricate Business of Feeding Huge British Army

LONDON, Sept 11 The feeding of our armies is an even bigger and more complex business than the feeding of Jack Tar.

The war office never anticipated that it would be called upon to feed such immense armies as it now has to do. The existing arrangements for the feeding of the army when the war broke out, however, sufficed to meet immediate needs, but arrangements were promptly entered into and got into working order with marvellous rapidity for the feeding of immense armies.

Sir Reivers Buller is reported to have said that the feeding of an army exceeding a million of men presented appalling if not unsurmountable, difficulties. But these difficulties have been satisfactorily tackled. There is not a British soldier at home or abroad who has ever had to go a day without three substantial meals, except when actually fighting in the trenches.

Everything Contracted For.

The work of feeding Tommy Atkins is performed chiefly by contract. Separate contracts are entered into for the supply of all the regulation articles of diet to each military centre at so much per head. Under this sort of contract the contractor has to supply everything from, say, cocoa to potatoes.

Now, let us take a military centre where, say, 10,000 troops are stationed. The contractor has to make daily deliveries of meat and vegetables and other articles of food for immediate consumption, and weekly, or possibly, monthly, deliveries of other articles, such as tea, sugar, etc.

The contractors for our army in France deliver the goods to the quartermaster-general at headquarters from whence it is distributed to the different units. Not a day or night passes without ships, containing hundreds of tons of food for our soldiers, crossing the Channel, and day and night tons of food are being distributed to the troops at home by rail and motor-wagons.

But the collection and distribution of these immense quantities of food were not the only difficulties in the way of feeding the new armies. The food—or a good deal of it, at any rate—has to be cooked, and the finding of a sufficient number of cooks presented a gigantic problem.

Many thousands of cooks would be required as the armies grew. Clearly it was impossible to get them from the civil population; but it was possible to make them, and by November last at least 10,000 cooks had been trained under the direction of the army cooks at different military centres. What the number of army cooks is at present it is, of course, impossible to say, but it certainly exceeds 25,000. At a military centre where there are, say, 10,000 troops, 100 cooks would be employed, and another 100 general assistants would help in preparing the daily meals of the troops.

In the early days of the war, when the new armies were rapidly growing, and there was a partial shortage of cooks, Tommy would often cheerfully undertake to supplement the work of the cooks' department by his own untutored efforts, and some invented dishes that have since obtained a wide popularity in the armies.

At a camp in one part of the country, where there were 4,000 soldiers and not more than three or four cooks, the meals were prepared by a battalion of amateur chefs for some time. Among these was a genius who invented a remarkable dish in which cheese and bacon formed the main ingredients.

What Was it Made Of?

This appetising dish is now known in the army as "Polly," the nickname by which the inventor was known in his company.

All the culinary inventions of Tommy as chef did not, however, meet with success or popularity.

A story is told of a corporal who, left to his own devices in a camp kitchen, prepared for his company, a dish that met with a very bad reception indeed. By unanimous consent the company decided that the corporal should be compelled to eat the whole of the compound which he had prepared to satisfy the appetites of 120 men.

The corporal under compulsion swallowed about ten mouthfuls of the mess, and then was mercifully allowed to retire to his tent. The dish consisted, so the corporal afterwards declared of nothing but treacle, bread dripping, and flour, but the general opinion, supported almost by incontestable evidence, was that the corporal had inadvertently flavoured the dish with a powder intended for polishing bayonets.

Tea Bread and butter and jam, tea.

The food is plain and wholesome, and there is plenty of it. Indeed, there is rather too much, for it is undeniable that there is waste, often considerable waste, and immense quantities of food are thrown away or destroyed. But there are some difficulties in avoiding this waste.

For example, a contractor may under his contract have to deliver daily supplies to a camp or military centre for 15,000 men. Perhaps 10,000 of the men may be suddenly ordered away at a few hours' notice, and it takes at least a day to alter the existing contract arrangement. There are many such circumstances where it is difficult to avoid such supplies and consequent waste, at any rate, under existing arrangements, which certainly are in need of alteration.

They Get An Over-Dose.

Large consignments of delicacies and dainties are sent to the front for Tommy by various people and organizations at home, but the same attention cannot, of course, be paid to the delivery of these gifts as is given to the delivery of the regular supplies. The deliveries of these gifts are therefore attended with some uncertainty.

To a battalion of a certain regiment employed on the lines of communication there was delivered not long since some eight hundred cases containing several tons of Turkish delight. The men revelled in this delicacy until they became so sick of it that it was dangerous even to mention the words "Turkish delight" in the presence of anyone of the battalion.

Why all these cases of the delicacy were delivered to the battalion in question is one of many similar mysteries of the war. The reason probably was that when the very busy department concerned with the delivery of such gifts to the troops came across these cases, it saved time and trouble to send them all on to one battalion, and which one it was sent to did not matter.

Another battalion in much the same way, received a gift of twenty-five thousand chickens, and you could not have got a man in it to touch a chicken cooked in any way at all for a ten-pound note for some time afterwards.

Helping Another Industry.

But of course the greater part of the food delicacies sent to the troops at the front are properly distributed and are greatly appreciated by the soldiers, especially those who have been in the trenches, where the fare is of necessity almost the same every day.

The feeding of the armies has, it may be mentioned, made the packing case industry busier than it has probably ever been. A quarter of a million packing cases, of varying sizes, are used every week in delivering the food supplies to the army. The firms making these cases are working night and day, and there isn't an unemployed man in the industry anywhere.

The numbers of men directly engaged in the business of supplying the armies with food probably exceeds 150,000. One firm of contractors employs 20,000 men in packing and delivering goods for the army.

Then, apart from the enormous number of men employed in this way, there is an army of cooks and assistants both at home and in France. When we bear in mind the fact that thirteen months ago there was no thought of our ever having to support and maintain an army in the field of perhaps more than 250,000 men, one may appreciate the extent of the difficulties encountered in bringing into existence in a few months the machinery by which millions of men had to be fed.

Crisco and Butter

Housewives who have always used butter in the making of "special" cakes and other cookery, often have doubts about using Crisco in its place. They feel that there can be nothing so rich and wholesome as butter.

And that is true of practically every other cooking fat, except

CRISCO
For Frying For Shortening For Cake Making

It is easy to make a test yourself to show that Crisco makes cake just as rich, just as nutritious and just as appetizing as the best of creamery butter.

Make one cake with butter, and another with Crisco. Put them before your family without telling them which is which. Ask them to distinguish.

You will find that they cannot pick out the butter cake—more than likely they will point to the Crisco cake and say "that is the one made with butter".

GOODYEAR
MADE IN CANADA
Fortified Tires
No-Rim-Cut Tires "On-Air" Cured
With All-Weather Treads or Smooth

The Royal Road
Begins When You Ride on GOODYEAR TIRES

Learn what it means to be fortified against tire trouble. Give yourself this priceless peace of mind just once and you'll not go back to lesser tires. Mishap and misuse may lead to trouble even in Goodyears. But that is rare, because these tires are fortified against it by five built-in defenses.

These are exclusive Goodyear features that come in no other tire made. Yet today our prices are 37 per cent less than two years ago. Fast-growing output materially reduced factory cost per tire.

How to Make Sure

It's not what we say that counts, but what Goodyear Tires do. So our plea is for you to judge by running a Goodyear Tire and any rival tire on opposite wheels.

Thousands of motorists have made this test. And they found that tires priced less proved that they cost more per mile than Goodyears. That tires priced higher, on account of small output, are apt to collapse on the sides before tread is worn, due to improper design.

The Goodyear Tire is built with an extra strong "carcass" to support the double-thick All-Weather tread. So Goodyears, with proper inflation, "stand up" till the tread is worn out. That means that they carry you hundreds of extra miles.

Break With Habit

Cars and ideas have changed each year, remember, and Goodyears have kept pace. If you want most mileage for your money you'll break with old habit and give these new-day tires a trial.

Any dealer will furnish the Goodyear tire. Get our new price on the size you use.

Two Million Shells in Tremendous Duel

Sunday Was the 15th Day in Greatest Artillery Battle the World Has Ever Known---Enemy Repulsed With Severe Losses Near Souchez---Hand-Grenade Fighting Too.

Special Cable:

PARIS, Sept. 13.—(French Official Statement)—Two million shells have been hurled across the France-Flanders battle front in the greatest artillery battle the world has ever known, according to estimates made here to-day. The rain of shells continues with no indication of any let up. On Sunday the fifteenth day of the long-drawn-out bombardment the action was of extreme violence on nearly every sector of the battle front. French batteries poured a heavy fire in upon the German works in Loraine throughout yesterday wrecking the enemy's positions near Embermeil, Ileintrey and Oncorvillar. Near Aramancourt, Beuvraignes and on the plateaus of Nouvron and Quennerieres, the roar of guns continued throughout the day, the Germans replying energetically. Between Bethune and Arras there were hand grenade combats through last night. The British repulsed German attacks north of Souchez with severe losses for the enemy. This afternoon's statement reported mine combats along the Somme and near Paya.

GERMANY INTENDED TO PAY ONLY ITS REGRETS, NOT MONEY

Bernstorff Notified Secretary Lansing To-day of Modification of Arabic Understanding—May Lead to New Crisis

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Ambassador Bernstorff will carry a more disappointing message to the State Department to-day. It threatens to bring about a new crisis in German-American relations. We will tell Secretary of State Lansing that Germany did not intend to promise full satisfaction in the informal communication he presented a short time ago. Instead, the German Government, he will say, only mean to express full regrets at the loss of American lives aboard the Arabic. American lives may be endangered again by the sinking of British liners by German submarines. Ambassador Bernstorff will inform this Government, unless America induces the British Admiralty to withdraw its alleged order to merchantmen to ram submarines. The United Press learns this from sources that cannot be questioned. The only conclusion in official circles here on the German Government's attitude was that the Von Tirpitz party had gained the ascendency in Berlin and that previous conciliatory utterances by the Kaiser's Government to the Washington Administration had been modified to the extent to amounting also to repudiation. It was understood from official sources that the Washington Government's policy would still be to make every possible effort to avoid a break. Nevertheless, it was concluded that the situation threatened to become very serious.

CRISIS AVERTED AT WASHINGTON.

Bulletin 3:15 p.m.:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—After an half-hour conference with Ambassador Bernstorff to-day, Secretary of State Lansing said that an amicable understanding had been reached, and that matters are in Bernstorff's hands to be taken up with his Government. This is taken to mean that a crisis is averted for the present.

BERNSTORFF MEETS LANSING.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—German-American tension was expected to be largely smoothed out by an appointment which the German Ambassador had to-day with Secretary Lansing. Bernstorff was here on a two-fold mission, the development of the Arabic negotiations and explanations of his own and his military aide Captain Von Papen's connection with the James G. F. Archibald incident, because of wide discretionary powers given him to settle the submarine warfare issue. The presentation of new proposals was thought possible.

THE SANTANNA'S PASSENGERS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The "Santanna," afire in the Atlantic, carries seventeen first cabin, and forty second cabin passengers. Included among the latter were fourteen Italian and French nuns from Montreal, Canada.

RUSSIANS GETTING SECOND WIND.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Gen. Ruszky, commander of the Russian northern armies, in an interview with the Times correspondent attached to his headquarters, declared that he considered the capture of Petrograd impossible. Russia, in fact, has gained an opportunity to take breath, he said, and having continued the campaign through the winter, will begin war afresh in the spring with new armies and new objects of operations. A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Amsterdam says Emperor William has dismissed Gen. Von Gluege, commander of the 8th division, who was held responsible for the Austro-German check by the Russians on the Sedeth River in East Galicia.

MAY BE A BILLION DOLLAR LOAN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—With the arrival here of James J. Hill, railway financier, Anglo-French-American capitalists, with J. P. Morgan, began formal negotiations for the consummation of the biggest loan the world has ever seen, probably a billion dollars. Just what form the loan will take is unknown, but it is hinted that a syndicate of bankers, embracing every part of the United States, will underwrite the loan and offer it to the public at a rate of interest, probably five per cent. The notes would be secured by French, English and Russian government, and money will be devoted largely to buying munitions here.

WILL ARREST ARCHIBALD.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—It became known from an absolutely reliable source to-day that correspondent Archibald will be put under arrest by the United States Government upon his arrival in the United States.

CANADA'S MUNITION COMMITTEE.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—At a munition conference this morning the announcement was made that a committee of twenty under the chairmanship of Sir John Gibson, ex-Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, has been appointed to make a report which will deal with the ability of Canada to manufacture big guns and field ordinance of all descriptions.

FIFTH ZEPP. RAID LAST NIGHT.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Zeppelins raided the east coast Sunday night. The Press Bureau states that there were no casualties.

Bombs were dropped, but the only damage done was the breaking down of telegraph wires and smashing of window glass. This is the fifth Zeppelin raid on England since last Tuesday night.

ZEPPELINS MADE FRESH ATTEMPT SATURDAY NIGHT

Bombs Dropped on English East Coast But No Damage Was Done

COUNT ZEPPELIN, VISITOR

LONDON, Sept. 12. An official statement issued here to-day says that another raid by Zeppelins on the east coast was attempted last night. Bombs were dropped by the aerial visitors the statement says, but there were no casualties and no damage was caused.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Amsterdam says that some of the German newspapers say that Count Zeppelin personally directed the recent Zeppelin attack on London from the air-ship base at Emden, but others declare that he flew toward England with the airships.

An Amsterdam despatch says:

"The following statement was issued in Berlin to-day regarding last night's air raid on London:

The Archdeacon of London, preaching in St. Paul's Cathedral to-day, referred to the recent Zeppelin raid on London.

"I need not go farther back than last Wednesday," said the Archdeacon, "to tell you that battle has changed into murder. Speaking with all the restraint that is due from every preacher, as well as from the press and with the knowledge and consent of the censor, I tell you that to one hospital alone were taken the dead bodies of little children of 15, 10, 7 and 5 years, and of one little baby, so that the nursery became a slaughterhouse. Of the Imperial murderer who allowed it, if he did not order it, all we can say is in the words of the Psalmist, the most awful punishment given to a man 'will get before thee the things that thou hast done.'"

"Peg O'My Heart" At Grand To-night

Local Theatre-goers Will Be Struck With Handsome Appearance of the Theatre—A Good Attraction

To-night will see the opening for the season of The Grand Opera House with Oliver Morosco's famous play "Peg O' My Heart."

This delicate love story holds the tense attention of the audience from the moment the curtain is raised on the first act up to the finale. J. Hartley Manners has drawn his character true to life, while its amusing incidents intermingled in the plot is all that could be desired. This play will linger in the annals of stage history, and no one should miss this opportunity of seeing it.

Local theatre-goers will be struck with the pleasing appearance of the local theatre which during the closed season has been newly decorated all through and an entire new lighting system installed. The decorating of this large auditorium was no small task and a staff of decorators have been kept busy for more than seven weeks on the work.

Aiming Blow At Petrograd

Three German Armies Concentrating at Dvinsk—The Gateway to the Petrograd Road

BEFORE WINTER SETS IN

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13.—The Germans are now concentrating their efforts in a march against Dvinsk, the key-stone outer defence of Petrograd. Three armies are advancing upon Dvinsk, two moving in from the west, and the third fighting its way along the road from Vilkomir from the south west. The renewal of Teuton efforts to reach Petrograd before the winter now over-shadows interest in the campaign in the southeast where Von Ivanoff is making an effort to turn the Austrian flank. Heavy artillery is being hauled over the road to Viokokomire for the assault on the defence of Dvinsk.

Is Recognized in the Presentation of a Distinguished Conduct Medal to Sgt. Reuben Beavis, Son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beavis, 110 James Street

WAS BADLY WOUNDED

Sergt. Beavis, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Beavis, 110 James Street, East City, who enlisted at Montreal with the First Canadian Contingent, and who went to the front as a stretcher bearer, has been presented with a distinguished conduct medal for gallantry at the Battle of Givenchy. According to this morning's despatches, Sergt. Beavis is reported to have lost a leg and is partially blinded, but when an Examiner representative called at his home at noon to-day, his mother showed him a letter and three photographs of her son which she received by this morning's mail delivery. The pictures show no evidence of a missing limb.

Particulars of Wounds.

The letter was written from the Canadian Convalescent Home at Monks, Norton, Mar Hythe, Kent, England. Full particulars of his wounds were contained in the letter received to-day and are as follows:

Wounded at Festubert, May 25th, 1915.

Wounded at Givenchy, June 15th, 1915.

At the last named place he received a bayonet wound in side, bullet wounds in knee cap, also wounds above and below the knee cap and in skin of right leg, two wounds in the back of his head, one in the left arm, and two in the chest and others.

In his letter Sergt. Beavis also intimated that he had lost the sight of his right eye, but not the eye. He has hopes that he may yet regain the sight of it, as at the battle he was totally blinded, but has since regained the sight of one eye. The injury to his sight was due to gas.

Sergt. Beavis' many friends will be glad to hear that he is doing nicely towards recovery and that his gallantry has been suitably recognized. He will likely return to Peterborough at an early date.

SERGT. REUBEN BEAVIS

Holiday For the School Children

Friday afternoon next will be a holiday for the Public school children of the city. This will give several thousand children an opportunity of attending the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition which promises to be one of the best in its history. Entries are coming in every day. Judging by the number that have received to date the total will equal, if not exceed, the maximum of previous years. Included in the regular list is a number of special prizes that will doubtless invite keen competition. The special attractions are ahead of anything previously attempted. The Fair will open on Thursday and conclude on Saturday.

Dr. Garnet Greer's Letter From Front

Pays Tribute to Gallantry of Capt. Chas. Ackerman and Mentions Dick Jones—Interesting References to Medical Work He is Experiencing.

ONLY TWO OFFICERS NOT HIT

Dr. T. N. Greer, Aylmer street, has received a very interesting letter from his son, Capt. Garnet Greer, V.M.C., who is stationed at No. 2 General Hospital, Canadian, Le Treport, France. The following are extracts from the same:

Dear Father, I hope by this time you have received at least one of the numerous letters I have sent home. In this letter I shall try and give you an idea of my work since I was taken away from the battalion after the Festubert go. As regards the work before and on that occasion I cannot tell you until I get home. We had no real part at Festubert as a battalion, merely the privilege of lying back and cheerfully taking the shelling that came. That is up till the afternoon of May 22nd, just exactly nine months from the time I took over the 2nd Battalion and what a sorry mess has been made of it.

Capt. Ackerman's Gallantry.

Only two officers of the line of the originals who have not been hit. Poor Charlie was cracked shortly after I left and has had a mighty close run for it. He will be in Canada very shortly now, to stay I hope. He certainly has done his bit. Ever since we came to France, Charlie has been in the foreground and has done some mighty good work reconnoitering, etc. Any dangerous job Charlie was first to volunteer every time. He is certainly deserving of a decoration, but in the distribution of these honours many a hero is overlooked. Then poor old Dick Jones, or rather lucky Dick I should call him, will be in Canada shortly and I wish you would have them both down at the lake for a while as the air there is ideal for convalescent purposes. Dick had one of the enteric group (paratyphoid infection). We have no real typhoid fever here, at least I have seen no cases, and the primary picture in these cases, all of which have been inoculated, is most indefinite, and the blood culture is the one safe bet on which we rely. I have been on medicine here since the 8th of July and at present have four ward- and a half under my care.

Some Interesting Cases.

There are from twenty to twenty-two beds in each ward, so you can see that my time is rather well occupied. The clerical work (records, etc.), in connection with each case is enormous, regards [illegible] of the severity of the infection, but our system is being thorough and as far as this hospital at least is concerned will give no trouble in the days after the war when records are all important. I have had some very interesting cases of malaria (true types), in which we have been able to obtain some very good smears. Then our [illegible] cases are very interesting, and we have had wonderful [illegible] with them. Rheumatism, pneumonia, pleurisy and cardiac cases [illegible] next. Some of the heart cases will bear writing up and already I have some interesting records. I must not forget the nervous cases, of which we get a goodly number, and these are the cases, for some [illegible] in abnormal mental conditions, which, will very probably be permanent. By one who has been through the hell of shell fire for nearly four months, it is easily understood and we who have come out of the jaws of hell are very appreciative of the fact and handle the cases accordingly. We have here Major Keenan of the Fife, Major MacKenzie of the 48th Highlanders, Capt. Gillies of the 15th Canadian Scottish, Capt. Rogers of the V.S.C. and myself. All the original medical officers of the division, with one exception, are at different hospitals, some at Le Touquet and the rest at Etaples. Since July 8th I have discharged 97 cases, either to C. [illegible], Blighty or B. [illegible], base (permanent or temporary, or A. [illegible] directly back to duty. The boys all say they can tell at once the M. O.'s who have been through the mill as they treat them or rather approach them in a way that only first knowledge can develop. I know that I can't do half enough for the boys from the line. I have seen them come and go, and have worked with them, under what might be called

NEIGHBOURS FOUND HER DEAD IN BED

Mrs. Jonathan Green, Albert Street, Had Apparently Passed Away on Saturday Night

WAS LIVING ALONE

When neighbours forced an entrance on Sunday evening into the weather-worn cottage on Albert street in which Mrs. Jonathan Green has resided for many years they found her dead in bed. Apparently she had passed away after retiring, on Saturday night, and it was stated that her death was due to old age. Mrs. Green had worked for years as a charwoman and had returned home as usual on Saturday evening. About 6.30 p.m. on Sunday, a neighbour visited the house, and on receiving no answer, called a nearby resident and together they opened an entrance. Her only companions, a dog and a cat displayed a selfish welcome.

Mrs. Green was born in Cavan Township, about eighty years ago, according to an estimate of one of her friends, her first husband being the late Abraham Wilkinson. Mr. Green predeceased her a few years ago.

DUMB SOLDIER RECOVERS SPEECH BY SIMPLE MEANS

LONDON, Sept. 13. An extraordinary case of recovery of speech after dumbness following a wound received in battle is reported from Exeter.

Harry Russell, a driver in the Royal Field Artillery who went through the South African War, in August went to France with the British Expeditionary Force and was wounded by shrapnel at La Bassee last October. He lost his speech and was treated for five weeks at a French hospital. Then he was transferred to Edinburgh, where he came under the most skilled treatment until a few night ago. He returned to Exeter practically dumb.

Last Tuesday one soldier casually met Mr. Reginald Roberts, a local tradesman. Mr. Roberts an old volunteer, but possessing no surgical or even first-aid knowledge started trying to make Russell form words with his lips and tongue, and varied these exercises by rubbing the muscles of his throat and manipulating his tongue with his finger and a spoon.

After persevering for three days, Russell found he could articulate slightly, and shortly afterwards began to speak. He now can, after having been ten months dumb, speak and sing. The happy man burst into tears when he realized what had happened, for he had given up hope of recovery. The first thing he did was to go down on his knees and thank God.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THE REAL TEST.

The Town Council of Cobourg "turned down" an application for aid to the regimental fund of the 59th Battalion, by use of the excuse that it was a Peterborough organization, and Peterborough should do the contributing. Yet Cobourg is not averse to claiming credit for supplying a large, if not chief, number of recruits. Our lakeside neighbours do not mind enthusiasm that doesn't cost anything, but prudently takes cover, when the real test, the acid test of cash contribution, comes.

CANADA'S CANALS AND CREDIT.

The Examiner has often called attention to the fact that in the matter of great public works for, especially, transportation services, Canada in proportion to her population and financial resources, and for the brief time of her settled national existence, has done more than any other country. Her three great transcontinental railway systems, and one of them, the best constructed railway of its length in the world, and her splendid system of canals, are testimony to, or, rather, evidence of, the truth of this statemnet; and this evidence will be strengthened with the completion of the new Welland Canal.

Chief Engineer Weller, is authority for the statement that the new Welland Canal, now in course of construction, from an engineering point of view, rivals the great Panama Canal, of which so much has been heard during the past few years. Those familiar with the geography of the Niagara Peninsula, and with some knowledge of the magnitude of the new work, will readily credit the Chief Engineer's assertion. But in another regard the Welland Canal is deserving of precedence.

Though in cost the Panama Canal is greatly superior to that of the Welland Canal, the results in proportion to the cost are far more important in regard to the Welland Canal. Though the traffic upon the great isthmian canal has not, perhaps, had time to develop fully, yet a traffic comparison is fair; and the disparity in traffic results is so great that even with fuller development of traffic the Panama Canal is not likely to gain a lead. For six months of operation of the Canama Canal, the number of vessels passing through it amounts to 4%. In the corresponding period the number of vessels passing through the Welland Canal was seven times greater—3,314. Of course the vessels are smaller, but a comparison of tonnage carried shows that that of the Welland is fifty per cent. greater — Welland, 3,484,327 tons; Panama, 2,367,244.

And the tonnage through the Welland Canal will greatly increase. Not only have reconstruceion operations lessened traffic, but when the canal is completed, with increased cargo tonnage of the greatest lake freighters, which the new canal will accommodate, the traffic will proportionately increase in bulk. Besides the greater production development of the West will help. When this year's 545 millions of grain production will have doubled, which it will do, in the course of a few years, the doubled traffic resulting will greatly count, and will, with the completion of the Trent Canal, be a great factor in promoting increased grain production in the West. As a trade and transportation medium, the Welland Canal has the Panama largely outclassed. The latter has the advantage of the traffic conditions at their best, while those of the Welland, or our other canals, is only in the infancy of development.

The new Welland Canal, in its actual trade and commercial importance, is a monument to Canadian enterprise, and engineering skill, and the fact that it will have been completed during the greatest and most disturbing and unsettling war in the world's history, will emphasize the enterprise of Canada, and advertise our country and its resources, as the war has brought Canada into prominence and raised her high in the world's opinion and praise by the gallant work of her gallant soldiers. Whether she fights, or digs, or lays railway tracks, or grows wheat, Canada's credit is quoted at a premium in the world's market of appraisal.

CANADA'S MESSAGE AND ITS FULFILMENT.

Speaking after Mr. Balfour, at the Opera House in London, during his recent visit, Sir Robert Borden clased a splendid address with the following words:

And more than that, we shall so bear ourselves in this war and in the mighty events to which it must lead, that whether in these islands or in the Overseats Dominions citizenship of this Empire shall be a still greater and more noble possession in the years to come than it has been even in the glorious past. (Loud cheers.) I have spoken to you frankly on some matters of great moment. If I had not done so I should have been unworthy of my position, and now before I close let me bring to you this latest message from Canada:—

For those who have fallen in this struggle we shall not cease to mourn; for the cause to which they have consecrated their lives we shall not cease to strive. We are supremely confident that the cause will assuredly triumph and for that great purpose we are inspired with the inflexible determination to do our part. (Cheers.)

These words have the right ring; they nobly interpret to Britain and the world the mind and heart of Canada. Sir Robert has done well to commit Canada to a whole-hearted interest and undivided action in promoting the cause to which our King and country, and Empire call us. Canada will respond and nothing should be permitted to pass between our sense of duty and its adequate fulfilment. We must be united and, as we now are, must stay united. Sir Robert Borden has done well in voicing the heart of Canada, and the "latest message from Canada," will have its full import and promise, more fully and more speedily realized, if he will guarantee that Canada shall not halt in the march of her progress, and have the national attention and national activities diverted by the harmful interposition of a war-time election. With recruiting not as prompt as could be wished, we shall not any too easily be able to do our full duty. This indicates that not a single straw should be laid in the pathway of duty.

REMEMBER THE FIGHTING LADS.

A letter received from a soldier at the front, thus modestly states, the welcome nature of letters from home:

"I would be pleased to hear from you or any of the boys, whenever you have a chance to write. Letters are very acceptable here."

We should all of us remember this and conclude that, if letters as mere vehicles of sentiment and news are welcomed by our soldiers in the battle line, much more welcome would be substantial little gifts. These would not only serve the purpose of letters as tokens of remembrances from home, but would be substantial reminders. We should remember that in addition to risking life and limb in our behalf, the soldiers from home are making other sacrifices. When any of us yesterday sat down to a luncheon of, say, broiled chicken, and other accessories, including peaches and cream, did we think how good these would taste to the soldiers, whose ordinary menu includes nothing more appetizing than "bully" beef and hard tack? And when we "topped off" our luncheon with a good cigar, or pipe, or cigarette, did we think of the boys at the front, deprived of such luxuries? If we didn't we were more selfish than we should have been. We can bring great happiness and comfort by strengthening the Overseas Tobacco Fund, or if our thoughtfulness should take a wider range, we might take advantage of the opportunity provided by the Red Cross people to send parcels to the boys, free of charge. This can be done in the case of parcels up to seven pounds in weight. Some little gift won't cost you much, but it will in one sense be worth its weight in gold to the Peterborough soldier lad who is fighting your battles—making the sacrifices, paying the price of what you gain the advantage of.

TRAITORS AND TRAITORS.

There are two kinds of traitors; one who directly intrigues with the enemy, or directly does things to the direct injury of the country or its cause. The other kind is he who takes advantage of the war situation to seek and obtain personal or financial or party advantage for himself. In this class are placed the Welsh coal mine owners. Here is what the London Star and Echo says of these public robbers and potential traitors:

The nation has no love for the coal-owners and all the middlemen who for nearly a year have been sucking us like leeches. It regards with sceptical scorn all their attempts to prove that nobody makes a bloated profit out of bloated prices. * * With regard to the trouble in South Wales the universal feeling is disgust. These coal-owners are past praying for. They cannot get on with the public, and they cannot get on with their men. They have bled the public We take our stand on the simple fact that the coal barons are public enemies, who have forfeited the confidence of the nation—the nation has a right to sweep them aside and defend itself against their greed. * * * The Government has taken over all the railways. Let the Government take over all the coal mines. The coal belongs to the nation.

Not only is this, assuming, as there is every reason for doing, that the above charges are correct, even in part, treason, but it is double treason, in that in addition to the direct crippling effect of extortionate prices at a time of crisis, it provokes another form of national disablement, or impairment of national efficiency. We have, and hear few, except hard words, for the miners who strike; but at the back of such an action, in excuse if not in justification of it, we have the provoking cause, the extortion of the mine-owners, who are in the circumstances double traitors. We are not free from a class of traitors at home, men who employ their mischievous political "pull" to gain personal profit, and the other kind of traitor who employs the same means to gain party advantage. The machine politicians, have brought disgrace on their own party and done discredit to Canada. It is due to their action that the country is put to great expense, and the machinery of government diverted from the legitimate work of promoting war waging, to investigate the plundering operations of these degenerate politicians. The Davidson Commission forced upon the government by the exploitation of political crooks, having completed its investigations into a war supply contract scandals, especially the horse-buying scandals is off to British Columbia to probe an alleged submarine purchase scandal. The fact that the operations of machine uoliticians have been exposed, is encouragement to the belief that they have been shut out of opportunity. The government by instituting through investigation has, very probably, and its hoped surely, removed the opportunity for the activity of these traitors.

WOULD SIR ROBERT DO IT?

Sir Wilfrid and Sir Robert on the same platform would do more to inspire the whole nation than a score of individual messages.—London Advertiser.

Sir Wilfrid is ready, we do not doubt. Only a few days ago he agreed to speak on the same platform as Sir George Foster. The Conservative statesman missed his train. But Sir Wilfrid was there. Months ago Sir Wilfrid Laurier offered the right hand of friendship to Sir Robert Borden, proclaiming himself ready to forget his politics till the war was over, if Sir Robert would do the same. That offer has not yet been accepted.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

NOT IN GOOD FAITH.

The so-called German peace terms which have been announced "not officially but authoritatively" in Washington cannot be taken seriously here or anywhere. They were not intended to be taken seriously. Their clumsily concealed purpose is to array the Jewish sentiment of the world on the side of Germany, presumably in the belief that rich and powerful Jewish banking houses will hereafter look with more favour upon German war loans. The American people have had too much experience with the wiles of professional politicians not to recognize a palpable political fake when it is paraded before them. These pretended peace proposals are so evidently a fake that they can deceive nobody. When Germany is ready to talk peace seriously, and to talk the kind of peace which will not only render justice to the wronged but which will guarantee to civilization some measure of protection against the Moloch of militarism, the Government and the people of the United States will immediately respond.—New York World.

A BRILLIANT AVIATOR.

The principal reason why France is one of the most beloved of countries is that she, as a nation, and her brilliant men, as individuals, have done so much for civilization and humanity. Among the great Frenchmen was Adolphe Pegoud, the aviator, who died a Frenchman's death the other day. Pegoud has done more than most men to bring flying into its present day efficiency. He was not only a daring aviator but a skillful, brilliant scientist. He was the first man to loop the loop and to drive his machine upside down. Because of his achievements, the aeroplane is more useful to the allies in the present fight for civilization than it otherwise would have been. Not only France but the civilized world owes his memory a debt of honour.—Ottawa Free Press.

Do United States People Appreciate Their Interest In Course of Outcome of War?

Quaintly humorous are always interesting is the summer column contributed to the London Daily News by S. L. Hughes, M. P. He gathers material from all over the world. Only a few days ago we find him quoting from the Ashland Times-Gazette's account of the festivities attendant upon the centenary of Ashland, Ohio. He notes, however, with some surprise that the paper in question contains no reference to the European war, and the same he finds to be true of The Norwood Republican, another small Ohio daily that in some way or another came into his possession.

We venture to think that a great many papers in the United States are studiously avoiding all reference to the tremendous conflict now going on in Europe. The big dailies of course report the progress of the war, and many comment upon it, but in many parts of the United States the war is seen viewed in the same detached way in which the people viewed the Russo-Japanese war. They knew it was going on and that was about all.

This may seem incredible to us who are so keenly interested, but letters received from intelligent people living nearly as close to us as Ashland Ohio, indicate that not much more attention is being paid to the present war in some quarters. No doubt the subject is often avoided in conversation as one likely to cause controversy in communities where there are many people of British and German descent.

That the people of the United States should be keenly interested in the result of the war The World has repeatedly pointed out. Their traditions and history should impel them to resent the raid upon Belgium, the invasion of France and the menace to free institutions everywhere, directly resulting from the Kaiser's mad ambition to conquer the world. Moreover, if Germany became the master of Europe the United States would have to fight, perhaps with no great success, not only for the Monroe Doctrine, but for her own existence. Nevertheless, it is well for those who criticise President Wilson harshly to remember that the public opinion behind him may not alone be that which we see reflected in nearly all the New York papers and in most of the big dailies throughout the country. A great number of his fellow-citizens are giving little thought to the war. Probably they take it for granted that the allies are bound to win, and that Germany will be so exhausted after the war as to guarantee to America peace for many years to come.

That Uncle Sam is sitting tight when he ought to be in the game may be due to cowardice on the part of some and to avarice on the part of others but also to ignorance and indifference on the part of many people who do not follow the history of the war and do not think or talk about it for days or weeks at a time. MIKE GIBBONS WON IN A TEN-ROUND CONTEST

St. Paul Boxer Was More Aggressive and Landed the More Blows—McFarland's Long Absence From the Ring Dulled His Speed and Power to Snap Punches to Vulnerable Points of His Opponent

Brighton Beach, N.Y., Sept 13. Before the largest crowd that ever witnessed a boxing match in this country, Mike Gibbons of St. Paul outpointed Packey McFarland of Chicago, in a ten-round no-decision contest here on Saturday night. The bout which brought together two of the cleverest boxers in the ring to-day was hard fought from start to finish but Gibbons scored the more frequent and more effective blows.

McFarland showed that his long absence from the ring had dulled his speed and power to snap punches to vulnerable points of his opponent's head and body. McFarland showed flashes of his old rapid fire left but the leads were little more than zings and did not check Gibbons in his aggressive attack. McFarland appeared nervous when he entered the ring and was not as finely conditioned as his opponent. The St. Paul phantom immediately took the aggressive and showed that he intended to make a fight for it instead of a sparring exhibition.

There was power behind almost every blow that he landed and he found little difficulty in beating the stock yards' boxer to the punch. For the first four rounds, Gibbons was always in the lead playing alternately for the head and body. In the fifth McFarland took the aggressive, and being thoroughly warmed up fought desperately to stem the tide of defeat. Gibbons met him half way however and the best the Chicago boxer could get was an even break in the round. Mike increased his speed in the sixth, and scored the majority of the effective blows. McFarland made a strong play for Gibbons' body but the latter covered so well that few of them reached their objective. Packey cut loose in the seventh and rained a shower of blows to Gibbons' face, one of which split the St. Paul boxer's left eyebrow.

McFarland tried to outslug his opponent in the next period but although the latter was beginning to weaken he staggered Packey with several blows to the head, and still maintained his lead.

McFarland came up with a smile in the eighth and fought with his old confidence. The long lead that Gibbons had gained in the earlier rounds however was too great to be overcome and the consensus of opinion was strongly in favour of the St. Paul boxer as the winner on points of the largest purse ever offered for so short and a decisionless bout.

SWANSTON WILL GET A TRY-OUT WITH SENATORS NEXT SPRING

Herb Shocker toyed with the Cuban Giants on Saturday afternoon, and Ottawa won easily by 5 to 1. In the last innings the Senators' outfield walked in while Shocker fanned the last man. Max Swanson, of the East City team, was given a further try-out and made a fine impression. He handled Shocker's speed in fine style. The local boy looked good in spite of the fact that he was utterly unfamiliar with the Ottawa pitcher, and probably had never before been behind such steam. Manager Shaughnessy was impressed with his work to the extent that Swanston will join the Senators' training camp next spring if the league opens as usual.

Score by innings:

Two-base hits Dolan, Payne. Sacrifice hits—Smykal, Malette. Stolen bases—Johnson, Payne. Double plays Smykal to Swanston, Brown to Malette. Struck out by Shocker 11, by Vallantine 5. Bases on balls—Off Vallantine 4, off Shocker 1. Left on bases—Giants 3, Ottawa 2. Umpire—Belting. Time 1.45.

TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS PROVE INCREASING POPULARITY OF GAME

Tennis, as it is played to-day, has found a new place in the field sports. It is no longer an afternoon-tea sport, says the New York Times, but is a fast gruelling game which requires all the vigor that can be put into it. Not long ago the champions were middle-aged men who played exclusively a "scientific" game. But in the recent championships at Forest Hills, N.Y., William H. Johnston, a 19-year-old boy, defeated Maurice McLoughlin, a man of 24; the older men had been eliminated several days before. The crowds and not the players, however, demonstrated the most important thing about tennis at the Forest Hills tournament. The stands were well filled every day, and for the two big contests they were packed. More than 7,000 persons witnessed these games, it was estimated. Only a few years ago the national championship tennis matches in this country were witnessed by only a handful of spectators. During the critical moments of this new, fast-moving game of the final two days at Forest Hills, moreover, the interest was so keen that the faces in the grand stands wore that tense expression that was so familiar at the Polo Grounds in former years when the Giants had a good chance to pull ahead in the ninth inning.

Both victor and vanquished were California players. This supremacy of the West is due in part to the favourable climate of the Pacific Coast's tennis champion producing State, which makes it possible for the players to improve their game by practice nearly every month in the year. But it is also due in no small degree to the fact that the game has been played more generally in the West than in the East. In the vicinity of Los Angeles a suburban home is not complete without its tennis court, and the city is fairly spotted with them.

DEFEAT FOR CAMPBELLFORD

The Eastern Players Suffer an Overwhelming Defeat at the Hands of Weston

The return match in the semi-finals of the intermediate O.A.A. was played off Saturday at Weston, between Weston and Campbellford and resulted in a defeat for the visitors by the score of 38 to 2. The game was one-sided from the outset and the play had not been in progress many minutes before the superiority of the local men showed against their opponents. Most of the play centred outside the Campbellford goal and their defence weakened by continuous assaults, gave way time after time. In the first quarter Weston piled up 8 goals, at half-time Campbellford was successful in securing a solitary goal, while Weston had added another six. At the three-quarters Weston secured another 11 goals and the score stood 25 2. The Campbellford players apparently lost heart and Weston piled up their remaining 13 scores in the last quarter. Fred Warbourne acted as referee.

With Campbellford now out of the running, the final rest with Weston and Orangeville. It is being endeavoured to have the first game played on September 22nd, at Orangeville, and the return game at Weston the week following.

Canadian Soldiers Won Baseball Game

LONDON, Eng., Sept 13.—The baseball match played at Lord's between the Canadian soldiers and London Americans, resulted in a win for the Canadians by 14 runs to 4.

The fixture was under the patronage of Princess Louise, in aid of the widows and orphans of Canadians fallen in the war.

ONE HONEST BALL PLAYER.

Wilson Rules Against Own Club for Three Runs.

"Speaking of umpires," said Hans Wagner recently, "I recollect a case which will prove that there are some ball players who will call them as they see them, too. We were playing the Philadelphia club and a ball was hit to right field by one of the Philadelphia batters. It looked like a foul and, as there were three men on the bases, the way I remember it, we put up an awful howl. The umpire insisted the ball was fair, and we strained strenuously that it was outside the foul line.

"Well, I'll leave it to your right fielder if the ball wasn't fair," said the umpire.

"You're on," we all yelled. We were confident it was foul and, anyhow, we thought Wilson, who was playing in the right garden for us, would see it that way—not dishonestly, you know, but a player almost always sees a thing the way he wants to see it and convinces himself he is right, too.

"The umpire walked out to Wilson and asked his honest opinion about the hit. "Fair" said our fielder, without any hesitation. And we all went back to our knitting and didn't question any decision during that game."

00 RIFLE BULLETS RETURN TO EARTH?

It is believed among the troops that bullets fired vertically upwards at aircraft never descend as bullets, the intense and prolonged friction of their flight to the limit of the trajectory and the subsequent descent of what is left of them completely dissipating them into vapour. Thousands of bullets have recently been fired at aircraft, but none have been positively known to descend.

Until the advent of aircraft just what happened to the bullets when fired perpendicularly into the air was a matter of purely academic interest; it has now become a question of vital practical importance.

Very few ballistic investigators have ever troubled to experiment with vertically fired bullets. The first man to do so was Benjamin Robins, the "father of the modern art of gunnery," who, in a book published in 1742, placed on record his experience in this direction with a smooth bore. As a matter of fact, Robins did not fire truly vertically, possibly because he was afraid that the returning bullets might cause him considerable personal inconvenience. Instead, he fired at an angle somewhat out of the perpendicular and to windward. He claims to have recovered the falling bullets, and as good as intimated that the distance which the bullets did fall out of the vertical was due entirely to the effect of the wind upon them.

Coming to more recent times, we have the experiments of Dr F. W. Mann, an American rifle enthusiast. Mann's leisure is spent entirely in rifle experimentation, and his book "The Bullet's Flight From Powder to Target," is devoted to an account of many years' labour in the field of small arm ballistics. The problem of the vertically fired bullet was tackled by Mann, but he soon gave up the experiment in disgust as being devoid of results. On a perfectly calm day he took a boat into the centre of a large lake, and fixing a rifle into a truly vertical position, he fired into the air hoping to be able to put on record the return of the bullets and the times taken in their flight. Although he fired several rounds of ammunition in this way he regretfully admitted that he was unable to either hear or see any of the returning bullets fall into the placid waters of the lake.

Among the English rifle investigators, L. R. Tippins of Manningtree, Essex, has also devoted some time to the problem. He was luckier in his results than Mann, and has actually observed the return to earth of the bullets. J. Herschel Hardcastle, who is amongst the foremost English rifle authorities, after several attempts, is also able to put on record the recovery of several bullets fired in the perpendicular position.

Speaking theoretically, a bullet fired from a smooth-bore gun held truly perpendicular and on a perfectly still day, should return to the point from which it left the earth. Indeed, the safest position for the firer to remain in is in all probability the firing point. The observations of Hardcastle and Tippins, who worked independently, tell us that the English service bullet takes somewhere about 55 seconds in its perpendicular flight in the air and return to the earth, and it reaches a height of between 8,000 and 9,000 feet. This is confirmed by calculations based on the resistance of the air and the force of gravity. The bullet starts off with a velocity of about 2500 feet per second, but it loses speed very considerably in the upper regions of the air, so much so that for about half the time of its entire flight the bullet is travelling at a velocity not much greater than that of a well hit golf ball.

Balloon observation, particularly those made at Lindenburg, show that in the upper atmosphere the wind may blow with a force three or four times that at which it blows in proximity to the earth. Again, it has been found time after time that on an apparently calm day the wind in the upper strata is blowing with considerable force. Here, then, we have an explanation of the soldiers' belief that the bullet never returns. When towards the higher part of its flight the bullet is progressing at a very small speed, and is, therefore, easily carried away by the force of even a light wind. That the bullet descends is, of course, unquestionable, and it does so with very little alteration to its initial shape and weight. Due to the spin given to it by the rifling, it in all probability returns as it ascended—that is, with its point uppermost. It returns, too, as a very practical missile, with a velocity of between 400 and 500 feet per second, capable of giving a knock-out blow to any combatant.

GOD SPEED.

A little word to pass the time of day,
A kindly friend to lend a helping hand,
A cheering word to speed along the way
Our lads who leave their fair Australian land

The girls we've loved, the little soft hands that pressed
And held us close against a breaking heart,
The good God only knows what then was felt,
Or why the cause that we from them should part

We've come forth to win perhaps to die
We've given our best, our life's red blood,
We've come away when hearts were breaking nigh,
For England's gain to stem the seething flood.

We only ask that God will be our guide,
That he will help and strengthen us all way
And speed the dawn that will bring a fairer day

Even before the war rush commenced the firm were employing 60,000 men at their main works at Essen, and thousands of others in their collieries, shipbuilding yards, and private testing ground. It is estimated that over 300,000 people depend on Krupps for their livelihood. At the Krupps' works 40,000 cannon are turned out every year.

ANOMALIES OF PRESENT WAR HAND BOMBS AND BODY ARMOUR

Contending Armies Literally Face Each Other at Distances Measured by Yards or Even Feet Instead of Miles

At the outbreak of the present war, many people of experience were convinced that fighting would be conducted at exceptionally long range, the armies being miles apart and hardly visible to each other, even in large bodies, by the naked eye alone. High power long range infantry rifles and ordinance of from five to fifteen miles range made it seem nearly certain that one army could not advance openly toward the other to any point within the range of fire. The great development of the aeroplane and other aircraft made surprise attacks, in force, next to impossible. So, altogether, it seemed certain that this war would be fought out at long range. But, one very important element entered into this war as it has entered no other war before, and completely reversed the situation. Instead of being fought at far greater range than any previous wars, it is to a very great extent being fought out at a far shorter range than any previous wars except those of decidedly ancient history. Before the war had been many weeks old the sappers developed their science to a point where it brought two contending armies literally face to face at distances measured by yards or even feet instead of miles. The science of trench digging has been developed to such an extent that each army worms its way through the ground toward the other, invisibly, until their foremost trenches parallel the enemy at only a few yards. When such points are reached, the men in the firing trench of each side resort to the only practicable kind of warfare the ancient and antiquated warfare of throwing bombs at one another by hand or by catapult, as circumstances require. A more deadly game, though of the same idea, as angry schoolboys "stoning" one another. Bomb throwers, of course, must be more exposed than other trench men, because they must see where to throw and must get sufficiently above surface to throw the bombs. To protect them in such exposed positions, ancient methods are again resorted to. They wear small rounded and tapered steel helmets, which will successfully turn tiny bullets, shrapnel balls, and shell fragments, which would mean certain death without them. They also wear large tempered and tapered steel breast and stomach plates, arranged and supported in much the same manner as an umpire's pad, only it stops rifle balls instead of base balls.

So, in the midst of the most modern and furious war ever known, we have the most ancient and antiquated form of fighting and defence—hand bombs and body armour.

LETTER FROM PTE. J. PACKHAM

Peterboro' Boy Refers to the Prospect of Another Winter in the Trenches

Under date of August 16th, James Packham, formerly of 491 Parnell street, this city, writes us follows from "Somewhere in France":

"Just a few lines thanking you for the parcel received yesterday. We have just come out of the trenches again. I don't think we will be out very long. There seems to be nothing but work. We will soon be facing another winter. At present we are enjoying warm weather, although it is not very warm in the trenches at night. I often think of my friends in Peterborough and wonder how they are getting along, and many times dream I am back in Canada. I wish these clouds would come true. I enclose the following verses:

Verses From the Trenches.

(Written and composed by Pte. James Packham.)

In the trenches I'm sitting, in a place open my own,
Thinking of the dear old friends, and the old folks at home,
How I long to return to civvy life once more,
Back to my home, to the place which I adore.

We stay in the trenches both day and night,
In front of us we have the Germans to fight
From one minute to another we do not know
When our lives we have got to let go.

There there is the roaring of guns,
Born from us and from the Huns,
With from the rifles, bullets they fly,
You can hear them as they whistle by.

We draw our rations every day,
They are not over great I must say,
They consist of bread, cheese and jam,
And now and again a piece of ham.

At night we keep a sharp lookout
For fear the Huns are creeping about,
They creep up to our trenches, and bomb us if they can,
But if we could only see them we might lend them a hand.

Now in the trenches it's rather a job to get a wash and shave,
Where we can get a bathe,
You bet we need a lot of scrubbing, for dirt on us is thick,
But if soap and water is plentiful we very soon do the trick.

Now as for sleeping in the trenches, we get very little,
For there's generally a little job to do, if it's only cook the kettle,
Here and there a man is posted, to keep on sentry go
In case anything should happen he'd soon let us know.

A few more time to spare, and feeling tired, too,
I think I'll finish these little verses which I'm sending you,
This war we wish was to an end, we don't care how soon it come,
So that we can all return to our dear old homes.

Van Horne Rose From the Ranks

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—Sir Wm. Van Horne died at 2.10 Saturday afternoon.

Sir William Van Horne was born at Joliet, Ill., on Feb. 3, 1843, and started his railway career as a telegraph operator in the employ of the Illinois Central, in 1857, with the Michigan Central in various capacities from 1858 to 1864; operator, ticket agent, despatcher, superintendent of telegraphs and divisional superintendent Chicago & Alton Railway, 1864 to 1872; general superintendent St. Louis and Kansas and Northern Railway, 1872-74; general manager Southern Minnesota Railway, 1874-78; president same railway, 1878; general superintendent Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, 1880-82; general manager Canadian Pacific Railway, 1882-84, and carried railway to completion; vice-president same railway, 1884-88; president, 1888-99; chairman board of directors, 1899-1910, when he retired, but remained a director.

Sir William was also identified with many leading Canadian and American industrial, financial and benevolent institutions.

He was also identified in the agricultural industry of the Dominion, having several model farms in Selkirk, Man., and elsewhere, for the raising of pure bred live stock.

He also enjoyed a wide celebrity as an art connoisseur particularly with respect to Japanese and Chin-

Europe Buying Crop of Raisins

New York, Sept. 13.—Coast advices reported that it was estimated England and Europe had bought at least 50 per cent. of the seedless raisin crop of California.

The failure of the allied fleet to open up the Dardanelles has resulted in the closing of all Turkish ports to foreign commerce and thus Great Britain and Continental Europe, which generally rely on Asia Minor for their raisin supplies, have been forced to turn to California to purchase stocks for the coming year.

It has been known for several weeks that Europe was buying heavily from Coast sources, but the fact that she had actually acquired more than one-half of the entire crop has not been realized before this. Several quarters yesterday believed that by the time the 1915 seedless crop had been disposed of, European houses would have secured the control of 60 or 70 per cent. of this season's yield.

ATTRACTIVE OPTICAL WINDOW DISPLAY

The show window of the Peterborough Optical Parlours (formerly Tait's), are attracting unusual attention by the exhibition of new goods and novelties which are on display. The skilful arrangement of the window trim creates an intelligent interest in the field of optics. The allied goods and novelties shown are conspicuous and are an object lesson for the uninitiated in the varied contrivances for eye glasses, spectacles, and other aids to vision. A chain of lense crystal, cut to show the strength of the crystal, is quite pretty and ingenious. And the new devices for spectacle and eye glasses frames are worthy of inspection. The display is the work of Mr. W. H. Lacey, B.O., who recently took over the Tait Optical business, and gives evidence of his versatile handiwork.

A wireless invention has been perfected which enables lighthouses to send messages to ships which tell them the exact position of dangerous rocks and mined areas. By means of a radio-compass a ship's captain can ascertain the exact locality from which the warnings are sent, and thus he can shape his course to steer clear of the danger zones.

The Leaven of Christianity In the Present Time of War

Rev. Canon Davidson Reminded Congregation and Soldiers of the Call to Religion—Must Not Hate Our Enemies Nor Be Actuated By Revenge.

SUNDAY'S CHURCH PARADE

A most interesting military service was held at St. John's Church on Sunday morning, when the detachment of the 57th Battalion attended service in a body.

The detachment paraded at the Armouries, full strength, the only exceptions being officers and men on leave. Several of the 57th officers accompanied their overseas comrades. Rev. Canon Davidson, chaplain of the 57th, gave the men some instructions and a short preparatory drill in the Armouries, after which the detachment moved out, headed by their band and under the command of Major Hounsell. Quite a number of citizens were on the streets at that hour; the marching and deportment of the men was excellent. They wore khaki helmets loaned them by the 57th Regiment for the occasion. The band played stirring march music, and made a good impression. The middle aisles of the Church were reserved for the soldiers and a large general congregation was present.

Special Military Service.

The service was of a special military character and was warmly entered into by the soldiers, both the singing and responses being most hearty. The usual prayers were offered for the men at the front and for the sick and wounded.

In his preparatory greeting Chaplain Davidson spoke of the appropriateness of the 80th Battalion detachment, recalling the many soldier congregations which had formerly occupied the same pews on occasions of annual Church parades, and in the attendance at divine service of former detachments for overseas service. In their future mental pictures of their old home city, St. John's was bound to have a place; and this service would be an added memory.

Two Ringing Calls.

In a strongly worded address Canon Davidson referred to the fact that two lofty calls were ringing throughout the world today, the calls to patriotism and to religion. As the former had been strongly emphasized of late in the city and was being well answered by the people and most practically by the soldiers before him, there was no need, he said, on this occasion to further emphasize it. He had been lead to choose as a more needed subject, "Christianity in War Time," which he funded on Hebrews IV 14. "Let us hold fast our profession without wavering" words addressed to a people about to pass through a great national crisis similar to ours.

If our religion was to be maintained in war time it would involve the steady performance of religious duties which might seem dull and commonplace, but were of vital importance. It would also involve the taking of a distinctive line of Christian thought, words and conduct in regard to the war and to questions and circumstances connected with it. In the very face of the prevalence of hostile and revengeful feelings, and caught up by a patriotism which might be at times more heathen than Christian, it was for Christian men and women to stoutly maintain distinctive Christian ideas and ideals, which, in the end, would be found to be the foundations of the truest patriotism.

Must Not Hate Enemies.

Firstly, Canon Davidson laid down that we must not hate our enemies but treat them in a Christian fashion. British soldiers should fight as Christian gentlemen, men of honour, scorning to be cruel or to use uncivilized methods whatever others did. Let them be both courageous and merciful in a war which was for defence, not defiance.

Call for Self-Restraint.

Secondly there was a strong call to our people generally to discipline and restrain their thoughts and words. Horrors might reasonably inspire anger and indignation but not resentment, revenge nor rage. To carry on warfare was, from a military standpoint, inefficient, and also undevout.

Canon Davidson passed to the question of applying religion to our dealings with Germans and people of German descent in our own country. If dangerous they should be interned, if not pronounced a menace they should be treated courteously and kindly, with sympathetic appreciation of the difficulty of their position.

In these and other ways, he said in conclusion, we could help to make British civilization truly Christian, noble and worth fighting for. Let our loyalty to Jesus Christ be as distinctive and clear cut as our loyalty to king and country. Let our religion be a power to rouse and stimulate patriotism where it is dormant or weak, and to regulate and control it where it is rash, extreme or unbalanced.

A most inspiring service was concluded with the singing of "O Canada" and "God Save the King," after which the men reformed into line on the green in front of the Church, and marched back to the Armouries.

Neutrals To Get Canadian Grain

Precautions to Prevent Shipments Reaching Enemies' Hands

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—An important relaxation of the order regarding the export of grain and flour to the Netherlands and to Greece and to other neutral countries, was announced yesterday by Sir George Foster, minister of trade and commerce. It indicates that arrangements have been come to between the British war office and the governments of neutral countries whereby absolute precautions are to be taken that Canadian grain will not reach the enemies of the allies. The official memorandum reads:

"Grain and flour, except oats, may be exported to the Netherlands, provided that wheat and wheat flour are consigned to the Netherlands Government and other varieties to the Netherlands Overseas Trust, in which case it is necessary that the consent of the Netherlands Government or the Netherlands Overseas Trust, should be obtained beforehand.

"In respect to Greece, arrangements have been made by which reports may be made to that country under permits or recommendations for shipments, granted by the British minister at Athens, who is to satisfy himself as to the ultimate destination.

"The consignees in Greece must, therefore, obtain such permits or recommendations from the British minister beforehand.

"As to neutral countries outside of Europe, shipments may be made under license to be obtained under application to the minister of customs."

TO TELL TRAIN SPEED.

Count the click of the wheels on one rail (because joints alternate) for twenty seconds and the result will be the miles per hour the train is running. Demonstration: There are 176 30-foot rails in 5,280 feet. The train, we will say, is travelling at 45 miles per hour. It covers 125.5 rails in one minute, or 2.25 rails in one second, which multiplied by 20 equals 45 rails in 20 seconds, or 45 miles per hour. If 32 foot rails are used the result would be 40 rails in 20 seconds at 45 miles per hour, but it is fairly accurate and can be done easily with a little practice.—Literary Digest.

Boschink News

Kilkenny Resort—Dancing at Crow's Landing—Post Office at Glenwood

"Kilkenny" Resort reports having had a good season. Nestling as it does, in the heart of Boschink, with its numerous Island protected channels and beautiful vistas, it proves very popular with Stoney Lake visitors. The following have registered recently: Messrs. James Dees, Lewis A. Ryan, Wm. O'Brien, Keith Lech and G. O. Cameron, Peterborough; Miss Ambrose, Peterborough; Miss Ella Smith, Toronto; Miss Ella Freelands, Buffalo; Mrs. and Miss Wilcox, Toronto; Miss Sherry and Miss Gussie Sherry, Port Hope; Miss Lillian Fair, Toronto; Mr. Milton F. Bickford, Mrs. Fred W. Bickford, Miss Ella Bickford, and Mr. Norman Bickford, Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Thackson, Oshawa; Miss Lillian Crowe, Miss Una Kennedy, Miss Lettie Shearer, Miss Walsh, Miss Jessie Walsh, Peterborough; Mr. Roy Clemence, Detroit; Miss. Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Choate and Master Grover A. Choate, Calgary, Alta.

Several of the guests were very successful in fishing, particularly Miss Lillian Crowe and Miss Ambrose.

The arrival of the Bickford family in Stoney Lake was somewhat unique. The two sons, Milton and Norman, planned to spend their vacation on a canoe trip up the Trent Valley Canal, starting at Lakefield. On reaching Stoney Lake they were so impressed with its beauty that they immediately telegraphed for their mother and sister, and a pleasant holiday was spent at "Kilkenny."

Mr. Harold T. Lambright of Rochester, N.Y., who spent the summer at Glenwood, was very popular, especially at the dances. In the day time he loved to fish, in the night he loved to dance.

The dances at Crowe's Landing, which were free and easy, especially the entrance fee, were well patronized this season, a number coming up from Boschink every evening.

The new post office "Boschink" has been a welcome innovation to the cottagers in that section of the lake, but next season they will endeavour to have a better system of getting the mails in and out.

Mr. Dodsworth's new floating boathouse is the first to be built over pontoons. It has a slip large enough to accommodate two gasoline launches. Next year Mr. Dodsworth may surprise us with a fast motor boat that will eclipse anything on the lake.

Mr. Fred Weir has chartered the Graham War cottage.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson has had his cottage treated to a new coat of paint.

Dr. Wilbaughby's cottage, Mot Caen, Irish for "beautiful view," has been closed for the season.

Mr. Caniff's new cottage has received its first coat of paint.

FEW GERMAN HOMES UNTOUCHED BY WAR

SYRACUSE, Sept. 10.—Rev. [illegible] Philpott, who arrived [illegible] on the steamer Canada, [illegible] assistant pastor at the Central Presbyterian church, has been [illegible] tion of German and Austrian homes since the outbreak of the war.

He says that practically every home of the citizens of Germany has been bereaved in some fashion or other since the war began. Everywhere he went he found people in mourning. Probably the most striking impression he has gained is that if the war is to be fought to the bitter end, it will continue indefinitely.

"It is a trying experience to visit German homes," Dr. Philpott said. "I do not know how bitter feelings are not being shed for the loss of loved ones who have gone to the battlefield never to return. In the face of this tragic fact, I met Germans, German men and women manifesting the same courage and confidence as in the beginning when they believed that by one mighty stroke, Germany would open the way to victory in less than a week."

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Eugene Walter's thrilling dramatization of John Fox Jr.'s splendid story emphasizes one of the most fascinating locales of a dramatic story. No pains or expense have been spared to make the production a worthy one in every sense. It proved a striking success in Chicago, Boston and New York, and enjoyed long runs with the largest receipts of late years.

TENDER HAS BEEN ACCEPTED

Alterations to the Y.M.C.A. Will Occupy Two Months—Fourteen New Dormitories

Mr. James Rose, the local contractor, has been awarded the contract for the alterations and additions to the local Y.M.C.A.

Work started today, and two months will be occupied in making the necessary renovations. When the building emerges from the hands of the contractor its interior will not bear much semblance to its condition at present.

Add Dormitories.

On the third floor, 14 new dormitories will be added. For the convenience of the roomers a dining hall will be one of the features of the new organization, and here meals will be served. This is a big step towards making the Y.M.C.A. one of the most up-to-date for the size of the city, in the Province. The boys' department will be built entirely anew, and will offer much greater attraction to the boys of the city. They will be fitted in a way appropriate with the progressive changes, and will be far ahead of the present equipment and rooms for the boys.

On the first floor the whole plan will be altered. The offices, parlour, reading room, etc., will be changed to meet the new conditions and will be in keeping with modern ideas of an alert Y.M.C.A. In the basement splendid recreation rooms will be provided for the senior members. Besides these changes, which practically amount to the making of a new building within the old walls, a new wing will be built from the north-west corner of the "Y" to the street. The wing will be the width of the gymnasium and will add much needed space to the institution.

When the work is complete the building will be as modern and suitable as could be wished. The officers have been cramped in their efforts for some time on account of the inadequacy of the present quarters, but they are looking forward to a splendid work when everything is ready to use the new rooms. The increased result in a much larger membership and consequently much greater public support. These alterations are reckoned to be as much of an investment as an expenditure.

Ten local contractors tendered for the work. The accepted tender, involving an expenditure of about $3,500, does not cover the plumbing and heating, which will be done under a separate contract. The management expected that an expenditure of $5,000 would be necessary but have been pleased to discover that the desired changes can be made for considerably less than that.

Chinaman Hugs Twenty Girls

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Charlie Mung, head cuff burnisher at the High Mandarin Laundry, No. 47 West 125th street, explained in the Harlem Court why he hugged twenty girls and women in 125th street, near Seventh avenue on Monday night. All efforts to halt the explanation, which was long and in Chinese tailed, and today an interpreter will hear the same or a newer and better explanation, depending entirely upon the imagination of Charlie.

The only thing that was established yesterday beyond a reasonable doubt was that the self-appointed municipal Lothario hugged every woman from nine to ninety who passed the corner mentioned between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock on Monday. The evidence, too, showed that he had been thrown in front of cars, down cellarways, trampled, punched and hatpin sabred and that at seven o'clock his romantic fervor was unimpaired.

After his testimony had been duly noted Mr. Mung selected a spot suitable for gesture work and went into no end of detail. Court officers, policemen and friends sought to silence him, but there was no chance in the world. There will be another performance today.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

"THE GHOST OF SKOBELEV."

Many Russian sentries declare that they have seen the famous ghost of Gen. Skobeley (who gained fame in the Russo-Turkish war of 1877) in a white uniform riding on a white horse.

The apparition, according to tradition, always marks a critical moment for the armies of the Czar, and invariably causes a panic in the enemy's ranks.

Dr. W. J. White, of Pennsylvania Confident of Success of Allies

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 11—After two months in France and England, during part of which time he was at the head of the University of Pennsylvania unit which cared for the wounded soldiers at the American Ambulance Hospital in Paris, Dr. J. William White, one of the trustees of the university, has returned to this city.

Dr. White is more intensely hopeful of the ultimate success of the cause of the Allies than ever before. During his sojourn abroad he conferred with many of the leading men of Great Britain and France, and declares that the people of those two nations firmly believe they will win the great struggle. Dr. White said that his return trip across the ocean had been exceptionally interesting, especially in its early portion.

"Every precaution to guard against submarine attack was taken," he said.

In talking of Germany's undersea activities Dr. White declared that these had done much to stir the people of the other nations into activity against the Teuton cause. He said that less than one per cent. of the British shipping had been eliminated. The British navy, he said, was being unusually successful in its campaign against the German submarines. They have many ingenious devices, he declared, for capturing these craft, and had a large number to their credit. In fact, Dr. White said he knew how many German submarines had been captured, but had had the figures in confidence.

The recent negotiations between the United States and Germany over the Arabic massacre will not tend to change the opinion of the French and English people toward the United States, according to Dr. White. In response to a query as to the regard in which the United States is held abroad, Dr. White quoted as follows from his diary:

"As to the attitude of the French toward America I think it would be fair to say that, while they are scrupulously polite and not one word is said that could offend even tender sensibilities, they are in a state of disappointed amazement, disappointed that our administration has never seen its way clear to protest strongly and officially against the numerous German atrocities of the war, beginning with the rape of Belgium; amazed that we should ourselves have endured the repeated insults and outrages, extending to the murder of our women and children, and continued to exchange 'notes,' couched in the polite and complimentary language of diplomacy, with the pirates and murderers."

Interesting Letter From Sergt. Peter Victor Who Left Peterborough With the First Contingent

The following letters have been received from Sergt. Peter Victor of the Peterborough detachment, First Canadian contingent. They were addressed to his mother of this city:

Military Hospital,
Hampstead, Aug. 8, '15.

Dear Mother, I have been under another operation and am feeling quite well after it. They took out six pieces of bone, and the doctor said I would be out very soon—Let's hope so. Of course it has put me back a bit, but there you are, you cannot have it all your own way, can you?

Dear Mother, you won't mind a short one this time, will you? I do not feel up to much and I've a lot of letters to write. Better news next time.

PETER.

SERGT. PETER VICTOR

Letter Number Two.

Military Hospital,
Hamp-tead, Aug. 31, '15.

Dear Mother, I am feeling quite better again. No pain whatever. The doctor said it was a very successful job. Of course this staying in bed is pretty rotten, but I shall soon be up now. They have put us in a ward, what the Sisters call "The old Crocks Ward." There are eight of us all told and all have been pretty bad, but are now getting along well. We have had thirty-four operations between us. We get all sorts of "fuss" made of us. I shall have all sorts of things to tell you when I come out. I am sending home the letter that Mrs. Alderson sent to all the Canadian wounded. I'll get you to save it for me if you will, dear. Well, bye-bye. I'll send you a postcard of the hospital next time I write.

HOW TO MEND A HOLE IN A SAUCEPAN

Pots and pans, whether of iron or tin, which is only iron tinned over, get holes in their bottoms all too soon to please the economical housekeeper. Then it becomes necessary to call in the tinsmith who puts a lump of solder in the hole. This soon melts and the hole is there again.

But nothing is easier than to repair such holes at home and without the aid of a tinsmith. First of all make the hole round by inserting the point of a knife and twisting it back and forth. Place the pot or pan upon any firm flat piece of metal such as an anvil, a bar of iron or an inverted flatiron, so that the hole is immediately over and touching the latter. In the middle of the hole place a shot of about the size of the hole. Any piece of lead will serve if shot be not handy. Now a few sharp blows with a hammer will flatten the shot and spread it out, filling the hole tightly and overlapping enough to hold it in its place. A few strokes with a file and a rub with sandpaper complete the operation. The repair is permanent. It is said that a hole as large as a quarter of an inch in diameter can be mended in this way.

4,700 Men At Barriefield When The 80th Battalion Arrives

According to the ration sheet of the Army Service Corps, there were 3,763 men under canvas at Barriefield camp on Friday. By the time that the 80th Battalion is fully mobilized the number will be increased to about 4,700 provided no drafts leave in the meantime.

At the present time the 59th Battalion is drawing the largest quantity of rations. The strength of the units is as follows: C.A.S.C., 89; C.P.A.S.C., 25; No. 5 Company of Queen's Engineers, 29; C.M.R., 1,242; 59th Battalion, 1,400; Field Hospital, 60; Y.M.C.A., 95; Headquarters staff, 82; camp fatigue, 37; officers training corps, 50; 32nd Battery, 100; 33rd Battery, 188; 34th Battery, 190; officers attached to the three batteries, 15; 80th Battalion, 150.

The number of men under canvas is the largest since the men went into camp in May. At the time the 38th Battalion was at Barriefield the attendance was very high, but not quite as large as at the present time.

The records show that during August rations were issued for 69,150 men and for 12,996 horses.

The following is the scale of rations issued to each man daily: Bread, 1 lb.; meat, 1 lb.; potatoes, 1 lb.; bacon 2 oz.; beans, 2 oz.; jam, 2 oz.; butter 2 oz.; sugar, 2 oz.; vegetables, 6 oz.; cheese 1 oz., split peas, 1-2 oz.; salt 1-2 oz., coffee, 1-3 oz.; tea, 1-4 oz.; pepper, 1-36 oz., milk powder 1-2 oz.; 1 1-4 lb. of bread or 1 lb. of biscuit, if bread is not obtainable. Oatmeal, flour, rice or beans, 2 oz.; dried prunes or jam 2 oz.; two rations of coffee or two rations of tea instead of one of each.

The largest batch of bread turned out of the ovens in one day since the men went into camp was handled by the Army Service Corps men in charge of Staff-Sergt. Joseph Pound on Friday. The weight of the bread was 6,184 pounds. At four o'clock on Friday morning the bakers were on the job and were busy up until ten o'clock at night. Three batches were turned out by fourteen men. The tins in which the bread is baked will hold two loaves weighing eight pounds in all.

The big rush on Friday was caused by the arrival of the 38th C.M.R. While that unit was away at Brockville, the issue dropped away down. There is always a big rush on Saturday, as enough bread has to be baked to last over the week-end.—Kingston Whig.

trying circumstances, but they all worked with me to a man every time, and I won't forget it. It means everything to a regimental medical officer to have that state of affairs existing, and through him to his battalion.

Splendid Work Being Done.

Well, father, you will be tired of all this, but I get fearfully depressed at times, and it is a relief to tell of our work and troubles to one who can understand. Still, one must carry it on. As a regular M. O. you see the worst side of it, in a way, but then, you have excitement which keeps you going ahead day and night, but in a hospital you see the gruesome sights all the time without even excitement. The Army Medical Services so far, anyway, in this war, are to be commended for their work and constant devotion to duty. The next year I hope we will have even better results, as this year has taught everyone many many things that we should never have known had we been at war with humans, and not devils. At least an army dominated by a devil, and that is pretty hard on the devil. His latest stunt is acid, which spreads from a low bursting shell. Fine business, indeed! But there is a day of reckoning, and Canadians will do full justice to their maimed and dead. Of that you may be sure. Charlie and Dick will give you all the news. I am very thankful they are going home, but you can imagine my feelings at being left in France, when all my pals are gone one way or another. Still one must carry on to the end, whichever way it comes.

Love to all

Your affectionate son,
GARNET.

FLOWER DAY AT THE Y.M.C.A.

Boys Distributed Boquets to the Sick in the City Hospitals

The third annual flower day of the Y.M.C.A. was held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. About forty boys gathered at the building for the purpose of distributing flowers to the sick of the city.

The boys take great pride in the work of helping to cheer and comfort those who are confined to their homes through sickness and old age. Saturday the boys distributed one hundred and ten bouquets of flowers to the sick in the city. Every patient in the Nicholls Hospital, St. Joseph's Hospital, was presented with a bouquet of flowers. A large number of bouquets were distributed to the aged in the House of Refuge and the Protestant Home. The committee wish to thank the ladies of the St. James' Methodist church for the beautiful flowers which they contributed for the occasion. The work of making up the bouquets was done by three young ladies from the Y.W.C.A., Misses Clegg, Cameron and Cunningham. The committee wish to especially thank the young ladies for their kindness in arranging the flowers for the boys.

Apprehended on Charge of Theft

Two local men were charged in the Police Court this morning with stealing a quantity of equipment, including a set of harness and a cream separator from Charles H. Sariver. The goods were valued at thirty dollars. Crown Attorney Hatton who appeared for the prosecution, asked for a week's remand, which was granted. The accused will be admitted to bail providing they are able to furnish bonds to the extent of $500. Failing this Magistrate Dumble said they would have to go into "retreat."

THE ANNUAL SUMMER FOUR FLUSH

The Browns are back, and heavens
How they flaunt the "seashore swagger"
Their manners smart and lofty—
Are sufficient quite to stagger!
Their principal exhibit
Is the tan that browns their faces,
As if one could only get it
At the most exclusive places!

The Smiths are back from Somewhere—
They resorted like the others
The tan that's on their faces
Is so thick it fairly smothers!
They act as though it bored them,
And advance this funny reason:
We liked it, but the sunburn
Spoiled a perfect seashore season.

The poor deluded mortals!
Why should they by implication,
Impress us all that they were
So "select" in their vacation?"
They quite forget that we know
That the sun and more's the pity!—
Turns 'em quite as brown at Podunk
As at smart Atlantic City!

Planting Tulips And Narcissus

If you would have rich beds of tulips or give the beds or the corners of your lawn a beautiful spring-like yellow or white glow of narcissus, daffodil and jonquil, you must begin to think of the early spring appearance of your garden in the fall, for the bulbs of these two flowers must be planted in the fall before the ground is frozen. In fact, this work should be undertaken as soon as or before an early frost has begun to make the annual flowers in the beds look weakened. In dealing with narcissus, which is the family to which the daffodil and jonquil belong, it might be well to think of trying to naturalize the narcissus to grow and blossom on the lawn much as do the wild flowers. How to plant and handle the bulbs as well as the best method of getting them to become spring residents of grassy corners, are described in the following directions issued by the bulb specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture:

These bulbs should be planted in light, sinch soil that has been dug to a depth of at least 10 inches. The tulip bulbs should be set five inches apart and four inches deep and the narcissus bulbs about 10 inches apart and five inches deep.

If they are to be grown in pots or window boxes, light, rich soil should be used. Place one to two inches of cinders or broken pots in the bottoms of the pots or boxes to insure good drainage. After planting, place the pots or boxes out of doors and cover them with about four inches of ashes or sand; or they may be placed in a dark cool room or cellar for a few weeks until the bulbs have formed a quantity of roots. They may then be brought into the light and heat for flowering. Keep the soil well moistened from time of planting, but avoid overmoistening, for if kept too wet the bulbs will decay.

Cultivation.

If planted in beds, the surface of the soil should be loosened after each rain and the bed kept free from weeds. In the late fall or early winter months it is well to cover the beds with a light mulch of straw or leaves to prevent injury to the young roots from the alternate freezing and thawing of the soil. This mulch should be gradually removed in spring, as soon as growth appears above the ground. The bulbs are quite hardy and are not injured by severe cold if the soil is well drained.

Lifting and Dividing.

Tulip and narcissus plants are perennial, and, if given proper care and grown under suitable soil and climatic conditions, will increase and multiply from year to year. The bulbs may remain in the ground two or three years, or until the clumps begin to crowd. After blossoming in the spring, from six to eight weeks should elapse to allow the foliage to die partially down, when the bulbs may be lifted with spade or fork. Shake the soil from the roots and store the bulbs in a cool, shady place where they will ripen and cure. When the old leaves and roots are thoroughly dry they may be easily rubbed off and the clusters of bulbs divided. The bulbs may then be planted in the same manner as the original bulbs. In this way the stock may be increased in a few years.

Naturalizing the Narcissus.

The narcissus often become naturalized when planted in he sod or partial shade, where it will continue to grow, blossom, and multiply for many years without further attention. Simply make a small hole in the soil five or six inches deep, insert the bulb pointed end up, press the soil over the top, and nature will do the rest. For naturalizing avoid planting in rows or rigid geometrical figures. A good plan is to scatter the bulb like seed and plant where they fall. This method of planting is extensively followed in the home grounds and parks of England and other countries in Europe. In portions of North Carolina, on large estates along the James River in Virginia, and in old gardens in New England, narcissi that were planted over half a century ago are still growing vigorously and every spring produce beautiful displays of blossoms.

NEW STREET CAR LINE OPENS ON WEDNESDAY

Foreign Pottery Getting Dearer.

The European war is resulting in a higher cost of production for china ware. Limoges ware has been advanced 15 per cent. in the selling prices while another raise of 10 per cent. is said to be imminent. Much the same situation exists in England where labour and materials cost are increasing. English pottery products are now bringing about 15 per cent. more than when the war started, with every indication that prices will continue to rise. Handlers of the Limoges product in this city who control the American trade are understood to be very averse to raising prices further, but this will be the outcome unless the war ends shortly. The more ordinary grades of foreign pottery ware are also feeling the upward tendency, all of which at the present time is proving of benefit to the American industry.

French Aeroplanes Damage Important German Cities

DARDANELLES, IT IS BELIEVED, MUST SOON SURRENDER

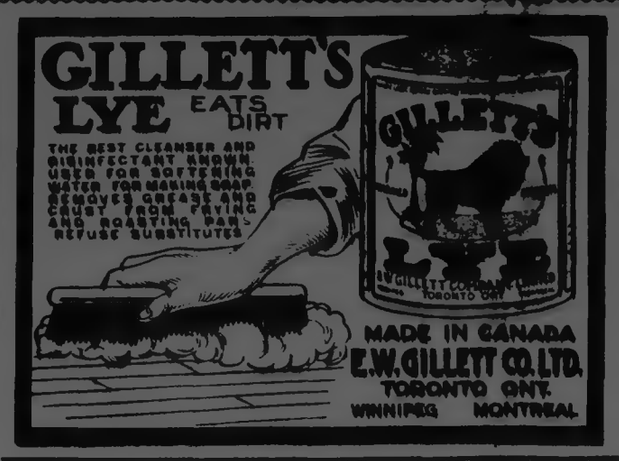
No Pessimism Among Troops At the Front

LONDON, Sept. 14.—At the City Temple yesterday, the Reverend R. J. Campbell, spoke hopefully of the present situation in France.

"As a result of my visit to the British lines, I am greatly impressed," he said, "with the undaunted spirit and delightful cheerfulness and optimism that prevails among the English and Canadian troops, so far as the army is concerned. I found no pessimism until I returned to England.

"I met one grim young Canadian who wished to return because he had a debt to pay. The Canadian had seen two Canadian sergeants crucified. I said to him: 'Perhaps they were nailed up after they were dead.' The Canadian replied: 'Sir, you would not have thought so if you had seen their faces.'

"Our soldiers are more bitter against the Germans than they were at first on account of the atrocities, attested sometimes by a number of men together, and which are too horrible to repeat."



ROUSING RECRUITING RALLY AT BUCKHORN LAST NIGHT SHOULD BRING RESULTS

Large Audience Hear Splendid Addresses by Prominent Local Speakers---Great Enthusiasm Manifested

"Fight or pay" was the keynote of the message that was rung out to the community of Buckhorn at a rousing recruiting rally that was held last evening. The speakers were Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., and Lieut. Stewart. The need of each man assuming his share of the responsibility in the present war, whether at home or abroad, was emphasized in a way that should produce results in the form of a number of new recruits for the Battalion now being raised in Peterborough. The meeting, which was largely attended, was enlivened by a number of selections rendered by the Indian Band. The chair was occupied by Mr. Samuel Wood, who performed his duties to the satisfaction of all concerned. He voiced the feeling of a large number who were present when he said that Buckhorn, like many other places, had not yet learned to appreciate the fact that this is Canada's war, and the responsibility that devolved upon Canadian manhood as a result.

Conditions of Enlistment.

The first speaker was Lieut. H. Stewart of the 80th Battalion now being recruited in Peterborough. He briefly reviewed the conditions pertaining to enlistment and urged all eligible men present to join the colours. Men were needed to-day as they were never needed before. The Canadian soldier receives one dollar and 10 cents a day as compared with the pay of the British soldier, which only amounted to forty cents. The conditions under which the men are trained were at the best, and altogether the advantages were such as to justify any man undertaking what should be regarded as an obligation. Lieut. Stewart made a special appeal to the members of the Band to transfer their musical abilities to the Band of the 80th Battalion.

Comparison of Forces.

He was followed by Mr. R. R. Hall, who expressed his pleasure at the opportunity to assist in such a worthy effort. The present conflict was one of the greatest that the world has ever known and in order to fully appreciate its enormity one must stop to consider the forces that are engaged in the struggle. The number of people involved was equal to twice the population of the United States. Then again the size of the battlefields has never been equalled in previous wars. At Waterloo, Gettysburg and other famous battles, it was a case of win or lose. The present struggle can be compared to siege warfare. On the western front both sides are locked in a deathlike struggle over a line stretching from the border of Switzerland to the northern part of France, which is equal to the distance from Buckhorn to the city of Quebec. On each side was a solid line of two million men. On the east the battle line extends from the Baltic Sea to the Carpathians, which equalled the distance from Montreal to Winnipeg.

"Right is Might"

One of the questions we have been asked, said Mr. Hall, is what is the purpose of the war. The answer to this is represented by the enemy's efforts to subjugate France, Russia and other of the Allies. This spirit is revealed in the writings and teachings of the German philosophers and well known statesmen. They appeal not only to the ruthless idea of the Nietzsche, they represent but also to the stupidity of the people. Their doctrine is that might is right. People infected with such a spirit would deprive any race that they were successful in subjugating of any freedom they ever possessed. Their ambition to conquer stops not at France or Russia but extends to Great Britain, which to-day is rendered immune from invasion by reason of a superior fleet.

Every patriotic man in the land of the enemy is a soldier by compulsion. They have large factories where arms are manufactured and ammunition. It was under these conditions that the war was thrust upon the allied nations. Since the outbreak of the conflict every cruelty and crime known to mankind has been committed by the enemy. Belgium has been devastated. A similar fate would befall Great Britain if it were not for the united resistance as represented by the fleet. The vast resources of the united nations are being taxed to the utmost in an endeavour to suppress the menace that confronts the civilized world. "Germany and America must not win," said Mr. Hall.

By way of emphasizing the danger that would threaten Canada in event of victory for Germany, the speaker reminded his hearers that it would take less time to come from Hamburg, Germany, to Halifax, than it would to go from Halifax to Vancouver. Some say that the United States would not permit an invasion of Canada. "I have a lot of respect for the United States," said Mr. Hall, "but when they allow their own people to be ruthlessly murdered on the high seas, what can they do to assist us."

Fight or Pay

"There are men in this hall who may not be able to withstand active service conditions, but they can contribute to the well being and comfort of those who are at the front or the dependents that are left behind. On one hand we have a nation that is the very embodiment of tyranny and on the other hand, a peace-loving nation that respects right and justice. In Great Britain taxes are raised by the consent of the majority who are responsible for the election of the government, while in Germany, taxes are raised by compulsion. We are a free nation, governed by a legislative body elected by the people," said Mr. Hall.

The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the work accomplished in South Africa by Premier Botha and his fellowers. When the present war broke out the Boers were so well satisfied with the system of democracy maintained by Great Britain at the conclusion of the South African war, that they were among the first to take the field in the present conflict. The result has been to subjugate the Germans so far as South Africa is concerned.

Canada's Fight.

Canada has raised upwards of one hundred and fifty thousand men, while Great Britain has raised over three millions. Great Britain represents a population of fifty millions. Seven per cent of Canada's population equals five hundred and sixty thousand. Canada has not yet learned that this is her fight. Is there any young man who would not sooner live ten days in the trenches and, if necessary be shot, than to live one hundred years and be subjugated to the dictates of a German sergeant, or in other words be like a skunk hiding behind the barn and live to be a German slave. This is a war between a liberty-loving nation and as savage and murderous a nation as it is possible to conceive.

In referring to the work accomplished by the women Mr. Hall commended them for the large part they have played in the conflict. They have worked in every possible way and sought to further the cause for which the nation is fighting. We in Canada said the speaker have got to do more. It is not a very pleasant thing to suggest that Great Britain might lose. We cannot win unless we all do our share in the maintenance of the home and old. The risk in regard to the front is greatly minimized by the number of men Great Britain can send. It is for us to play our part in the gigantic struggle and do everything in our power to uphold and preserve the inheritance that has been handed down to us.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

I do not like to ask anyone to do what I would not do myself, said Mr. Burnham, by way of introduction. The speaker informed his hearers that he had volunteered for service but was informed that he was a little too old and further that if all members of parliament were to go none would be left at home to transact the business of the country. Mr. Burnham said that he was going to do all in his power to defeat the ambitions of Germany. Germany had been making preparations for the conflict for forty years. They have developed the science of chemistry to an extent that has baffled us. With Russia driven back to within two hundred miles of Petrograd, the outlook is anything but favourable. On the western front the opposing armies are in vise-like grips while the Italian army is contending with the stupendous difficulty of invading a mountainous country which offers a natural barrier to invasion.

Continuing, Mr. Burnham said Britain requires enlisted men who are at the front, long ways, it is glorious for the cause and with a glorious purpose. Men who have been wounded are clamouring to get back into the fight to help to win for the liberty loving. Men who have returned from the front, to a man, want to go back. It is not for the purpose of killing Germans, but to help to bring the terrible war to a close. The people of Canada are expected to be entertained. It is hoped we are to bring the terrible war to a close. Our men at the front should not have themselves to be content to leave.

A Large Task.

We are here, said Mr. Burnham, on behalf of the 80th Battalion that is being recruited in Peterborough. The Minister of Militia has promised to make the Battalion to permanent Peterborough providing we can recruit sufficient men. We must not be careless to the fact that we are at war and the very safety of Canada is at stake. It has been a long time coming but a far greater task is before us.

In conclusion Mr. Burnham said he had no doubt that when those at home realized that the patriotic and loyal men from the front were appealing to them for assistance, Peterborough would be able to assist the people of Buckhorn. Mr. Burnham then introduced Mr. Burnham, M.P., who in the field and at home with the object of achieving success. She has no doubt the day of hampering the war as other countries have because she pays with GOLD. She doesn't need any future. Germany has so many arsenals to manufacture high explosive shell and other nefarious engines of war that she has almost fought the allies to a standstill.

A Responsible Part.

If the war were to end to-day, said Mr. Burnham, the enemy would be victorious. We must throw such a multitude of men against her that she must fall. It is to the credit of Canada that she has been given a responsible part to play in the present conflict. So far Great Britain and France have been unable to rescue Belgium from the invaders. The latter are the foremost exponents of history. They have developed the science of chemistry to an extent that has baffled us. With Russia driven back to within two hundred miles of Petrograd, the outlook is anything but favourable. On the western front the opposing armies are in vise-like grips while the Italian army is contending with the stupendous difficulty of invading a mountainous country which offers a natural barrier to invasion.

German Airships Last Night Made Sixth Air Raid on Britain in Week

No Serious Damage is Reported—Germans Have Reached the Railway to Petrograd But Are Falling Back in the South.

ATHENS, Sept. 14.—Reports here indicate mutinous plots in all sections of the Turkish army, and it is believed the Dardanelles must soon surrender.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—German airships last night made their sixth air raid on Britain in one week. No serious damage was done. Admiral Sir Percy Scott has been placed in charge of the defence of London against Zeppelin attacks.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—In making reprisals French aeroplanes bombarded and seriously damaged important German cities yesterday.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 14.—Germans have reached the railway to Petrograd, but are falling back in the south.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—British workmen are to visit the trenches to see the need of munitions.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Lt.-Col. C. H. Rogers takes command of the Twentieth Overseas Battalion.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Fire on the Fabre liner Santa Anna with two thousands people, including Canadian nuns aboard, has been extinguished according to a wireless.

ROME, Sept. 13.—The French submarine "Papin" attacked and sunk an Austrian torpedo boat and damaged others.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—It was learned this afternoon that a British aeroplane met and drove back the Zeppelins which were attacking the east coast counties last night for the fifth time in one week. Three British aviators have been killed or injured.

"It Will Be a Lucky Zeppelin That Gets By The Outskirts of London"

Significant Statement by One Aeronautical Expert, After Important Conference Held Last Night—London Will Be Ready When Zeppelins Come Again.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—London will be ready when Zeppelins come again. Full details have not been made public, but it was learned to-day that the entire system of defending the capital from sky attacks, will be radically changed as a result of an important conference held last night.

"It will be a lucky Zeppelin that succeeds in passing the city outskirts," was the significant statement by one aeronautical expert after the conference adjourned. Several aviation experts, it is known, urged the Government before the recent Zeppelin attacks to adopt the same system by which Paris has been made immune from dirigable bombardments. They advocated a nightly air patrol along the east coast to prevent the airships from reaching London or any other large city. They pointed out that a sky battle about London might result in frightful casualties should one of the huge Zeppelins be brought tumbling down into a crowded street spouting fire. The raid on London proved that despite warnings from the newspapers people insisted on taking in the air spectacle regardless of danger.

The appointment of Admiral Sir Percy Scott, England's greatest authority on naval gunnery, to take charge of defences of London against Zeppelin raids is only one of the features of the new anti-Zeppelin programme. Other measures will be kept secret for the same reason, the Admiralty withholds information of its methods of meeting the German submarine campaign.

A SOUVENIR FOR SIR EDWARD.

The Daily News to-day reported that the commander of the last Zeppelin that visited London dropped a heavy blade bone from a horse or ox, on which was a sketch of a Zeppelin dropping a bomb on the head of Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary. Attached to the bone was a note reading "a present to Sir Edward Grey with the compliments of the commander and officers." The Zeppelin souvenir was attached to a parachute and dropped into a field where it was picked up and handed to the authorities.

ROOM FOR MORE AIRMEN

England Notifies Canada That 150 Aviators Can Be Used.

OTTAWA, Sept. 15. The Imperial War Office has notified the Naval Service Department that Canada can take 150 men for the British flying Corps instead of the 100 at first asked for.

Some fifty men are now graduated from the aviation school in Toronto and have gone to England to finish their training for actual work at the front. There is a long waiting list of men ready to take the course at Toronto.

At Less Cost---

There's more nutritive value that the system will absorb in Grape-Nuts than in either meat or bread.

A remarkable fact.

Weight for weight, a package of Grape-Nuts supplies one-third more nourishment than a roast of beef and at about half the cost. A roast of beef is about twenty per cent waste and there is a shrinkage in cooking. Grape-Nuts comes ready cooked—and not a crumb need be wasted.

Think it over!

Then there's bread—white bread lacks certain elements essential to building brain and body. Why? Because in milling white floor, four-fifths of the precious mineral content (all important for health and life) is thrown out with the brancoat of wheat, to make the flour look white and pretty.

Grape-Nuts
FOOD

not only supplies all the brain- and bone-building, nerve- and muscle-making phosphates of the wheat, but all the rich nutriment of malted barley.

Besides, Grape-Nuts is easily digested—generally in about an hour—white bread and beef require about 2½ hours.

BRITISH CABINET MAJORITY AGAINST CONSCRIPTION

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Parliamentary correspondent of the Daily News says that the present views of the Cabinet on the question of compulsory service, which is now the most discussed question in the secret councils of the Government, are as follows:

Uncommitted—Kitchener.

For compulsory service—Curzon, Lansdowne, Lloyd George, Churchill, Bonar Law, Long, Chamberlain, Selbourne and Carson.

Against compulsory service—Asquith, Grey, Balfour, Crewe, Buckmaster, McKenna, Simon, Runciman, Birrell, Wood, Harcourt, and Henderson.

It is understood that Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Long, and Mr. Chamberlain are not inclined to press for the compulsory policy if it appears likely to lead a schism in the Government. Lord Kitchener, it is said, considers that at the present moment there is no need for compulsory military service.

The five highest mountains in the world are all to be found in the Himalayas.

Your salary is your "salt money." Soldiers once received salt as part of their pay. When the salt was committed for cash, the latter was called "salarium, salt money, or salary."

AIR RAID MADE "PEG O'MY HEART" ILL

LONDON, Sept. 10. Laurette Taylor who rejoined the cast of "Peg O' My Heart" Wednesday last Monday, after a month's holiday, suffered a nervous shock following Wednesday night's Zeppelin visitation and now is confined to her bed. Mr. Hartley Manners, Miss Taylor's husband, told the New York American to-day his wife would not appear in London again during the war.

TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, 'Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache.' I said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,' and she did and feels fine now."—Mrs. M. R. KARSCHNICK, 1138 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case.

Dayton, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition."—Mrs. J. W. SHERER, 126 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Hard Labor.

A definition of hard labor appears in the decision of the court in People versus Hanrahan, 75 Mich., 621, as follows:

"Hard labor in itself is not infamous or degrading. On the contrary, it is ennobling and is the foundation upon which reposes all true progress in mental and moral development.

Life's Limits.

All indications point to the fact that less than ten miles below our feet a red heat is maintained permanently and within twenty a white heat. Ten miles above us we have the pitiless cold, far below zero, of interplanetary space. To what a narrow zone of delicately balanced temperature is life confined!

"I prefer to let matters stand just as they are. Why should we discommode each other? We are perfectly satisfied as we"—

"I will not have my new cook giving notice, madam. You surely can't expect her—or him—to prepare meals for two separate"—

"I hadn't thought of that," she interrupted ruefully. "Perhaps if I were to pay her—or him—extra wages it would be all right," she added quickly. "We do not require much, you know."

I laughed rather shortly—meanly, I fear.

"This is most extraordinary, madame!"

"I—I quite agree with you. I'm awfully sorry it had to turn out as it has. Who would have dreamed of your buying the place and coming here to upset everything?"

I resolved to be firm with her. She seemed to be taking too much for granted. "Much as I regret it, madame, I am compelled to ask you to evacuate—to get out, in fact. This sort of thing can't go on."

She was silent for so long that I experienced a slow growth of compunction. Just as I was on the point of slightly receding from my position, she gave me another shock.

"Don't you think it would be awfully convenient if you had a telephone put in, Mr. Smart?" she said. "It is such a nuisance to send Max or Rudolph over to town every whipstitch on errands when a telephone—in your name, of course—would be so much more satisfactory."

"A telephone!" I gasped.

"Circumstances make it quite unwise for me to have a telephone in my own name, but you could have one in yours without creating the least suspicion. You are"—

"Madame!" I cried and got no further.

—"perfectly free to have a telephone if you want one," she continued. "The doctor came this evening, and it really wasn't necessary. Don't you see you could have telephoned for me and saved him the trip?"

It was due to the most stupendous exertion of self restraint on my part that I said, "Well, I'll be jiggered!" Her audacity staggered me.

"Madame," I exploded, "will you be good enough to listen to me? I am not to be trifled with. Tomorrow some time I shall enter the east wing of this building if I have to knock down all the doors on the place. Do you understand, madame?"

"I do hope, Mr. Smart, you can arrange to break in about 5 o'clock. It will afford me a great deal of pleasure to give you some tea. May I expect you at 5 or thereabouts?"

Her calmness exasperated me. I struck the stone balustrade an emphatic blow with my fist, sorely peeling the knuckles, and ground out:

"For two cents I'd do it tonight!"

"Oh, dear; oh, dear!" she cried mockingly.

"You must be a dreadful woman!" I cried out. "First you make yourself at home in my house; then you succeed in stopping my workmen, steal my cook and menservants, keep us all awake with a barking dog, defying me to my very face"—

"How awfully stern you are!"

"I don't believe a word you say about a sick baby—or a doctor! It's all poppycock. Tomorrow you will find yourself, bag and baggage, sitting at the bottom of this hill waiting for"—

"Wait!" she cried. "Are you really, truly in earnest?"

"Most emphatically!"

"Then I—I shall surrender," she said very slowly and seriously, I was glad to observe.

"That's more like it!" I cried enthusiastically.

"On one condition," she said. "You must agree in advance to let me stay on here for a month or two. It—it is most imperative, Mr. Smart."

"I shall be the sole judge of that, madame," I retorted, with some dignity. "By the way," I went on, knitting my brows, "how am I to get into your side of the castle? Schmick says he's lost the keys."

A good deal depended on her answer.

"They shall be delivered to you tomorrow morning, Mr. Smart," she said soberly. "Good night."

The little window closed with a snap, and I was left alone in the smiling moonlight. I was vastly excited, even thrilled by the prospect of a sleepless night.

"Britton," I said later, "I want to be called at 7 o'clock sharp in the morning." Noting his polite struggle to conceal his astonishment, I told him of my second encounter with the lady across the way.

"She won't be expecting you at 7, sir," he remarked. "And, as for that, she may be expecting to call on you instead of the other way around."

"Right!" said I, considerably dashed. "Besides, sir, would it not be safer to wait till the tourist party has come and gone?"

"No tourists enter this place tomorrow or any other day," I declared firmly.

"Well, I'd suggest waiting just the same, sir," said he, evidently inspired.

He hesitated for a moment near the door.

"Will you put in the telephone, sir?" he asked respectfully.

Very curiously I was thinking of it at that instant.

"It really wouldn't be a bad idea, Britton," I said, startled into committing myself. "Save us a great deal of legging it over town and all that sort of thing, eh?"

"Yes, sir. What I was about to suggest, sir, is that while we're about it we might as well have a system of electric bells put in—that is to say, sir, in both wings of the castle. Very convenient, sir, you see, for all parties concerned."

"I see," said I, impressed, and then repeated it, a little more impressed after reflection. "I see. You are a very resourceful fellow, Britton. I am inclined to bounce all of the Schmicks. They have known about this from the start and have fled like thieves. By Jove, she must have an extraordinary power over them or claim or something equally potent. Now I think of it, she mentioned a grandfather. That would go to prove she's related in some way to some one, wouldn't it?"

"I should consider it to be more than likely, sir," said Britton, with a perfectly straight face. He must have been sorely tried in the face of my inane maunderings. "Pardon me, sir, but wouldn't it be a tiptop idea to have it out with the Schmicks tonight?"

"Excellent idea, Britton. We'd have them up in my study."

"I am a very old man," he whined.

CHAPTER VI.

"Who is this woman?"

CONRAD and Gretel appeared with Britton after an unconscionable lapse of time, partially dressed and grumbling.

"Conrad," said I, fixing the ancient with a stern, compelling gaze, "this has gone quite far enough."

"Yes, mein herr?"

"Do you serve me, or do you serve the lady in the east wing?"

"I do," said he, with a great deal more wit than I thought he possessed.

"I have been talking with the lady this evening," said I.

"Yes, mein herr; I know," said he.

"Oh, you do, eh? Well, will you be good enough to tell me what is the meaning of all this two faced, underhand conduct on your part? I want the truth from you. Who is this woman, and why are you so infernally set upon shielding her? What crime has she committed? Tell me at once, or, by the Lord Harry, out you go tomorrow—all of you!"

"I am a very old man," he whined, twisting his gnarled fingers, a suggestion of tears in his voice. "My wife is old, mein herr. You would not be cruel. We have been here for sixty years. The old baron"—

"Enough!" I cried resolutely. "Out with it, man! I mean all that I say!"

"Tomorrow, mein herr, tomorrow," he mumbled in a final plea. I shook my head. "She will explain everything tomorrow," he went on eagerly. "I am sworn to reveal nothing, mein herr. My wife, too, and my sons. We may not speak until she gives the word. Alas, we shall be turned out to die in our"—

"We have been faithful servants to the Rothhoefens for sixty years!" sobbed his wife.

"And still are, I suspect!" I cried angrily.

Mr. Poopendyke's common sense came in very handily at this critical juncture. He counseled me to let the matter rest until the next morning, when it was reasonable to expect the lady herself would explain everything.

However, we forced something out of Schmick before his stalwart sons came tramping up the stairs to rescue him. The old man gave us a touch of inside history concerning Schloss Rothhoefen and its erstwhile powerful barons.

About the middle of the nineteenth century the last of the real barons—the powerful, landowning, despotic barons, I mean—came to the end of his fourscore years and ten and was laid away with great pomp and glee by the people of the town across the river. He was the last of the Rothhoefens, for he left no male heir. His two daughters had married Austrian noblemen, and neither of them had a male descendant. The estate, already in a state of financial as well as physical disintegration, fell into the hands of women and went from bad to worse so rapidly that long before the last quarter of the century was fairly begun the castle and the reduced holdings slipped away from the Rothhoefens altogether and into the control of the father of the count from whom I purchased the property. The count's father, it appears, was a distiller of great wealth in his day and a man of action. Unfortunately he died before he had the chance to carry out his projects in connection with the rehabilitation of Schloss Rothhoefen, even then a deserted, ramshackle resort for paying tourists and a Mecca for antiquarians and picture dealers.

Cures Biliousness Prevents Brights Disease

The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

Should this case not be similar to yours write to us for free statement of some one whose trouble was along the same lines. We have thousands of letters to choose from. Or better still, put the Kidney-Liver Pills to the test right away. They will only cost you a quarter and a box lasts for some time.

As a means of awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby curing biliousness, indigestion, backache and kidney troubles, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills hold a unique position. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MAKING A MATCH

For a Time It Was Considered a Thankless Job

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Martha," said Farmer Holt one evening to his wife when she was washing the dishes, "John Corey was talkin' to me this afternoon. He says he wants to git married."

"Well, why don't he?"

"He says there ain't no one to marry."

"There's lots o' wimmin would like to get John. He's passed out o' onsartin youth into shore middle age. He's got a good farm, and it's well stocked, and he hain't got no bad habits fixed on to him. I could name half a dozen gals about yere that would be glad to get him."

"He says he couldn't make up his mind to do the courtin'."

"What's he want to do any courtin' for? Courtin's for younkers. John's too old for that, and if he marries a woman of suitable age—some'rs about thirty—I reckon she won't set store by the courtin' part of it neither."

"He kin jist ask the woman he wants to marry, and if she says yes they kin be married."

"But John says he don't know any particular woman he wants to marry."

Mrs. Holt finished doing her dishes, put them away and, taking up a basket of stockings, began to darn them. Her husband turned to the Farmer's Helper and began to read.

"I'm thinkin'," said the wife, whose mind had got set on the matrimonial question, "that Mandy Sellers would be about what John wants. She's a first rate cook and keeps the house lookin' neat and clean all the time. She's always workin' at somethin'."

"Reckon her father and mother need her."

"There's the younger sister, Susan. She could take Mandy's place. Besides, a gal has got to look out for a home of her own."

"How d'ye know Mandy would have John?"

"Humph! She'd jump at the chance."

The farmer turned to his paper. He was more interested in an article on the feeding of hogs than in providing John Corey with a wife. But the idea of making the poor man comfortable and obtaining at the same time a home for Mandy Sellers had got into Mrs. Holt's head, and she couldn't get it out.

Miss Sellers occupied the adjoining farm to the Holts, and presently leaving her husband immersed in the hog feeding problem the good woman slipped out and interviewed Mandy, telling her that John Corey wanted a wife. She did not ask Mandy if she would like the position; she simply stated the fact. But a few days later when Mandy asked if John had got a wife yet Mrs. Holt suggested that Mandy would be about the kind of wife he should have. Mandy simpered and said he "wouldn't look at her."

One day John was at work at the cider press when he heard Mrs. Holt call him from the road. He went to her, and she spent half an hour questioning him about the treatment of cows and chickens and other matters pertaining to the farm. Just as she was about to depart she said:

"By the bye, Mr. Corey, have you seen Mandy Sellers lately?"

"No, Mrs. Holt, I hain't seen none o' the Sellers family in some time."

"Fine gal, Mandy,"

"Think so?"

"Good cook; knows all about a farm and specially good at dairy work."

"I want to know!"

"I wonder why some of the unmarried men about yere hasn't picked Mandy up. She's gettin' on past the age for the young fellers, and there's not many middle aged men in these parts that haven't wives."

"Reckon I'm about the only one o' that kind."

"Don't you believe that. Mandy would like a home as well as any gal I know."

Mrs. Holt, being a diplomat, went no further at the time. She had sowed the seed both in the breast of Miss Sellers and Mr. Corey and was disposed to give it time to germinate. By a skillful manipulation of the parties she finally got them together. John proposed, was accepted, and in due time the pair were married.

Now, John Corey was not a pliable man even in youth, and, having come to middle age, his will was hardening like his bones and cartilage. As for Mandy, she was a methodical person who preferred to do such work as a woman is expected to do in her own way. Thus when he saw her doing things in a different way from what he had been used to doing them he demurred. Mandy had kept the parental abode spick and span. Her father had been accustomed on coming into the house after his day's work was finished to put on a pair of slippers; John tramped in his muddy boots all over the house. Her father did not smoke; John did and knocked the ashes out of his pipe on anything that came handy, usually the floor.

"Howdy, John?" said Holt. "How do you like matrimony so far as ye got?"

"Waal, I ain't as independent as I was. My wife seems inclined to run things."

Farmer Holt changed the subject. Later Mrs. Holt dropped in on Mrs. Corey and asked her a similar question.

"Waal, Mrs. Holt, it would be well enough if John had any respect for the looks o' the house. He's lived alone so long that his home isn't any more to him than his barn."

When Mr. and Mrs. Holt compared notes it became apparent to them that if the Corey family continued as they had begun they would not hang together long. Mr. Holt accused his wife of having been too active in making the match, and Mrs. Holt retorted by asking him who started the matter. Since he had done so in reporting to her that John Corey wanted a wife he pursued the argument no further.

Matters in the Corey family went from bad to worse. Whenever John met Farmer Holt he abused him for making a match for him with the "consarnedest woman in the world." When Mrs. Corey met Mrs. Holt she rued the day when she had left a good home to keep house for a man who was so set in his ways that an ox team couldn't move him. The recitals of family difficulties were from time to time poured into Farmer Holt's ears by John Corey and into Mrs. Holt's ears by Mrs. Corey. Now and again the Holts were reminded that they had made the match. John said he didn't blame Holt for his share in tying him up with a virago, but this did not cause the latter to feel especially well satisfied with himself for having done so. Mrs. Corey did not hesitate to throw all the blame for her "mistake" on Mrs. Holt.

In time these vituperations became so marked that the Holts concluded that they must do something to stop them. The only thing they could think of was to apologize for having interfered to bring the couple together. One evening after Mrs. Holt had cleared the supper table and done the dishes they walked over to the Corey farm to carry out their intention. They found Mr. and Mrs. Corey at home, and the couple, not having had any reason to quarrel with each other, received their guests, if not with cordiality, at least with common civility.

The visitors talked for a time about the crops, what they were going to put into the ground for the next year and other ordinary matters. Presently Mrs. Holt looked knowingly at her husband, who, nerving himself for an effort, after clearing his throat, said:

"I want to say to you people that the blame for the mistake that has been made is all on me. I mentioned to my wife that John wanted to get married, and she reckoned that you two might be a help to each other. I didn't know that John wasn't used to havin' a clean house and"—

"I didn't know," interrupted Mrs. Holt, "that Mandy would make a fuss every time there was a bit o' dirt left on a rug carpet."

"Air you statin' this case or I?" asked Farmer Holt severely.

"Look a here," said Mr. Corey, bristling. "What do you people mean by comin' yere to interfere between man and wife?"

"Ain't you got nothin' better to do than that?" asked Mrs. Corey tempestuously.

"We jist wanted to apologize for what we done in bringin' you two together, seein' that you both made a mistake in puttin' on double harness."

"Who's made a mistake?" growled Corey.

Mrs. Holt was so indignant at this denial of what had been poured into her ears and her husband's ears for so long a time that she opened up the debate on a high key, Mr. Corey endeavoring to drown her words with a higher one. For a time the man threw in an occasional remark, but, finding themselves no match for the women, dropped out, their utterances sounding like distant thunder muttering in a violent storm.

Finally Farmer Corey deserted, leaving his wife to carry on the fight alone. She then began a retreat, turning here and there to fire a parting shot. Mrs. Corey followed her on to the porch, while John went out the back door to seek quiet in the barn.

The tempest was stilled when Mrs. Holt reached the gate and was not resumed. No more reproaches were visited on Holt by Corey or on Mrs. Holt by Mrs. Corey. There was no intercourse between the families for six months. Then one day Mrs. Holt sent mysterious looking box to Mrs. Corey. It was not returned, but a note of thanks came to the donor, with an expressed desire that the past might be forgotten. Within a few weeks from that time the stork visited the Coreys. Mr. and Mrs. Holt sent the baby a silver cup and were invited to stand as godfather and godmother at the child's christening. After the ceremony they returned with the happy parents to the latter's home.

"It beats all," said Corey to Holt, "how a little chunk of flesh like that will make a lot o' other things seem so little you can't see 'em."

"Reckon you'll find the chunk o' flesh not so little as you think," replied Farmer Holt.

"I want to thank you, Mr. Holt, for givin' me the best wife in the hull county and the baby as well."

Meanwhile Mrs. Holt was being thanked by the mother for saving her from being an old maid and giving her the best man that ever lived, besides the baby.

The Sikorsky biplane.

The Russian Sikorsky biplane is the largest heavier-than-air machine yet invented. It has a wing surface at least five times greater than that of the commodious Farman biplane. Its steel frame is twenty-two yards long. Its dead weight is over three and a half tons, and it can carry a "useful load" of over a ton. At least a quarter of a ton would consist of explosives. Nearly half a ton of fuel and oil is carried. The space between the planes is nine feet deep. The forepart of the machine consists of steel-walled cabins, extending over a length of about thirty feet. These cabins have large windows on each side, like those of an omnibus. The cabins are electrically lit at night. In cold weather they are heated through the exhaust.

WATER WAS BAD.

GOT DIARRHOEA.

Change of water, change of diet, catching cold, eating unripe fruit, etc., are all causes of diarrhoea.

The safest and quickest cure for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cholera, cholera morbus, cholera infantum and all looseness of the bowels is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mr. W. J. Quinn, Shelburne, Ont., writes: "About two years ago I was out in the West for harvest. The water out there was so bad that I took diarrhoea, and became so bad I was not able to work. I procured a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and when I had taken half of the bottle the diarrhoea stopped, and by the time I had taken the entire bottle I was able to resume work. I sincerely recommend it to all those troubled as I was."

There are a great many imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" on the market, so see you get "Dr. Fowler's" when you ask for it.

CONSTIPATIENTS'
Read This—

It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When such is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a self blood poisoning.

The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be mentioned poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of secretion in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c, stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health. 1

GERMAN TIPPERARY

The Taegliche Rundschau has published a belated rendering of "Tipperary" adapted to Germany. It is published in English and runs:

To Tipperary it's long to go,
And lo! our capital is so near!

True, it's a long way, too, to go,
But, Tommy, you'll have a special train,
There's room enough and comfort, too!
There you are safe from bails and rain.

You know how much we love your kind,
You will not miss your sweetheart there
Come only, Tom, to Germany,
You may leave your heart in Leicester Square.

For in the depths of your true heart
You're longing for our capital, fair
And on return you'll tell Sir Grey
How nice the saucy Germans were

PIONEER PRESERVING

(By Peter McArthur)

A request made some weeks ago for the recipes used by the pioneers for preserving fruit without sugar has brought me replies from all parts of the Dominion. Although the methods differ slightly in detail they are practically the same. Of course many of our grandmothers dried their fruit, but their methods have already been described in the press this season, and are so simple that they should be within the capacity of any housewife who can boil water without burning it. Here is a recipe for preserving blackberries and plums that is guaranteed to keep them fresh for any reasonable length of time.

"Take a deep stone crock, one that holds five or six gallons, and fill it with plums or berries that are not too ripe. Place over them a board or plate with a weight on it, preferably a good smooth stone which is easily cleaned, and then fill the crock to overflowing with hard water. Be sure that the weight is heavy enough to keep the plums under the water or they will spoil. There will be a scum formed on top of the crock which must be removed before using the fruit which will be found as fresh as when put up. Rhubarb cut in lengths to fit the crock will keep the same way."

Another correspondent writes: "I have canned tomatoes, apples, rhubarb and plums without sugar and have had good success. After the fruit has been cleaned and prepared in the usual way fill the jars as full as possible, shaking the fruit down and packing it tightly, then place rubbers and tops on tightly; put as many jars as will fill the bottom of a wash boiler, with a board and heavy weight over them to hold them down. Pour in as much cold water as will cover the tops of the jars and boil twenty minutes after the water has come to a boil. Plums may take a little longer. They will be delicious and not spoiled as most fruit is that is put away with too much sugar."

Here is another recipe that is probably alright though I would not care to use it without consulting a pure food specialist. "Pick the fruit from the stalks and put into bottles or jars. Add one drachm of alum to four gallons of boiling water and let it stand until it is cold. Fill the bottles with this liquor, bung them tight, put them into a copper of cold water and heat to 176 degrees. Then tie them over with a bladder and seal them."

That would probably preserve the fruit but the very mention of alum puckers my mouth, and I doubt if fruit put up in this way would be relished. However, the housewives who think sugar is too dear to use this season need not be without fruit. Several to whom I have shown these recipes say they are going to try them anyway for it would be a luxury to have fresh blackberries and cream or fresh plums in the winter time

The era of submarine warfare began in February, 1864, when the United States sloop Housatonic was sunk by an under-water craft, by means of a torpedo at the end of a spar projecting from it.

PARIS PRESS IN WAR

When this war is over and the "research" historians begin digging into therecords to settle what it was all about, the Paris newspapers will have a great psychological interest—psychological because their main interest will be, not in what they have told about the war from day to day, but in what they have not told, writes Naboth Hedin from Paris. In other words, the "war files" will furnish proof of how little the French people knew of what was going on during the early days of the war. This does not mean that the French newspapers have not served their public well during this war. On the contrary, many of the laurels that will be distributed after it is over ought to go to the newspaper editors. They should be crowned, not because they kept silent—for that they had to do; but because they had the nerve to keep their readers in good cheer and courage when things looked black. It is the French press that has kept up the nerve of the French public in this war. It is the French editors who have shouted "Never say die!" until everybody has fallen into line.

No really important Paris daily has suspended publication during the war, except the Gil Blas, whose entire staff was mobilized; but they have all suffered tremendous financial setbacks. If the old fiction that the newspapers stimulate war, because it helps them make money, has not died and been buried, this war ought to do it. It is safe to say there is not a newspaper in France that has not los tremendous sums. How some of them have managed to continue publication is a mystery. This does not mean that the Paris newspapers are not widely read. On the contrary, their circulations have gone up to unprecedented figures, but as advertising has dwindled down to almost nothing, this has not enriched the publishers. When the war broke out, the newspaper owners faced serious difficulties. All advertising revenue was cut off at once. At the same time, telephone and telegraph connection with the outside world was cut off, and there were no more trains to carry the early editions into the country.

What the Paris newspaper publishers did was to cut down the size of the papers to meet these difficulties. Within a day or two of the first mobilization order, every Paris daily became a single sheet, and some of the noon and afternoon papers came out on half a page. An eight or twelve page size of the Paris dailies, could not be sold without great loss for a cent, but a single sheet, filled with agency despatches, or with official communiques, could very profitably be set up and printed at 1 "sou." This reduction of size met the requirements of the situation very well. In the midst of the most tremendous drama ever unfolded in recent times there was nothing to print. The progress of the mobilization could, naturally, not be mentioned, and about the first battles nothing could be printed except what the official statements said. When the commentaries went beyond this limit, they were at once censored. The Paris papers have never been very strong on local news except sensational crimes, and after the war broke out there were no more sensational crimes. There were no more new plays at the theatres, which were all closed, no new books, no society life. There was literally "nothing doing" except the war, and that no reporters were allowed to touch.

CANADA TO GIVE ALL

Laurier Advises Defence of British Freedom and Support of Government

Addressing a large recruiting meeting at Sherbrooke Que., Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "I affirm it with all my power, that it is the duty of Canada to give to Great Britain in this war all the assistance that is in the power of Canada. My confidence in the present Government at Ottawa does not ooze from the soles of my boots, but at the outbreak of the war I considered it my duty to support it in its war policy. I have supported it in that policy ever since and I will support it again. The reason is that this war is a contest between German institutions and British institutions. British institutions mean freedom. German institutions mean despotism. That is why we as Canadians have such a vital interest in this war."

Son Against Father

One of the Russian prisoners who were brought to the camp at Reichenberg, Bohemia, is Lieutenant Baron von Ungern-Sternberg. The young officer is the son of the former St. Petersburg representative of the "Vienna Telegraph Correspondence Bureau." Five years previously his father had committed suicide after he had been arrested and convicted as an Austrian spy. When the present war broke out the young baron was called to the colors and he fought against the country for which his father, an Austrian subject, had died.

TELLS WHY FOOD DOES NOT ALWAYS PRODUCE FLESH AND WHAT THIN FOLKS SHOULD DO TO GAIN WEIGHT.

Most people who are thin and underweight eat just as heartily as do folks who are stout and well built but they cannot seem to gain in weight. They finally think its their nature to be thin, and that nothing can make them fat. But this is not necessarily true.

While flesh and fat must of course come from food nourishment it has been proved time and time again that most thin people have defective powers of assimilation and that the bulk of the fat-forming elements of their meals is passing right through their bodies, never reaching the blood at all. Naturally therefore they stay thin.

By a simple correction of the assimilative functions this condition rapidly changes and thin people take on new flesh and weight at an amazing rate. A preparation known as Sargol offers a splendid means for accomplishing this purpose. Sargol is an ideal combination of well known assimilative agents. A single concentrated tablet eaten with meals has according to reports received in many cases within a short time been the means of adding from ten to thirty pounds of solid, healthy flesh. It does not make flesh of itself but its aim is to stop the leakage and waste of fatty nourishment and to prepare the flesh building elements of food into a form which the blood can readily absorb and distribute throughout the body. The effect of this added nourishment in weight increase is remarkable. Thin folks can easily and safely make this test for Sargol is harmless, pleasant to take and inexpensive and many leading druggists agree to sell it on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back. This guarantee, plainly printed, is found in every large package.

AN EASY GOING SENTINEL.

Very early in the morning, says the author, after several hours of heavy sleep in a hammock in an anteroom of Garnier college I descended into the street and ran into some people who, with tricolored shawls across their shoulders, were giving orders in the name of the committee of defense. They were trying to discipline the revolution. Falling into their hands, I was stationed as a sentinel at a useless barricade that shut off Via Durini from the Verziere. The commander, having inspected my pistols and perhaps having found them not murderous enough, placed in my hands a fencing foil. Then he gave me the countersign, "Papa Pio."

A little while afterward another chief came along, who re-enforced the post and gave me as a companion a good old man who was armed with an antique lance. I told him the countersign, and we soon became friends.

"Concordia, corraggio," replied the captain of the patrol.

"Truly," replied my companion, "the countersign is something else. However, we are all Italians, so pass on."

AMUSING WORDS FOR ARMY BUGLE CALLS

"It's the Bayonets' Turn at Last," Says the Charge Call to Canada's Tommies

Most of the army's trumpet and bugle calls, to which Canadian ears are becoming accustomed, have words to them. Some of these interpretations are of great antiquity. Others, however, are quite modern, as, for example, the "Cyclists' Call," which goes to the words of: "Come on, you cyclists, with bikes in good trim."

"Oh, what a time those officers have! I'd like to have their dinner! Just give me theirs, and let them have mine; I bet they'll get much thinner! They know it, you bet! And don't you forget That wine and music is flue to digest, and help to season dinner." These are the words of the Officers' Dinner Call," but they give a very untrue picture of things as they are today.

You may know that Tommy calls "Reveille," "Revally," and may have wondered why. It is in order to fit in with the words of the "Rouse"—viz., "Come, make a move, and show a leg! Why dilly dally Now, don't you hear? Get out of bed! It's past Reveille. Get out, now, sharp, for the day's begun!"

Stirring Words

Most of us have heard of "Boot and Saddle," but the words of this stirring call may be new to you. They are: "Saddle and Boot! There's no time now to think of your very best girl. This may mean a spell to make you squirm and whirl. See that the saddle is right! See that the sword-scabbard's tight! Some day it may sound to fight! Look alive! Look alive! Saddle and boot!"

There is humor in the interpretation of the "Officers' Call" (infantry): "Officers, come when you're call'd! Adjutant's shouted and bawled! Colonel, he'll swear that you crawled! Come! Come! Come!"

The "Picquet Call" gives a line to the probable origin of the expression "fed-up," for it goes to the words of: "Oh, it's picquet feeds a man's soul up! For it's nothing but promenade."

Most Popular of All

A picquet's duty, by the way, is to prowl about the town, visiting places that have been put out of bounds, and to collect "drunks" and other delinquents. By the way, it is interesting for emember that when in command at Aldershot camp in England, General Sir H. Smith-Dorrien abolished picquets, and put the men on their honor as regarded their behaviour out of barracks, and the experiment met with entirely gratifying results.

Welcome Sounds

If the soldier does not like to hear "Parade for Picquet," there is one call which he usually welcomes with a grin and a cheer. This is the "No Parade" Call. To the cavalryman it reads: "This is the call we like! It just makes you feel all right. There's no call comes up to 'No Prade'"; whilst the linesman's cheerful wording of the same is: "Oh, there's no p'rade to-day! Oh, there's no p'rade to-day! It's jolly seldom that we get the chance to stay away."

In mounted corps the watering and feeding of the horses are, of course, very important duties, and the respective words of the "Watering Order" and "Feed Calls" are as follows: "Water your horses! Give 'em a drink! As you know what it is to be dry in this show, just give them a good long drink!" "Feed your horses! Feed your horses! Give 'em the oats and corn! See their ears wag! Shows they know the 'Feed,' my boys, as well as you know you're born. Give 'em the oats and corn!"

On active service the only field calls now allowed to infantry are the "Charge" and the "Alarm." Grim are the words of the former—viz.: "Now straight to the front, boys! Go for the foe! The bullet's share has passed. Right in to the fray we'll win the day. It's the bayonet's turn at last!" The language of the "Alarm"—and it is a fertile source of "language"—is: "'Larm' is sounding! What's up now? Fire or fight or jolly row? Into togs, and off we go!"

The military postman is always a popular personage with Tommy, and his advent is heralded by the "Post Call": "There goes the call for letters! Latest from 'Home Sweet Home!'"

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

A WAIST FOR SOFT FABRICS.

By Anabel Worthington.

So many of the new waists are made of the softest of material that a special design is absolutely necessary for them. Georgette crêpe, crêpe de Chine, voile, chiffon and a host of semi-transparent cotton novelties figure in these waists.

The design which we offer for all such textiles has the back brought forward on the shoulders so as to give the impression of a yoke. The fronts are gathered along the shoulder seams and are joined to the straight edges of the back. In the centre of the front of the waist is a straight vest, and the pretty notched collar and small revers are a part of this vest. Set in with the usual seam is a plain sleeve. Of course, it is full length, for this is the present rule for the best models. A very pretty cuff flares from the hand and is of the same material as the vest and collar.

The pattern of this waist, No. 7,198, is cut in sizes 34 to 48 inches bust measure, so as to be adaptable for stout women as well as for those of average figure. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material, with 1 yard of 36 inch contrasting goods to trim.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THEY MAY HAVE TO EVACUATE VILNA

RUSSIANS HOWEVER WIN IN THE SOUTH

THE RUSSIANS MAY HAVE TO SURRENDER CITY OF VILNA

This Will Follow the Cutting of the Vilna-Petrograd Line, It is Semi-officially Admitted---Germans Are Pounding Hard at the Line Near Riga, But in the South the Russian Advance is Continuing Satisfactorily.

GERMAN SUB IS REPORTED SUNK

PETROGRAD, Sept. 14.—The evacuation of Vilna will follow the cutting of the Vilna-Petrograd Railway it was semi-officially admitted to-day. The battle southeast of Riga is daily growing more furious, Gen. Von Besseler has been reinforced by Von Hindenburg and is making every effort to shatter the Russian front on the Dwina from Dvinsk to within thirty miles of Riga. The Germans are renewing their attempt to cross the Dwina near Linden under a curtain of terrific artillery fire. The assaults upon Dvinsk from the west have been fruitless. In the Tarnopol district the Czar's troops continue to drive back the Germans, taking prisoners and machine guns. In the extreme southeast the Austrians have suffered heavily in attempts to stem the Russian advance by counter-attacks.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A French torpedo boat has sunk a German submarine off the entrance to the Dardanelles according to an Athens despatch to the Journal. The Ministry of Marine has not confirmed the report.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—(French Official Statement)—Flotillas of French aeroplanes raided the German front early to-day bombarding the railway junctions while an incessant cannonade on the entire battle line continued for the sixteenth day. This afternoon's official statement said the railway station at Bensdorf junction near Morhange, at Chatel in the Argonne, and at Langemarck, north of Ypres were attacked by the French birdmen. The French gunners were particularly successful in last night's bombardment in the Argonne, damaging German batteries in Mortmare Forest and wrecking the trench salients. Artillery fighting was very violent during the night in the entire Artois region, south of Somme and along the Aisne Canal to Marine.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A news agency despatch from Athens to-day reported that the Asia Minor seaport town of Focha is in flames. It is inferred from this, the Athens correspondent cabled, that the Turks are convinced the Dardanelles defenses are about to fall and are retreating into the interior burning coast towns.

LONDON, Sep. 14.—The French cargo boat Ouad Sebeu, of 1,504 tons, was sunk by a German submarine. Her crew was rescued.

CHRISTIANA, Sept. 14.—The Norwegian Government to-day protested to Germany against the action of the German submarine commander who held up the Norwegian steamer Besheim and removed a British subject.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The resumption of fighting at the Dardanelles both on land and sea was reported in despatches from Athens to-day. There are indications that the Allies are preparing for concerted attacks in both Sed Ulh Bahr and Suvla Bay regions of Gallipoli.

Turkish batteries, which have been shelling Anglo-French trenches at the southern tip of the peninsula by throwing projectiles across the straits have been demolished. Two British cruisers entered the strait and wrecked the shore guns on the Asiatic side for a distance of three miles. The cruisers then steamed in close to the European side of the Dardanelles and shelled the Turkish left on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—At the Militia Department here ti was stated no word had been received of any portion of the 34th Battalian being in action, although it was quite possible that drafts had been sent to reinforce the First Contingent in Flanders.

So far the official casualties give no indication of extensive losses suggested by letters to Western Ontario papers.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—An official announcement states a Zeppelin visited the east coast last night. Bombs were dropped. Anti-aircraft guns, fixed and mobile were in action. So far as can be ascertained there wer no casualties and no damage was done.

NO CONSCRIPTION.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Replying to a question in the Commons this afternoon, Premier Asquith said the Government did not propose to force an issue on the question of conscription at the present time. This declaration was received with loud cheers.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Administration officials to-day took the ground that as the matter had not been officially called to the attention of the Government, it was not in the province of President Wilson or any other official to approve or disapprove of the proposed billion-dollar loan from the United States to the Allies. It was stated here that there was every probability that the loan would go through as proposed by the Allies' financial plenipotentiaries.

Number of Peterboro's Married Soldiers 207, May Soon Reach 250

The names of 207 married men were on the local Patriotic Fund's list on August. At least thirty-five more will be added by the time the October sheet is made out and by that time the total number will likely reach 250. Thus, as recruiting has proceeded in Peterborough the number of married men on the enlistment roll has steadily increased. These facts are mentioned in connection with the general opinion that Peterborough's Patriotic Fund will require replenishing in or before December. This is mentioned as a reminder of the fact that the number of married soldiers in swelling and that in consequence the demand on the Patriotic Fund is growing larger. At the same time, the local administrators are exercising whatever economy possible. Between three and four thousand dollars was paid out during August by Mr. Dobbin who pointed out that the succeeding months will undoubtedly find this sum gradually increasing.

NINE BATTERY RECRUITS OFF TO JOIN COMRADES

Last Draft for the 33rd Battery Are Escorted to Station by 80th Battalion Detachment and Overseas Band

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The last draft from the 24th Field Battery for the 33rd Overseas Battery at Barrisfield left for Kingston this morning. The detachment comprised nine men, bringing the total Peterborough quota in the battery up to two officers and seventy-five men, a splendid showing considering that recruiting for the infantry has been going on steadily during the same period. Had enlistment for the battery been permitted during the past week it is certain that this morning's squad would have been much bigger. As it was orders were received a week ago to stop recruiting and applicants since that time have had to be turned down.

The artillery recruits were escorted to the train by the 80th Band and the local detachment of the 80th Battalion, who gave them a hearty sendoff. Many friends were at the station to say good-bye. As the train pulled out, "Tipperary" was played by the band, while the infantrymen led in rousing cheers for their comrades in arms.

Peterborough has every reason to feel proud of her representatives in the Sportsmen's Battery, as the 33rd is known. And two-thirds of the men were born in Peterborough or in this district.

Recruits for the 80th Battalion are coming in steadily. There were 126 on the strength this morning. The detachment made a fine showing as it marched back to the armouries from the station.

The band of the 80th is coming along famously under the direction of Band Sergeant Hughes. Musicians are asked to note that there is still room in the ranks for a number of players, cornet and trombone players being in especial demand. Peterborough's record in turning out practically two complete overseas bands in a month is one that citizens should feel proud of, and that is not likely to be duplicated for some time.

The 80th men will be much in evidence at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. A squad under Sergt. Oxley will give an exhibition of physical drill with and without arms, and the whole detachment will parade to the grounds, while the band will assist in the programme.

C Company of the 57th Regiment, which claims rightly to have sent more men to the front than any other company of the Rangers, is well to the fore again in the 80th Battalion Col Sergt. Jack Williams is acting

ARE ALL IN FRANCE NOW

Canada's Second Division Has Safely Crossed the Channel – Exodus Began About Ten Days Ago

COL. ROGERS' COMMAND

FOLKESTONE, Eng., Sept. 13. — The second Canadian contingent has crossed the English Channel and disembarked on French soil. The preparations for the second exodus were begun immediately following the Royal review ten days ago, and transports have been departing for several days, and all have now safely reached their destination.

Men who are in the reserve training depot, many of whom have been here longer than those who form part of the second division, were quite envious of their comrades who have gone to the front. In the first reserve brigade of field artillery there are several well-known Ontario men, who for some reason linger on, though they have seen companions go to the front week after week. It is now on the tapis that a howitzer brigade will be formed, composed of men drawn from this unit, and there is a keen desire shown to be drafted into the new brigade.

A change has taken place in the command of the 20th battalion owing to certain differences of opinion. Lieut.-Col. Allan relinquished his command and returned to Canada at rather short notice. His men were exceedingly sorry to lose him, and displayed their feelings by trying to hold up his car as he left camp for the station. The command has been given to Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, Peterbrough. It is likely that the 20th will not be brigaded, and that the Royal Canadian Regiment now expected from Bermuda will take their place.

When Gen. Steele was appointed to command the south-eastern district it seemed likely that Major Jarvis, his old colleague in the R.N. W.M.P., would remain behind also, but Major Jarvis, who is Provost Marshal, has gone with the 2nd division. Capt. Cronyn, of Toronto, has been appointed A. D. C. to Gen. Steele

At the monthly business meeting it was decided that members should contribute a short historical paper at each of the business meetings.

It was resolved that just for the present, in view of the many and varied appeals being made to the citizens, that no teas, entertainments, etc., be given to raise funds to carry on the work of the Chapter, but that the members, by per-onal self-denial and weekly contributions, endeavour, themselves to raise the necessary money to finance their work. It was decided to offer a prize of a five dollar gold piece or a handsome silver medal (as the winner may choose) to the children of the City Public Schools for the best essay on "Why is the British Empire at War?"

The essay judged by the three adjudicators to be the best will be published in the new-paper and the prize will be publicly awarded.

Miss Jean Hairstone was asked to look after the competition, and particulars will be given in each of the Public Schools. In view of the fact that the children are being encouraged to write essays along these lines, the Inspector, Mr. Mowat, gave his hearty approval to the proposal.

It was decided to give a settled amount each month to the local Red Cross Society to cover cost of all materials used by members of the Otonabee Chapter when working on Monday afternoons in the Assembly Hall of the Library

No Contagious Diseases In the Past Ten Days

There have been no contagious diseases reported in the city last week nor this week. Dr Amy said to-day that there was a considerable number of summer complaint cases, most of them were "cucumberitis". The only case of typhoid was recorded about three weeks ago. Although the serious illnesses have not been prominently mentioned there is considerable minor indisposition from various causes.

A TASTE OF THEIR OWN

French Aviators Drop Bombs on Historic German City in Retaliation For Recent Enemy Air Raids

STATIONS ARE HIT

LONDON, Sept. 13. The operations in the west are marked by the continuance of the great artillery battle from Belgium to the Argonne. A duel between guns of all calibres along the entire front has now been going on for nearly three weeks, and during the week-end has been particularly violent around Arras, in the Argonne and Champagne. At several points the German infantry, after a heavy bombardment, attempted to storm the advanced trenches of the allies, but the French reports say that these all failed.

In retaliation for the recent bombardment of Luneville and Compiegne by hostile aeroplanes, a squadron of 19 French aeroplanes flew over the town of Treves this morning, dropping about a hundred shells. The station and the Bank of the Empire were undoubtedly reached. The same squadron, after having returned to its base in the afternoon dropped 58 shells on the station at Dommary and on Baroncour. Other aeroplanes bombarded from a low altitude the stations at Donaueschingen, on the Danube, and Marbach. In one region where the movements of troops were reported the efficacy of the French fire against the objects aimed at was established, including a train in transit, which was obliged to stop.

Oldest German City.

Treves, on the right bank of the Moselle, is said to be the oldest town in Germany, it having been founded by Augustus in the territory of the Treveri, a tribe of Belgic Gauls that had been conquered by Caesar. During the fourth century the town frequently was the residence of the Roman emperors, and numerous magnificent relics of that age are in the vicinity. Agricius of Antioch was elected first Bishop of Treves in 314, and for nearly 15 centuries the town continued to be the residence of the bishops, archbishops and electors. The French captured the town in 1794 and it was ceded to Prussia in 1815.

Treves is situated 32 miles northeast of Luxemburg and 65 miles north of Metz. The population is about 50,000, of whom only about one-tenth are Protestants. The town is strikingly picturesque, its numerous fine monuments including the Porta Nigra, a town gate built by the Romans in the third century; a cathedral dating in part from the fourth century; a brick basilica built about the year 306, and the ruins of a Roman palace and a huge amphitheatre, the latter dating from the reign of Trajan.

Donaueschingen, an ancient town of about 5,000 population, is the residence of the Prince of Fuerstenberg. The town contains a spring in a walled basin, led by a subterranean channel to the Brigach River. An inscription styles the spring the "source of the Danube," the position being 2,225 feet above sea level, and 1,763 miles from the mouth of the Danube. Donaueschingen is in the Black Forest, about 60 miles from Constance.

Marabach, in Alsace, is the site of a former Augustine abbey. It is in the vicinity of Colmar.

FRESH STRAWBERRIES AT 20 CENTS A BOX

Mr. E. F. Mason Received a Consignament This Morning—Grown in Northern Ontario

Fresh strawberries in the middle of September is surely a rare thing in Peterborough. However, it is a fact for Mr E. F. Mason is showing some beautiful strawberries at his George street store to-day. He received a crate this morning and is finding no difficulty in getting rid of them at twenty cents per box. When asked as to where they came from, Mr. Mason stated that they were grown in Northern Ontario by a man who makes a specialty of raising berries for sale during August and September. The berries are of a splendid flavour, and constitute a tempting article of diet at this time.

FINE PROGRAMME IS ARRANGED FOR THE EXHIBITION

Friday Night's Attractions Should Appeal Particularly to Citizens and Large Attendance is Expected—Military and Acrobatic Features.

HORSE RACING TOO

The prospects for Peterborough's second war-time Fair are developing brightness that becomes more encouraging as the opening day approaches. The directors are busily engaged letting concessions which, by the way, are more keenly demanded than ever. The secretary, Mr. Fred J. A. Hall, has a desk in R. Denne's store on George street and his books already show a large entry list.

Thursday is the opening day and will be mostly for the reception of exhibits.

On Friday afternoon the main attractions in front of the grand stand will commence at 2 o'clock

A detachment of the 80th Battalion will depart from the armouries at 1 o'clock, and headed by the 57th, 80th and Salvation Army bands will march to King street, where the bands will board cars. The soldiers will march to the grounds and entering the track from the south-east corner will parade by the stand and will take up a position in the judging ring. Their first performance of drill manoeuvres will be given between 2 and 2:30 p.m. and another and different exhibition will follow later in the afternoon.

First Horse Race.

The first horse race will be at 3 o'clock, the 2:25 trot for $150.00 purse. There will also be a 2:15 trot, and during the afternoon an open-air performance will be given on the stand, consisting of a strong man acrobatic specialty by the Four Victors, and two clever acts by the Costa Troupe of lady acrobats.

At 4 o'clock there will be a dog race for a $5.00 prize presented by Wm. Yelland.

During the afternoon the 57th Regimental Band will furnish a continuous programme.

The Evening Attractions.

Meals will be supplied on the grounds and doubtless many will remain for the night performance in addition to the large crowd who will make their first visit at night. Everything will be wide open in all the exhibits, on the midway and elsewhere. The grounds will be abundantly lighted.

The soldiers of the 80th Battalion detachment will give two performances, the acrobatic features will be presented, the band will play, and what should be an interesting evening will close with a grand display of fireworks which will include a great many war year features, tremendous bombs, Britain's colours, noise, colour in a mimic war on the skies. From the outside it looks like a big night.

Saturday Afternoon.

On Saturday afternoon there will be all the features of Friday and the parade of prize-winning animals. At 2 p.m. there is scheduled an association football match for the championship of Peterborough county.

The above are the outlines of the two main days. The midway will speak for itself and the various exhibits should be most satisfactory. Altogether there is every hope that this will be a banner year, and with the co-operation of the farmer and the citizens it will be a splendid success.

Definite word has not been yet received as to whether General Sir Sam Hughes will be a visitor to the Fair.

TOTAL BRITISH CASUALTIES FOR FIRST YEAR OF WAR

Under Secretary of War Announces That 381,982 Officers and Men of British Army Have Fallen During the First Twelve Months

OFFICERS TOTAL 16,393

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The total British casualties for the first year of war were 381,982, Harold J. Tennant, Under Secretary for the War announced in the Parliament to-day. The casualties figures are divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds: Officers 4,865, men, 70,892; wounded officers, 9,927, men, 241,096; missing officers, 1,501, men 53,456.

The losses of the British army during the summer were somewhat smaller than in April and May. The past previous statement for the total of British losses was made by Premier Asquith on June 9th. It gave a total of 258,069 up to May 31st. The losses from that time up to August 21 are therefore shown to have been 123,913, a daily average of about 1,500 in the two months before the end of May. The period covered in the preceding announcement, the losses averaged roughly about 2,000.

In reply to a query, Mr. Tennant said that no effort had been made to employ enemy aliens interned in Great Britain. They could not be forced to work, he said, but some had volunteered and are now employed, receiving pay for their services. He said that none of these was employed in the making of munitions for the allies.

The British casualty lists issued today shows a high death rate among British officers. Exactly 30.2 per cent of officers included in the casualty list were killed or died of wounds. While only 19.4 per cent. of the casualties among the men were killed and died of wounds.

A POWER TO BE CRUSHED.

The world pays tribute of acknowledgement, and parts of Europe bear evidence, of Germany's unexampled preparedness for war. So great is the extent and effectiveness of this preparedness, that Germany seems to feel that it can take liberties with the situation and defy the world of civilization. Germany must have great confidence in her strength when she can detach so much of it from direct pursuit of military advantage at sea and on shore. Her Zeppelin raid activities, costing much in money and munitions, and men, is, as a military expedient entirely useless and gratutously destructive; a few women and children and a stray soldier or two killed, is all the result of the Zeppelin raids. Their death and the destruction of some peaceful public building, may encourage the German lust for blood, but neither contributes an atom of military advantage—does not promote German military success.

In the words of Artemas Ward it is only "pure cussedness" that animates the German Zeppelin raids. They only satisfy the Huns' animal thirst for blood, and are companion to the abortive submarine piracy, which aims to destroy life and property, but so far has not contributed any military or naval advantage.

The ruthless character of the methods employed by Germany not only is committing crimes of violence, but in waging war, emphasizes the necessity of crushing the German spirit of barbarism. A denatured civilization, as that of Germany that puts women and children in front of its troops, to prevent the enemy firing upon them and the cowards skulking behind them, shows what a power, relentless, conscienceless and unscrupulous, the world has to deal with. If Germany is permitted to win; if she realizes her declared ambition of world domination, Canada will be the first country outside of Europe to feel the weight of German oppression. Can any young man eligible for enlistment, feel that it is not his duty to enter the ranks and do his best to bring about the defeat of the armies of the greatest and most dangerous enemy of human freedom and human happiness, the world has ever had?

NEED FOR REFORM.

If there is division of opinion as to the desirability of Reform administration of the public service, there are no two, or should be no two, opinions as to the necessity of reforming the public service administration of Canada to the extent, at least of plucking the sting of the odious patronage system. While human greed and the lust of unholy gain may have been the spring of the war supply scandals; may have been the original force, they were helped in effectiveness by the odious patronage system that obtains in Canada, and has been for long a mischievous element in our public life. The patronage system, the father of the patronage list, is also father of the man with the political pull. He is the man that raised the ire and provoked the protest of the Manufacturers' Association to Sir Robert Borden. This protest was based on the fact that the Manufacturers' Association investigated and secured evidence in the early days of the war, of the fact that middlemen without any legitimate commercial connection or producing ability or facilities, were more successful — if not solely successful — in obtaining Government orders for war supplies, than the legitimate manufacturer with ample and complete facilities for their production or supply. This permitted of a "rake off" to the middleman. The price of his pull plus the legitimate cost of the goods, of course, added to the cost to the government—to the people. In this way the country suffered doubly; the cost of the articles was greatly increased and naturally, in the circumstance, inferior goods were produced; the country got bad value for the money spent, and the manufacturers whom the people had helped by paying higher prices under a protective tariff, were placed at a disadvantage.

This condition is wrong at any time, but especially wrong in wartime, when our extraordinary expenditures, indicate the necessity of obtaining the fullest value for the money spent. How we are to get improvement in the matter of awarding war contracts, and also other contracts, is the problem. The Government showed a disposition to prevent improvement, by withholding the protest of the Manufacturers' Association. If they withheld the facts upon which their protest was based, the public was deprived of material necessary to the formation of public opinion, and the protest, that informed and aroused public opinion would bring to bear. There should be an end of the patronage system. There should be administrative recognition of the fact that the distribution of patronage should be made solely in the public interests, and not in the interests of the government of the hour—through their party supporters. No matter what government is in power, the revenue collected from the people as a whole belongs to the people as a whole, and not to any part or party. Logically the public revenues should be expended solely in the public interest. This cannot be done—at least, it never has been done, under the patronage system and the odious patronage list. Both should be abolished, and the public service in its administration, might advantageously be entirely removed from direct government control, and intrusted to an independent commission. If the outside public service were made non-partizan as is, to a large extent the inside service, the spirit of graft and party pull, with all its evil and costly consequences would be eliminated. There would be governmental or administrative recognition of the principle that the expenditure of the public money, either in the payment of official salaries or the payment for public works, or supplies of any kind, should be alone made with the object of securing adequate value—for the public benefit alone, and not for the advantage, incidental or direct, of any person or party, except through the medium of legitimate profit. When Canada is spending money freely in promoting its fulfilment of duty every cent should be made to count, and the soldiers of the armies for whose use and benefit the expenditures are made should get the benefit of the best qualities of supplies, with the best results in bodily comfort and fighting efficiency.

END OF RESOURCES FOR "SLIPPERY DICK."

Most of the American newspapers ten days ago were engaged in landing Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, to the skies. They bombarded him with bouquets and laurel wreaths as the great mutual friend of America and Germany and the great promoter of peace because he had in writing informed the State Department that Germany would meet the requirements of the United States regarding the observance of international law by submarines.

The Herald was the only paper printed in the East that was sceptical. It warned the public against attaching too much importance to this, and declared that deeds, not words, would count.

What is the situation today? So far as submarine piracy is concerned it is exactly where it was the day the Lusitania was sunk, no better than it was the day the Arabic was sunk, but much nearer a crisis than it was the day the Hesperian was sunk. Germany's reply, published yesterday morning, reveals conclusively that all the assurances that Germany has given during the last month regarding meeting the requirements of the United States under international law were merely the promises of an international "Slippery Dick." Its protestations were only made to be broken; it was telling the United States these things much in the way that a physician tells stories to a mental incompetent in order to quiet him. It shows that the statements made by the German Foreign Office and by Count von Bernstorff were only expedients to stem the anti-German sentiment in the United States. Not an atom of good faith entered into any of it. — New York Herald.

SIR WILLIAM VAN HORNE.

One of the great men of his day and generation has passed away in Sir William Van Horne. Endowed with a mentality and an energy far beyond the average, he set his life to the accomplishment of big things, and it may truly be said that every big task to which he set himself he carried to a triumphant conclusion. It was a fortunate thing for Canada that his life-work was cast in this country for he came to the Dominion at a time when men of his type were badly needed, and he performed magnificent service in evolving this country from a struggling and poverty-stricken colony into the home of a progressive and prosperous nation.

His steadfast vitality and unquenchable optimism — optimism founded not on shutting his eyes to fact but upon a truly prophetic vision — were a source of inspiration to all with whom he was associated. He helped immensely to carry the country and the people through some of the most trying times in their history, and he lived to see the reward of his labours not only in personal wealth but in the unexampled progress and prosperity of the great trans-continental railway he was instrumental in building, and of the country which that railway served. That the man was a genius was proved by his many-sided character and his astonishing self-taught skill as an artist, and a fine art connoisseur.

And with all he was one of the kindliest and most unassuming of men. He inspired wholehearted affection in all who came close to him, and he commanded the admiration and respect of rich and poor alike. The country has lost one of the greatest and best-loved of its citizens. Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

ZEPPELIN SURPASSES VON TIRPITZ.

A great honour has come to Count Zeppelin, which doubtless will make High Admiral von Tirpitz ill with envy.

Naturally both being chock full of German "kultur," fairly itched for the fray and were heartsick at remaining on land. But now the Count has reached a pinnacle of glory which doubtless the High Admiral will never attain. According to intimations from Berlin, he actually commanded the latest Zeppelin raid on London, when his air-ships showered incendiary and explosive bombs on the city, killing not only men and women, but children, until, in the language of the Archdeacon of London, "the nursery became a slaughter house."

ANOTHER WAY OUT.

Why not organize the city of London as a joint stock company, issuing the stock to citizens, and paying dividends to all those who are stockholders? It wouldn't necessarily change the city into a money-making corporation, but it might lead us to adopt business methods and to put in a manager who would take over the whole job and at least give us our money's worth. — London Advertiser.

Music & Drama

PEG O' MY HEART.

The local theatrical season was opened last night at the Grand Opera House with a most enjoyable presentation of J. Hartley Manners' comedy, "Peg O' My Heart." Seen here last year, last night's production lost nothing in comparison, as the sparkling play was most artistically presented. Miss Rea Martin made an altogether charming Peg, playing the part of the little Irish girl in a manner that captivated her audience. She was supported by a thoroughly adequate and accomplished company, whose work throughout was clean-cut and effective. The story of the play is too well known to need any extended reference to here. Suffice it to say that Oliver Morosco has given this year's company every accessory that went to make earlier tours of the same play a historical success. A large audience was delighted with the production.

Necessity of Preventing Abuse of Patronage System

Sir Charles Davidson has completed his inquiry into the methods followed in the purchase of army horses throughout the Maritime Provinces. In the fullest detail the sordid transactions by which through the abuse of the patronage system the country was robbed have been revealed. It has been shown that the friends to whom Mr. De Witt Foster, M.P., transferred the task of horse-buying for the Government were dishonest and incompetent, and that the animals purchased were in some cases utterly unfit for any sort of service. The inquiry in the Maritime Provinces has proved that the Opposition was entirely justified in bringing Mr. Foster and his friends before the bar of public opinion.

There is much work for Sir Charles Davidson still to do in the direction of original research. So far he has only amplified the material brought out in the various Parliamentary inquiries. The most serious evils charged against the patronage system have not been dealt with. It is very well known that the officers of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association accumulated much material in the autumn of 1914, indicating that middlemen who had nothing but a political pull to recommend them were far more successful in obtaining Government orders than legitimate manufacturers. It was the spread of the "rake-off" system that led to the sending of a vigorous remonstrance to Sir Robert Borden against the methods pursued in the awarding of war contracts. The people will not consider Sir Charles Davidson's work finished until some part at all events, of the evidence in the possession of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association is given to the public. The assertion was freely made in business circles at the time the remonstrance to the Premier was sent that manufacturers who could not obtain orders directly from the Government were able to sell the same goods offered unsuccessfully by themselves through the intervention of middle-men, who secured a fat commission for their "services."

That this practice has not been entirely stamped out would appear from an editorial in the Toronto Telegram of a recent date, which says:

"Orders for certain lines of regimental supplies are said to be controlled by individuals who demand a twenty-five per cent. commission from the manufacturers who receive orders for such supplies. The money that covers the price of these orders may come from regimental funds or from private sub-scriptions. Publicity should reveal the methods of expending the money irrespective of where the money comes from. Is custom and usage sanction a system under which individuals who can place or refuse to place orders for regimental supplies demand commissions of twenty-five per cent. on the price named in these orders? Do orders go to the manufacturer who can offer the best regimental supplies for the lowest price, or to the manufacturer who can pay the highest commission to the agent who places the order? These questions are being quietly asked, and should be publicly answered. Sir Charles Davidson might do worse than include Toronto in the circuit of his war contract inquiry. An inquiry would show whether or not manufacturers have to meet demands for commissions when regiments place orders for military supplies other than those provided by the Militia Department."

If such abuses as The Telegram speaks of still exist they should be ruthlessly exposed, and the spurious patriots who make excessive gains out of their country's necessities should be exposed to public contempt and punished to the full limit of the law against the payment of secret commissions. The ending of the inquiry without taking evidence which will disclose the identity of the men with a pull who have been able to raise innumerable tollgates between the Government which needed war supplies and the actual manufacturers of these supplies would be a most unpopular proceeding. Evidence of the sort needed to make a case will not be obtained easily. It will not be volunteered, for no man having dealings with the Government will care to come forward and say anything that might result in friction between him and the purchasing departments. If evidence is to be obtained which will enable the Government and Parliament to make an end of the vicious system of patronage it must be by a vigorous use of the probe by Chief Justice Davidson and Mr. Thompson. The article in The Telegram might afford an opening for the larger inquiry into the place of the "rake off" in army contracts. The Globe.

NOTICE TO FARMERS

Thousands of farmers have lost thousands of dollars this year through smut in wheat, oats and barley.

This loss can be prevented in one way only, and that is by treating the seed. Be sure, therefore, that your fall wheat is properly treated before being put into the ground this fall.

The method is as follows: Go to Lynch's drug store, 168 Hunter St., Peterborough, and get one pint of Formalin and mix with 42 gallons of water. Place the seed to be treated in a coarse sack; a bran sack is excellent for the purpose. Fill the sack about three parts full and immerse in the formalin solution for twenty minutes. During the treatment raise the sack up and down several times in the solution to insure wetting every grain that it contains.

After treating, spread the grain out thinly on a clean floor or canvas where it can be stirred and allowed to dry sufficiently to be sown. The sooner it is sown after treatment the better. Twenty gallons of the solution will treat about twenty bushels of grain. Several treatments may be made with the same solution; each lot will require to be immersed for twenty minutes.

TAUGHT HIM HIS DUTY.

New He Knows All About the Etiquette of the Droshky.

The Siberian method of riding in a droshky requires an etiquette all its own, which, although sometimes surprising to the English traveler who encounters it for the first time, is based upon practical considerations. The danger of being thrown out has determined the prevailing usage, says Mrs. John Clarence Lee in "Across Siberia Alone."

If a gentleman escorts a lady it is his task to hold her in the carriage—not an easy occupation. He accomplishes it by putting his arm around her waist. A man who fails to do so is considered as lacking in courtesy. When you have become acquainted with the custom it seems entirely sensible and comfortable, but it seems strange at first to find yourself settling back into a stranger's arms.

An American who had lived in Russia and whom we met in China told us that he was driving with a woman physician, a Russian, middle aged and of rotund Russian type. He knew nothing about his duty toward her, and they thrashed round that three by five droshky until the woman turned angrily toward him.

"Have you been brought up in the backwoods that you don't know enough to hold me in this droshky?" she said.

He immediately put his arm round her waist as far as it would go and held on hard.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

PENNANT TEAMS BREAK QUICKLY

Players on Combinations That Won Flags Fade From View

MATTY OUTLASTS ALL

What great changes can come in a few years in the makeup of pennant winning teams.

Christy Mathewson is the only survivor of the 1905 Giants who battled with the Athletics in the world series of that year. "Wildfire" Frank Schulte is the "Last Mohican" of the 1907 Cub machine.

But one can move a few years nearer and find that the wrecking of more modern baseball machines has been almost as complete.

Heinie Zimmerman, Schulte, and Jimmy Archer are all that are left of the 1910 pennant winning Cubs. Amos Strunk, Ira Thomas, and Jack Lapp are the only four men still on the Athletics' roster who helped to win the 1910 world series.

Just five men of the twenty odd players who battled under the Tiger standard in the 1909 world series are still on Detroit pay roll. These are Ty Cobb, Sam Crawford, Oscar Stanage, George Moriarity, and Ownie Bush.

Pirates Walk the Plank.

Pittsburg beat the Tigers in that series and only four members of the 1909 Pirates are still in the employ of Barney Dreyfuss. They are Fred Clarke, Honus Wagner, "Babe" Adams, and Catcher Gibson.

Great changes have come in the make up of the Red Sox team in the last three years. When the Red Sox defeated the Giants in that memorable eight game 1912 world series, the baseball public figured that the Red Sox machine was one that would be kept intact for many years to come.

But it hasn't been. Practically half of the 1912 Red Sox have since been sold, traded, or released. Jake Stahl, who managed the team, was "fired" the next season. Yerkes, who covered himself with glory around second base, is now with the Feds. Neal Ball and Clyde Engle, utility men, were let out. Pitchers Hall and O'Brien were released, as was Pitcher Hugh Bedient, who is now in the Federal league. Catcher Nunemaker was sold to the Yankees.

Giant Machine Disrupted.

Nine of the Giants who played in that 1913 series have passed along. Some are in the minors, some are with the Feds, and others have been sold or traded.

Only one man who battled for the Cubs in the 1908 world series is still under the Cub standard—and that man is Schulte, the last cog of the 1907 machine. Chance is gone; Evers is with the Braves; Tinker is with the Chicago Feds. Steinfeldt, the brilliant third sacker, is dead. Artie Hofman is with the Cubs no more. Jimmy Sheckard hasn't been heard from since he was ousted as manager of the Cleveland association team. Johnny Kling has quit baseball.

The great Cub pitching quartette of 1908 has been scattered. Pfeister is somewhere in the minors; Overall has quit baseball; Reulbach is with the Newark Feds, and Miner Brown with the Chicago "outlaws."

No Red Sox from 1905.

Only two of the thirty-five men who figured in the 1905 Red Six-Pirates world series are still in major league baseball. Both played with the Pirates. One is Wagner; the other is Tommy Leach.

Only six of the more than forty eligible for duty in the 1905 Giant-Athletics world series are still in major league baseball. Mathewson is with the Giants, Roger Bresnahan is managing the Cubs and doing the bulk of the catching, Leon Ames is pitching for the Cincinnati Reds. Those three were Giant uniforms in 1905.

Danny Murphy and Eddie Plank are the only members of the 1905 Athletics who are now in the big leagues, and both are with the Feds. Chief Bender was dropped by the Federals last week.

Ed. Walsh and Nick Altrock are the only members of the world champion 1906 White Sox team who are still in the majors. "Jiggs" Donohue, Frank Isbell, "Whitey" Rake, Shortstops Davis and Tannehill, Outfielders Jones, Hahn and Dougherty, Catcher Sullivan, and Pitchers Owen and White—all of them have passed beyond major league view as players. Jones has come back, but as a manager of the St. Louis Feds, not as a player.

CHANDOS PICNIC PROVED TO BE A GREAT SUCCESS

The Chandos picnic held in the church grounds, Chandos, on Sept. 8, under the auspices of St Mary's congregation was a grand success.

During the morning the weather looked a little doubtful, but as noon approached the clouds gradually cleared away and allowed the sun to shed its rays. Soon as the prospects of a fine day dawned crowds began to fill the grounds.

Dinner and supper was served by the ladies of St. Mary's congregation and deserve the highest applause for the splendid tables that were furnished. Nothing was spared to make everything a success.

First class music was provided by Messrs. J Mahoney, J. Gooley, M. Hobbins, and W. Gooley.

During the afternoon the following sports were run off.

100 yards race for men—H. Maloney.

Throwing 28-lb. shot — Stephen Scott.

Sack race—Lloyd Young.

A game of baseball was to be played between Chandos and Coe Hill, but Coe Hill's failed to produce the goods, and so the game was called off.

Short speeches were very ably rendered by the following men: Rev. Fr. McFadden, Wooler, Ont.; Rev. Fr. Meagher, Lakefield, Ont; Mr. D. S. Campbell, ex-Reeve of Chandos; Mr. F. J. Bullied, Reeve of Chandos, and Mr. R. Cockburn, Presbyterian minister. During the evening a sofa pillow was drawn for, the winner being Mrs. T. J. Bullied, whose ticket was No. 86. This being practically the last performance of the day the people began to turn their steps towards home, after spending a very pleasant time.

Million British Reported Holding a 100-Mile Front

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. News reached here yesterday on the White Star liner Lapland that the British front in France and Belgium had been greatly extended.

About a fortnight ago it was announced by cable that the British line was to be extended, but no particulars were given. It is now reported on the very highest authority that the ground now actually held by the British extends to something over 100 miles, and that the British Army in France amounts to just a million.

It seems that during the transportation of "Kitchener's third army" there was a complete interruption of the Channel service. This interruption, which lasted for two, possibly three, days, is believed by those who say they are in a position to know, to have been occasioned by the British Admiralty itself in order to have the sea clear for its attacks on the German submarine base and repair docks at Zeebrugge.

According to the latest reports available when the Lapland sailed, Zeebrugge had "ceased to exist." In connection with this it is added that the British attack was a sort of preliminary test of the possibility of a landing on Belgian soil in the rear of the German line in Flanders.

The War and Births

The following article appeared in year and corresponds to an annual rate of 22.9 per 1,000, which is 3.3 below the ten years' average for the June quarters.

The deaths, 138,579, were the highest for any June quarter in the decade, and were 14,445 in excess of June, 1914.

War weddings are probably responsible for the fact that in the first three months of this year marriages in England and Wales were 4,390 in excess of those for the same period of last year. The respective figures were 55,406 and 51,106. In 1913 the figure was 60,928, but there is only one other instance in ten years of the present total being exceeded.

Based on the total population, the new marriage rate is 12 per 1,000 per year, and is .8 over the ten years' average and .9 over the same quarter of last year. London had the highest marriage rate, 15.5, and Huntingdonshire the lowest, 7.2 per 1,000 people.

Marriages in Scotland and Ireland brought the three months' total up to 69,674.

TAILORED SUITS FOR TRAVELLING

A NUMBER of women buying these suits at $18.00 say they will wear them travelling. An excellent idea! The men's wear serges and diagonal weaves are especially appropriate. Hardy weaves with wear-resisting surfaces from which cinders and dust will glance, never embedding. The styles, too, are highly adapted—simple but as comfortable as can be. For business wear the tailored suit is of course the garment and these $18.00 Suits are splendid business suits.

Woman Willed Large Estate of British Army Officer, Whom She Was To Have Married

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11. How divorce came too late for a woman's happiness and how the ruthless arm of Mars in the great European struggle ended the life of a man too soon for the happy culmination of a harassed romance, leaving the woman heiress to a vast fortune and sad memories, is the story of beautiful Mrs. Grace Fitch Conger, of New York. Mrs. Conger, not yet twenty-seven and twice married, is at present in this city.

Mrs. Conger was loath to discuss the details of her unhappy romance when seen, because of the unusual circumstances that have made her heiress to an estate in England which, she claims, is valued at several millions of dollars.

She is here recuperating after a long illness, which followed the receipt of news from the battle front in France last November that a major in the British army to whom she was affianced had been killed. Later came the news that he had made her the heir to the largest part of his vast estate. Combined with that sorrow was the further excitement of winning, after seven years' struggle, a divorce from her second husband, Roy C. Conger, a New York banker, the son of the late E. H. Conger, Minister to China at the time of the Boxer rebellion and later United States Ambassador to Mexico.

Married When Fifteen.

Mrs. Conger is the daughter of the late Colonel Henry Fitch, of the United States Army, who was a "forty-niner" in California and who died seven years ago at the age of eighty-seven. He saw service in the Mexican War. Her mother, Mrs. C. T. Fitch, resides at No. 20 West One Hundred and Seventh Street, New York. She is also a niece of the late Clyde Fitch, the playwright and author, and has successfully started on pretentious vaudeville production. She was a pupil of the exclusive Mills College for Girls in California when, at the age of fifteen, she was married to an English army officer, who died within a month after their marriage. He left her an annuity.

Following this came her romance with Roy C. Conger. They were married and started on a trip around the world. In China the young bride, who was acclaimed for her blonde beauty and vivacity, was feted by the diplomatic circles, and a prince of the royal family presented her on one occasion with a necklace that was steeped in legend and purported to have mystic charm. In Japan also similar honours were heaped on the young bride. On the long Pacific Ocean trip she was the reigning belle of the steamer.

Romance Strife-Ridden.

It was on the trip that she is said to have met the British major who was killed in France and who made her his legatee. Their romance, however, was destined to be a strife-ridden one. The major urged her to obtain a divorce, but without avail. She and Conger separated, and returned to New York, where in Paris she started a suit for divorce.

Meantime her romance with the British military officer was continued. Her efforts to obtain a divorce from her husband created much gossip in New York social circles. The divorce suit was dragged through various courts, and the climax of events is thoroughly acted. Conger never started a counter suit.

In 1911 Mrs. Conger went on the stage. She sported first at Hammerstein's and later in one of the pretentious Winter Garden productions. Afterward she made a vaudeville tour, extending even to Honolulu and Japan. Her divorce proceedings in the meantime had been prosecuted unsuccessfully, and she was unable to consolate her romance with her British lover.

Two Sons in Army.

At the outbreak of the European war the Major, who had two grown sons also in the service, was ordered to the front. In November last word was received that he had been killed in action. The communication came from his solicitors in London, who informed Mrs. Conger that she had fallen heir to the major portion of his estate. Suffering from shock, she became seriously ill, and for weeks was under the constant care of physicians. Then the divorce suit was called before Justice Delaney, of the Supreme Court of New York, who is now dead. Upon the testimony of her brother, William Fitch, and two detectives, who told of Conger's infatuation with a "little blonde girl of twenty-two who sold candy at a hotel stand and of a raid on his apartments on the night of December 19, 1911," Justice Delaney granted the decree.

Since then Mrs. Conger has been slowly recuperating. She has only been able to move about freely in the past fortnight. Business brought her to this city, where she has a number of friends, and she will remain here only a short time.

"I have no desire to make public the name of the Major," she says, "because there is no necessity for it. My friends know the story and it has been given too much publicity as it is. His two sons are at the front fighting for their country. His two daughters are in Switzerland. My divorce for which I fought so long and am so glad to have simply makes me free for the first time in my grown up life.

"Whatever is to be done about the Major's estate will not be done until after this terrible war is ended, for it is not now possible to reach the two sons and the daughters who have interests in it. For myself, I can only wait. I have been to so many places and have seen so much that I feel old and I scarcely know what there is left for me to do."

DON'T USE SOAP ON YOUR HAIR

When you wash your hair don't use soap. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain moliched cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. Its very cheap, and beats some of anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It forms an abundance of rich creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, is soft, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Nine Battery Recruits Leave

company quartermaster sergeant and Sergt. Hartshorn of C Company is the latest addition to the khaki ranks. About eighty members of C Company are with the Canadian contingents, while the list includes Capt. Carruthers who was in command when the war broke out, and Capt. Park, who succeeded him in command.

Since the inauguration of the recruiting campaign in the first week of August three hundred men have enlisted in Peterborough. Of these at least 250 were Peterborough men the balance being from the district around. The total enlistment in Peterborough since the war began has reached the 1,200 mark and is growing every day.

Barriefield Camp, Sept., 1915.
32rd, 33rd and 34th
Batteries, C.F.F.

The Artillery Brigade is now nearly complete two of the batteries have many men over strength. The uniforms have been issued in part, and the men made quite an imposing parade on Sunday morning, when about 600 turned out to a drum-head service.

The 33rd is, of course, Peterborough's Battery. The N. C. O.'s from the Royal School of Artillery arrived to fill their new positions on Saturday. Major Sears has reason to be proud of his men from Peterborough.

There are representatives of Peterborough in every unit in Barriefield—the Artillery, C.M.R., 59th, Infantry School, C.A.S.C. and the Engineers.

One boy from Peterborough with the 8th C.M.R. is just recovering from a severe operation in the Kingston Military Hospital. S. Preston left Peterborough on a Tuesday and the following Monday was taken to the hospital.

In the 34th Battery there is but one man from Peterborough, as far as could be ascertained. He is J. Herron, who was a well known speaker around Peterborough. Happening to be round the 34th lines on Sunday last I was attracted to the mess tent by singing, and there heard this young man preach on "The Potter." "Cannot I do with you even as this potter." I learned that Mr. Herron organized this meeting, and is to get hymn books for the boys. We are glad that Peterborough can turn out such men as this.

The N.C.O.'s to pass successfully were Cavanah, Knapman, Anderson Alexander and Heaney, who are now attached to the 32nd and 33rd batteries.

In baseball the 34th Battery beat the Engineers, who had an unbroken record this season.

Lieut. Wilfrid Huycke, eldest son of His Honour Judge Huycke, and assistant adjutant of the 59th Battalion, is one of the officers selected to go overseas at once with the second draft from the 59th Battalion.

Sergt.-Major Tom Miller of the 80th Battalion, is in Millbrook on a recruiting mission. Corp. Lemay is in Lakefield on the same errand, and Corp. Wicker is at Buckhorn engaged in the same work.

Recruiting meetings under the auspices of the Speakers' Patriotic League, are to be held at Norwood, Creek, to-night and at Apsley to-morrow night.

FATAL EITHER WAY.

A rather turgid orator, noted for his verbosity and heaviness, was once assigned to do some campaigning in a mining camp in the mountains. There were about 50 miners present when he began, but when at the end of a couple of hours he gave no signs of finishing his listeners one by one dropped away.

Finally, there was only one auditor left, a dilapidated, weary looking old fellow. Fixing his gaze on him the orator pulled out a large six shooter and laid it on the table. The old fellow rose slowly and drawled out:

"Be you going to shoot if I go?"

"You bet I am," replied the speaker. "I am bound to finish my speech even if I have to shoot to keep an audience."

The old fellow sighed in a tired manner and edged slowly away, saying as he did so:

"Well, shoot if you want to. I may just as well be shot as talked to death."—Exchange.

DR. McPHERSON TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN THE CANADIAN HOSPITAL

Hon. J. R. Stratton has received the following interesting letter from Dr. A. W. McPherson of Peterborough, who is on duty at the Canadian Convalescent Hospital at Bromley, Kent, England:

My Dear Mr. Stratton, I was very sorry you were away when I left and I was not able to see you and Mrs. Stratton. I often think of you both and imagine I can see you riding up and down George street. It would be nice to come home for a few days and see you all. But sometimes it seems as if we're not far from home when we see so many familiar faces around. You possibly know that Charlie Ackerman and Tuck Jones are both here at the hospital. The day Charlie came, Claude Rogers came with him, and we happened to have three doctors from Toronto who were here holding a medical board on some of the patients who were healed up, but who were unfit for service. I happened to know them all well and it seemed as if we were at home. It seems so natural to be wearing khaki all the time and to be dealing with men in khaki. You see it is over three months since I left home and I am accustomed to the military work now. I have enjoyed it very much so far, but would enjoy it more if it were nearer the firing line, or where there are more acutely sick patients. But it is hard to satisfy everybody. This is a lovely spot for a hospital of this kind. Although only nine miles from the centre of London, it is still out in the country. The building is large for a private residence. We accommodate about 120 in it, and that without crowding. We have about 75 under canvas. The grounds are lovely, or would be when they are well kept. We are about a mile away or less from three stations on the way to London, and the 'busses running into London pass the gate of the grounds every ten minutes. So you see we are in close touch with the hub of the universe. This is a nice part of England. The country looks fine at present, thanks to the rain we have had almost daily for the last two weeks.

However, you don't want to hear about the weather, and perhaps I cannot tell you about the war anything that you don't read in the papers. Besides everything is so indefinite and uncertain. There certainly has been a lull in the fighting, and it is re-acting on the hospitals. There is not nearly the demand for room in our hospital that there was a few weeks ago. But everything points to a big movement in the near future along the western front. We hear tales directly from the front every few days. The latest one we saw was Arthur Ackerman, who is a platoon sergeant in the 3rd Battalion. He brought us news of the front. Everything was quiet as far as the fighting was concerned, but not as far as work behind the lines. The boys off duty, and even when on duty in the trenches, spend their spare time fixing up their fire trenches, shelter trenches, communicating trenches, and the roads leading back, so that lives may be saved and that the wounded may more easily be taken out, and so that supplies of all kinds may be more readily brought up to the men in the trenches. There is very little ammunition being used so that they must be storing it up. They have a lot of men over there, apparently enough to absolutely prevent any attack being continued through to Calais. There are not many of the 2nd or 3rd contingents over in France yet, but some are being moved soon it is expected.

There is quite a colony of Canadians at Shorncliffe. Practically all the Canadian units report to Shorncliffe for training all branches of them. It is like a big city extending northward from the city of Folkestone as far as Sandling—for a distance of 5 or 6 miles. Peterborough has representatives in almost every part of the camp. I was down there as medical officer of two of the reserve battalions for a while after landing, but the camp has grown very much since I left. I expect to take a run down in a few days to spend a few hours looking up the boys before they go across and scatter. It is only about 60 miles from here. A few weeks ago Claude Rogers came up on his motorcycle to see me. It took him a little over two hours to make it. You know the roads are good and Claude is some rider. I see by the papers that great enthusiasm prevails in Peterborough, and in fact throughout Canada. I am satisfied that there is more earnestness in our country at home in every walk of life than there is even in England, although without aquestion the better classes in England are most serious and are showing the same strong spirit that was shown in Sparta in days of old.

Well, Mr. Stratton, I wish I could drop in and see you and have a chat with you, and I hope to have that pleasure in the near future. Whether it will be two months or a year we can't tell, but I would not be surprised to see a big change in two months. When one sees the awful destruction left in the track of the war, one can't help but wish for a successful, speedy termination. But the spirit of the boys is something to be proud of—those who have been wounded and those who are better and returning for duty. Now I must close.

NORTH MONAGHAN ENDORSES IDEA OF A RURAL RAILWAY

And Asked for Investigation as to Probable Revenue of Line Between Cobourg and Peterboro' —Byersville People Want More Sidewalks.

PASSED A TREE BY-LAW

The North Monaghan council met at the Court House, Peterborough, Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, with Reeve McIntosh in the chair and all the members present.

The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

A deputation from the city was present consisting of Mayor Butler and Alderman Green, and presented a form of resolution regarding the Hydro-Electric Railway. They enumerated the many advantages to be derived from an electric line connecting Peterborough and Cobourg, not only to the city but to the country. The former would have access for his children to the city schools, to the market, cheap power, higher land values along the line, and many other advantages. They stated that the municipality would not be in any way responsible for the expense in connection with the engineer's report. The expenses were paid by the Provincial Government's Hydro-Power Commission.

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Forster that this council approve of the resolution recomending that the Commission investigate the cost of the railway, the population of each of such municipalities as shown by the last enumeration thereof by the assessors, and estimated probable revenue of the railway and the practicability of the undertaking and the economic value to the municipalities to be served by it as provided for in section 3 of the Hydro Electric Railway Act, 1913.

WANT MORE WALKS

Mr. John McMillan handed in a petition from residents of Byersville asking for a concrete sidewalk from Chamberlain street to Brown Street on the west side of the Monaghan Road, also a crossing from the post office to the city side.

The motion was received and the clerk will investigate it and report at the next meeting.

Dr. Cameron, medical adviser for overseas recruits asked the municipality to pay the hospital expenses of any intending recruits for the army to meet slight operations to fit them for service.

Moved by Messrs. Robson and Rye that the hospital expenses of all men who intend enlisting from the township and who require medical attention, be paid by the township.

A motion was passed that the clerk prepare a by-law to borrow $2000 from the Bank of Ottawa for the purpose of building sidewalks.

By-law 709 was passed appointing J. W. Fitzgerald as township engineer.

HAVE TREE BY-LAW.

By-law 710 was passed regulating the planting of trees on the public highway. Clause 1 says: No person shall plant trees on any highway in the municipality unless the same are placed at a distance of nine feet from the boundary line of such highway.

The following accounts were passed for payment:

Thomas A. Rebill, use of carts, $370. J. Harper, wood, $2. Morgan Hardware Co., $6.66. Peterboro Hardware Co., $1.90.

The council will meet at the Court House on Wednesday, Sept. 22 at two o'clock.

Opening of the Normal School

The Normal School opened this morning with an enrollment of two hundred and ten pupils. Last year the total number enrolled was one hundred and thirty. This year's list of pupils contains the names of thirty-two young men, whereas last year's list contained fourteen. Forty four students are enrolled in Grade "A" and the remainder in Grade "B."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CORN ROAST WAS ENJOYED

The C. E. A. of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church held a rather unique meeting last night—a corn roast, in the school room instead of in the open and near the river scene. There was an attendance of fifty. Corn, sandwiches and coffee were the refreshments and a musical programme was also much enjoyed. The C. E. A. expect to commence their work in the rear future.

House Party Was Broken Up

Participants Appear in Police Court on a Charge of Disorderly Conduct —To-day's Police Court

James Tierney was the sole occupant of the prisoner's dock at the morning's session of the Police Court. Tierney was charged and convicted of acting in a disorderly manner. He declined to go into the witness box without the aid of a lawyer and was assessed two dollars and costs with the alternative of fifteen days in jail.

Mrs. Tierney, wife of James Tierney, was confronted with a similar charge, owing to her delicate condition the case was adjourned until called on. Margaret Dunford was remanded to jail for a period of one week. She was accused of being a party to the disturbance that was staged in the Tierney home. She pended not guilty and denied being under the influence of liquor.

Case Dismissed.

No conviction was recorded in the case of Garnet Innis, who was charged with having created a disturbance at the home of H. Birchall, 260 Townsend Street on Thursday evening last. According to the evidence the accused visited the Birchall home for the purpose of collecting a small account for vegetables and at one time clothing said to have been supplied to Mrs. Minnie Allan. The latter's mother died a week ago Sunday and was buried on the following Tuesday. It was in connection with the funeral the clothing was supplied. Mr. Birchall, who was called as a witness asserted that Innis appeared at the house under the influence of liquor and demanded to see Mrs. Allan. He was refused and some uncomplimentary language was said to have been exchanged.

Mrs. Innis, mother of the accused and also the latter's wife was called. They gave evidence to the effect that two days after the funeral of Mr. Allan, Innis was sent to the Birchall home where Mrs. Allan was living for the purpose of collecting a small account. One account was for vegetables and amounted to sixty cents and the other was for clothing, amounting to twelve cents. The clothing was originally given credit but owing to some friction which arose between the parties concerned the Innis family declined to charge for them.

His Worship was of the opinion that the accused had acted prematurely in attempting to collect in a court so soon after the funeral.

GIFT OF AEROPLANE IS GREATLY APPRECIATED

The Montreal Corresponding Secretary of the Overseas Club (Mr. G. R. Lighthall) has just received from the Head Office in London, a copy of a letter from the War Office, dated 23rd August, in which the Army Council request that an expression of their thanks may be conveyed to the citizens of Montreal for their generous gift of $11,768.74 (£2,250) to the Royal Flying Corps, which sum will be utilized in the provision of a fighting aeroplane of Government design. The machine will be known as "Montreal, Number One," and will leave for the front in the next week or so, if it has not already gone forward. The Army Council express their high appreciation of the generosity of this gift to the Overseas Club Aircraft Flotilla.

The particular amount in question was given by Mr. Robert Hampson. In addition, the British Empire Grain Company has given a like amount for a good machine. The Montreal Board of Trade has just completed its subscription list for the third machine, and at the present rate at which money is being received the amount required for a fourth machine will soon have been contributed by the citizens of Montreal.

It is interesting to note that upwards of twenty bombing aeroplanes have now been contributed through the General Committee of the Overseas Club, which is also rendering a great National and Patriotic service by its Tobacco Fund, towards which Britons across the sea have now given upwards of $250,000.00.

Sentence of 25 Years Ends Career of Noted Outlaw

STROUD, Okla, Sept. 13.—Henry Starr, most spectacular of all outlaws since the days of the James and Dalton boys, pleaded guilty to bank robbery when arraigned here and was sentenced to twenty-five years in the Oklahoma Penitentiary.

This sentence, which, because of his long criminal record, Starr will probably serve in full, eliminates from the annals of crime in the Southwest the most daring and ruthless bandit of the present decade. Bank robbery was his specialty and nearly a dozen successful raids upon Oklahoma and Arkansas banking institutions are numbered among the exploits of the band led by Starr.

His final crime, which led to arrest and conviction after he had been shot from his horse by Paul Curry, an eighteen-year-old boy, was in March at Stroud. Following their usual plan, Starr and his gang rode into Stroud, dismounted and entered the two principal banks of the town simultaneously. They had no difficulty in backing the bank cashier and assistants into vaults and helping themselves to the coin in sight. They seized $3,600 and then ran for their horses to make their escape. Meanwhile the town had been aroused. As the bank robbers left the bank, with Starr guarding them from the rear, Curry disregarded the bandit's command to get back into the house and firing with a rifle shattered the bandit leader's hip with a bullet. Starr fell, groaning, and his companions, deserting their leader, escaped with the greater part of the stolen coin. Starr was placed under arrest and, although his wound threatened for many weeks to end his life, he eventually recovered.

Could Have Escaped.

"I saw the boy with the rifle and could have killed him, but I didn't have the heart to shoot down such a kid," was Starr's explanation of his failure to escape.

Starr is a man with a history stranger than fiction. The blood of a Cherokee Indian chief flows in his veins, but he was given a college education and studied for the law. From boyhood he was always resentful of what he termed the encroachments of the rich upon the rights of the poor and his first venture into crime was undertaken from deliberate choice with the purpose of taking by force the wealth of banks and millionaires. Train robbery was another of the Starr gang's favourite crimes.

It was during one of these that Starr First met the girl who afterward became his wife. This girl, Mary Anderson, a school teacher at Joplin, Mo., was a passenger on one of the many trains that Starr attacked. She was so crazed by fear during the holdup that she leaped from the cars and was lost in the wilderness of Arkansas. There Starr and his men found her. She was treated with the greatest kindness and consideration and eventually taken safely back to her Missouri home by Starr himself. Thus began a friendship which ended in love and the marriage of the bandit and the young girl.

Wife True to Him.

Though Starr's life has been a tempestuous one with more than seventeen years of it obliterated by time served in various penitentiaries, his wife remains steadfast. Again and again she strove to turn him from his criminal ways, but the inveterate hatred he bore the rich always led him back to join his men and lead them in another desperate raid against a bank or a train.

"The law is a joke," Starr often said. "There is one law for the rich and another for the poor. That's why I'm an outlaw. My profession is more honest than a lawyer's. I was born twenty years too late or one hundred years too soon. A hundred years from now men who believe as I do will be the patriots of the nation, instead of outlaws."

That statement gives a clear insight into the nature of the man who for ten years terrorized the small towns of the Southwest.

"I guess it is all over," he said after his conviction. "I will be an old men when I finish this sentence—if I ever do."

Zeppelin Debris Used as Platform For Recruiting

Examiner Special.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—"The answer of the people of London and in the London district to these exercises in frightfulness may be given in an episode mentioned in the Manchester Guardian," says the Spectator in commenting upon the Zeppelin raids of Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

"A recruiting sergeant had been addressing crowds from a platform made of debris of ruined houses, and the results have been excellent."

The Daily Mirror says the reply of London was a great army of recruits. A large number of volunteers presented themselves at Trafalgar square, this newspaper says, and in every part of the country men flocked to the colours.

The Evening Standard expresses the hope that the British government will announce its determination to hold the head of the German aircraft service personally responsible for the deaths occasioned bc the Zeppelin raids. The Globe and other newspapers take the view that every air raid on London or other English cities should be followed immediately by attacks on such German cities as Cologne, Strassburg, Karlsruhe and Dusseldorf, which are within easy reach of Belfort, France.

"It is time this super-squeamishness was gone," says the Globe.

WHIPPED THROUGH SUCTION PIPE AND IS STILL ALIVE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Caught in the suction pipe that empties the bathing pool at Allenhurst, N.J., Samuel Lash, of New York City, of the Lash Studio, makers of theatrical scenery, was carried two hundred and fifty feet to the ocean outlet and terribly injured. Both arms were broken, his collarbone was fractured, his hips crushed and his body lacerated, but at the Spring Lake Hospital last night physicians said he had a chance for recovery.

The pool had been closed for the day when Mr Lash arrived from the city on Thursday evening, and although the pool was roped off, he dived in. The water already was being sucked out, and before Mr Lash had completed the "follow through" of his dive he was whirled, feet first, into the twelve inch main. His hands were still over his head.

James Higgs, engineer at the pool, said Mr. Lash was whipped through the line in about fifteen seconds. The engineer could not explain how Mr. Lash's body passed a gate valve or around a right angle bend in the pipe line.

Otway Morrow, "Jack" Stein, Henry Lawry and Charles Bucher were on the Allenhurst Beach when they heard Mr. Lash cry for help. They quickly swam to him and brought him ashore, and he was hurried to the hospital. Mr. Lash's bathing suit was torn from his body.

RELATIVES GO TO COURT OVER MISER'S ESTATE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 14—When Enos Nichols died at Shawnee nearly four years ago it was not known he had any great wealth, but as he had left some property it was necessary for an administrator to take charge. In an iron-bound trunk under the miser's bed he found $330,000 cash and government bonds.

The trunk also contained a will giving the estate to Mrs. Harriet Nichols Cook, a niece, who lived in New Jersey. She died two years ago, before coming into possession of the property. A recent court decision gives the property to her heirs, but the case will be appealed to the Supreme Court by Oklahama relatives of Nichols.

The will left by Nichols also gives $150,000 to friends at Barry, Ill., but it is separate from the $364,000 he left in this State. The will was drawn at Barry, Ill., by Major Kline, an attorney, and it was witnessed by Major Kline's widow, who testified as to its authenticity in court recently at Shawnee.

Another will left by Nichols had been probated before the will in favour of Mrs. Cook and her heirs was placed before the court. It had been identified as the last will of Nichols but one witness testified she had sworn falsely and did not witness the signature of Nichols to the will. Judge Charles C. Watts, appointed a special judge by the Supreme Court to hear the case, then decided the will giving the property to the New Jersey heir of Mrs. Cook was the only true will.

Turks Are in Bad Shape Forces Thinned By Losses Unable to Hold Positions

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Conditions in Constantinople are described as chaotic by Reuter's correspondent at Athens, who bases his despatch on statements made by persons arriving in Athens yesterday from the Turkish capital. The correspondent telegraphs:

"The inhabitants of Constantinople are suffering greater hardships than is necessary, because the Committee of National Defence, run by Enver Pasha, Minister of War, and Taalot Bey, Minister of the Interior, has cornered all commodities and is selling them at high prices.

"The resignation from the Cabinet of the Sheik Ul Islam, representative of the Sultan in religious affairs, is confirmed. He disapproved of the extermination of the Christians, against which he protested to the Cabinet. The Greek-Armenian patriarch has been deprived of all powers.

"The Black Sea end of the Bosphorus has been closed by a chain of wire netting and by mines."

TURKEY IN BAD SHAPE.

An Athens despatch says that an American citizen of standing in Athens has received advices from Constantinople, which he says are trustworthy, to the effect that the situation of the Turkish army and Government is unfavourable. According to this information, the position of the Turkish forces defending the Dardanelles is precarious.

It is said the Turkish front, thinned by the heavy losses which the fighting has entailed on both sides, is finding it increasingly difficult to hold the lines against the French and British.

Turkey's position at sea is described as disadvantageous. The former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, renamed the Sultan Zelim and Medullu, are said to have been incapacitated, while the Russian fleet preys upon Turkish shipping.

ARMENIANS LOCKED UP.

The American's informant states that Armenians are being shipped to concentration camps at various points, being driven afoot or forwarded in box cars. He adds that the earlier massacres of Christians in Asia Minor are being duplicated. Henry Morgenthau, U. S. Ambassador at Constantinople has exerted every effort to protect the Armenians, but apparently his endeavours have been unavailing. It is stated that American women who attempted to go with the refugees to look out for Armenian children, were turned back, and that a number of young Armenian girls who were studying at the American college of Constantinople, fell into the hands of the Turks.

Owing to the interruption of sea transportation, it is almost impossible to purchase coal in Constantinople, and wood is being used for locomotives.

TO RUN AGAINST HUSBAND FOR TOWN CLERKSHIP.

BLOOMINGTON, N.J., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Raymond F. Davis, whose husband is town clerk, is so certain woman suffrage will triumph at the election next October that she is planning to oppose her husband for office.

"My husband and myself are both suffragists," she said. "When women receive their right to vote, which they will on October 19, I will run against my husband for the office of town clerk so as to keep the position in the family."

Mrs. Davis is acting town clerk while her husband is confined to his home with injuries to his foot suffered accidentally while bathing at Lake Hopatcong.

The "Blue" Route Is New Street Car Line

Blue sign boards have been selected for the new Charlotte street cars which are expected to make their debut to-morrow. This particular colour was a choice not only for its decorative effect, but probably as a social symbol of that particular section. Hence the blue cars for the "blue bloods." For the present these cars will run between Hunter street and the corner of the boundary road and Charlotte street.

The Jackson Park service was suspended this morning while new rails and roadbed are constructed.

SAYS GERMANS EXAGGERATE TO PROVOKE WAR

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 14.—Dr. Karl Bachem, of Cologne, a clerical member of the Reichstag, has contributed an article to the Cologne Volkszeitung suggesting the possibility that the nature and extent of American exports of munitions of war have been exaggerated in certain quarters for the specific purpose of provoking war between Germany and the United States.

Dr. Bachem declares he recently was assured by a prominent American that American munition exports never even had approached the quantity reported by German newspapers. Hitherto, the unnamed American is said to have asserted, moderate quantities of small arms ammunition had been delivered, but not a single shell.

Dr. Bachem asserts that it is hard to escape the belief, therefore, that there is a "system" behind reports concerning immense American war products, "and that we are systematically to be incited through exaggerated reports of American war supplies in order to impel us to war against America. Caution and reserve in this matter in criticising the commercial methods of the American government at this moment are the duties of every enlightened citizen."

Scene From Eugene Walter's Great Success "The Trail Of The Lonesome Pine" at The Grand, One Night, Friday, September 17th

Eugene Walter's best play, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which comes to "The Grand" next Friday evening, has been given a magnificent production. Mr. Walter's conception of June, the wild and primitive mountain girl, suits the stage in every way. His dramatic effort has strengthened Mr. Fox's romantic story, and the truth of things as they exist among those hardy mountaineers of Virginia is actually seen, while in the story it could simply be imagined. The company is an unusually strong one, and the beautiful story of primitive ways among a hardy race will appeal to all who followed the trail in June's young life in the book. The sale opens to-morrow morning.

WEDDING BELLS

LUCANO—SABATINO.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Church, Lakefield, this morning at 7 a.m., when Miss Lucy Sabatino became the bride of Mr. Michael Lucano, Peterborough.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Meagher, who also said the Nuptial Mass. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Mary Sabatino, while Mr. Harry Lucano supported the groom. After a short wedding trip to Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Lucano will reside at Park street, Peterborough.

SHAUGHNESSY—MILLOY.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at the Church of the Sacred Heart this morning during the 7 o'clock mass, when Miss Alice Milloy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Milloy was united in marriage to Mr. S. Sylvester Shaughnessy, son of Mr. Stephen Shaughnessy. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a grey travelling suit and a wistaria velvet hat. She was attended by her sister, Miss Loretto Milloy. Mr. Norman Shaughnessy, brother of the groom was best man. Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien was the officiating priest. Many of the friends of the young couple assisted in the nuptial mass, and festive music was played by Mr. John Armstrong. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home and they later left on the noon G.T.R. train on a honeymoon trip. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Shaughnessy will reside on Lansdowne Street. They received many remembrance from friends, including a handsome chair and fern pot from the office staff of the C. G. E. Co., where Mr. Shaughnessy is employed.

LIEUT. GEALE AT CHINGFORD

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—Toronto Flying School is to be transferred at the earliest possible moment to Bermuda. Mr. J. A. McCurdy is leaving at once to select a suitable base. The school's transference has been hastened by the refusal of the Militia Department to drain Long Branch Rifle Ranges. The quagmire following the rainy season has made flying impossible for several weeks. The school has well over 200 pupils enrolled, and with suitable ground on the beach at Bermuda for a landing place will turn out 15 pupils a week for the British army and navy. The Government will pay the transportation of all students to Bermuda, where they will lodge in tents or otherwise as they are doing here. Water and land flying will be from the same base. Mr. A. E. Barr will remain in Toronto to enroll further pupils.

Students Reach Britain.

Some 25 students have reached Britain. Mr. McCurdy had a post card yesterday from Sub-Lieut. Peberdy, stating that himself, with Sub-Lieutenants Ince, Hay, Gooderham, McLaurin and Geale were attached to the Royal Naval Air School at Chingford, Essex. "You should be proud of your school," Mr. Peberdy writes. "Capt. Elder (head of the Naval Air Service) is very pleased with the first batch, and says send as many as you like." Canadian airmen, unlike British ones, are trained on fast machines, and graduate in six weeks compared with a three-months' course in England.

PICTURES OF SAN TOY.

An interesting number of photographs are on view in Mr. Kent's drug store of some of the performers in an amateur presentation of "San Toy" in England some years ago under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey. The scenery will be recognized as that used by the St. John's Lady Minstrels in St. John's school room on two occasions, and it was brought to Canada by Mr. Devey when he (Mr. Devey) and sons returned from a three months' trip to England.

STREETS CUT OFF.

Gilmour, Homewood and Weller Streets are practically cut off these days, on account of work on Charlotte, Park and Hunter streets. The Fire Department should keep in touch with the situation. The milk and bun waggons will find a way, the fire reel might lose itself.

WAR WINDOW AT HUNTER ST. STORE

Handsomely Decorated Window at M. McFadden's Furniture Establishment

Mr. Gerald McFadden, of the McFadden Furniture Store, Hunter St., has a very handsome war window at his establishment. It is prettily arrayed with flags and a large photograph of Canadian troops at Niagara Camp shows up to advantage in the centre. A rather unique electrober provides illumination for the window. The light is mounted on a shell which was manufactured at one of the local factories. Altogether the window is worth seeing.

Edgar respecting the trip that was made to Ottawa last week on behalf of Peterborough's claim for further military recognition. A report of the exorts made by both His Worship Mayor Buller and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., will be submitted to the Council, after which it will be available for publication.

School Children's Half-hour Respite

August weather in mid-September wilted the school children to-day, and with difficulty youthful minds attempted to follow the intricacies of new lessons. Some of the boys found themselves sticking to the seats, and there were indications that the swimming places would be visited en masse as soon as the day closed. In the Public schools the children were permitted to retire at 3.30, and up and down George street, and elsewhere, the privileges of school days were enviously regarded. Last week was practically as warm as this, and the truth is that the present weather is so unseasonable that during the warmest hours of the day little profitable study can scarcely be accomplished.

Turkish Troops Are Mobilizing In Palestine For a Fresh Attack on Egypt

Two German Aeroplanes Brought Down in Air Battle Over British Lines—Two Zeppelins Destroyed by Allies' Guns

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Advices from Holland indicate two Zeppelins were destroyed by the Allies' gun fire during recent raids.

CAIRO, Sept. 15.—Turkish troops are mobilising in Palestine apparently for a fresh attack on Egypt.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 15.—A sensational report here says the Crown Prince has gone insane as a result of recent failures to advance in the Argonne.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Two German aeroplanes were brought down and the occupants killed after a battle in the clouds over the British lines.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 15.—An official says the Russians have taken thirteen thousand men and many guns in Galicia since Sunday.

ATHENS, Sept. 15.—Mytelene advices last night said French and British gained several square miles more territory on the Gallipoli Peninsula in general engagements by land and sea. One report declares three big Turkish forts were destroyed. The Allies' casualties were heavy but the victory was large.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—More than a score of Zeppelins were destroyed, many by British anti-aircraft guns, since the war began.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 15.—Dr. Dumba, Austrian Ambassador to the United States, will sail from New York, September 22.

ROME, Sept. 15.—It is believed in diplomatic circles here, that Portugal will soon declare war on Germany. Some German ships in Portuguese waters have already been seized.

TURIN, Italy, Sept. 15.—Four hundred thousand Armenians are thought to have been murdered by Turks and Kurds in the interior of Asia Minor. There is anarchy in Turkey. The army is demoralised.

MANY COTTAGERS ARE REMAINING

BRIDGENORTH, Sept. 14. — Some of the cottagers in the park have returned to their homes, but there are still quite a number left yet.

The potato crop is affected with the rote and quite a few of the village residents are taking them up to save them.

Mr. Geo. N. Bell, the inventor of the shell to cut down barbwire entanglements is off to Washington to attend to the patent of the shell. There are rumours that he has also invented a gun to be mounted on wheels to manipulate the shells.

Most of the farmers are through with the harvest. It has been one of the worst harvests known on account of the wet weather. There has been a very heavy loss in handling the grain this year.

There is a very fine crop of corn this year, and quite a number of farmers are putting up silos to hold the ensilage.

The threshing machines are very busy and will be. It is almost impossible to get one as they are engaged too far ahead.

PRACTICAL SIDE.

Percival Claude was greatly enamored of Maude Marie. Three times a week he could be found barking at her papa's front gate, and nearly all his salary was turned into cream chocolates by an appreciative confectioner.

"You don't know how much I love you, darling!" softly cooed Percival Claude, putting his arm around the dear girl one night when the moon was shining brightly and the crickets were chirping musically. "Gladly would I die for you!"

"Oh, Percival Claude!" ecstatically cried the darling. "Do you really, really and truly mean it?"

"Yes, dear," was the impressive rejoinder on the other. "Now, next week, any time."

"Say, Percy," suddenly exclaimed the fair girl after a moment's hard thought, "do you carry any life insurance?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

German Cavalry Force Driven Back From Railway Again in Hands of Czar

PETROGRAD, Sept. 15.—A German cavalry force that reached the Vilna-Petrograd Railway has been driven back and the railway line from Dvinsk to Vilna is again in the hands of the Czar, according to despatches reaching here to-day. Air scouts, however, report that the Germans under Gen. Von Bulow have received reinforcements and that large bodies of infantry are again approaching the railway. A big general battle is believed imminent along the Dvinsk-Vilna line.

Gen. Ruszky is maintaining his positions and inflicting severe losses on the enemy. Encouraging progress is being made in Galicia, where the forces under Gen. Ivanoff continue to press back the Austrians, taking many prisoners.

WAITING FOR DISAVOWAL.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—It is Germany's next move. This was the Government officials' freely expressed opinion to-day regarding the submarine war controversy. The Administration is waiting, and has hopes of securing from Berlin, a disavowal of the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic. Until Germany gives or refuses such a disavowal high officials said no active steps would be taken by the United States.

Regarding future developments in the Arabic case the President awaits Germany's response with new evidence of the Arabic crew and passengers at hand. Ambassador Bernatorff has submitted a summary of this evidence to his foreign office. The President thinks it utterly controverts the claim that the U-boat commander made a mistake.

That Germany will be brought to this, will discipline the undersea boat command, and then disavow his action, is the Administration' earnest hopes. If Germany refuses and stands by the commander's report, and contends that he may have been justified in mistaking the Arabic's alleged hostile intensions, America's course must then be determined.

DROVE TURKS FROM TRENCHES.

ATHENS, Sept. 15.—British marines distinguished themselves in a hot action near the tip of the Gallipoli Peninsula, while the Allied cruisers were bombarding the Turkish left from inside the Dardanelles.

Turkish shore batteries drove off the cruisers, leaving the marines without protection. The Turks swarmed in upon them but they held their positions despite heavy attacks by numerically superior forces. French reinforcements came to the marines' aid just before daybreak.

RETURNS AFTER TWENTY YEARS TO PAY FOR THEFTS

Bedford, Pa., Sept. 15.—Repentant for his past misdeeds, C. P. Ellis, of Denver, Col., an evangelist, is travelling over the same route he took twenty years ago, paying back merchants for goods which he and a companion stole. Travelling with a theatrical company a score of years ago, Ellis and his companion robbed the Blymer hardware store here of revolvers. The store of Beegle & James was entered and several pairs of shoes stolen. From here the trip went to Somerset, where several stores were entered and then again at Ligonier.

Ellis drifted West, was converted twelve years ago and has been preaching through Colorado. Recently he said he gathered enough money to come East and reimburse merchants for the articles stolen. The Blymer store now is conducted by a son of the proprietor who was robbed. After hearing Ellis' story he refused to accept any money. At Somerset, Ellis could find none of his victims, and after a day spent there went on to Ligonier.

Rumania Orders Mobilization

ROME, Sept. 15. —An Athens telegram to the Idea Nazionale to-day states that Rumania has ordered mobilization against Austria. The report is not confirmed from any other source.

WOUNDED AT THE DARDANELLES

LONDON, Sept 15—Brig Gen H. G. Casen has been wounded at the Dardanelles. His name was included in a list of seventeen officers killed or wounded on the Gallipoli Peninsula made public to-day.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalising blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefit.

RELATIONS OF RUMANIA WITH CENTRAL POWERS REACH CRITICAL STAGE

LONDON, Sept. 15.—A despatch to the Times from Sofia says: "The relations of Roumania with the central powers have reached a critical stage. The German Government, in a recent note, demanded permission for the passage of Austro-German troops through Roumanian territory and the fulfillment by Roumania of an undertaking to supply benzine and other supplies to a value of forty million dollars. Over two thousand German waggons laden with war material are waiting on the Roumanian frontier."

PARTIAL MOBILIZATION.

ATHENS, Sept. 14.—A partial mobilization of Roumanian troops has been ordered in preparation for eventualities following the concentration of Austrian forces in Transylvania, according to reports from Mucharest.

The situation on the Roumanian frontier is not considered immediately menacing by persons in official circles here, especially in view of the fact that Roumania is not yet fully prepared for eventualities. The tensity of the situation has prompted steps, however, for a closer understanding between Greece, Roumania and Serbia with a view to eventual action in the event of an Austro-German attack.

Bulgaria has not been included in these negotiations for it now is admitted that the Turco-Bulgarian agreement finally has been signed and that Bulgaria will not accept Serbian concessions.

Appeal By Armenians.

Sofia, Sept 11, via London, Sept 14 (delayed in transmission.)— The correspondent of the Associated Press was given the privilege to-day to read an interesting document addressed by Armenians to the Bulgarian Government interceding with the Government in behalf of the Armenians in Asia Minor, of whom it is asserted, nearly 836,000 have been driven from their homes. Of those who have been driven away to other parts of Asia Minor the document says that a number of them have been killed o rare missing. It does not, however, state their number.

ATROCITIES.

The petition says that many of the deported persons had adopted the Moslem faith. The bishops molested are said to include one burned alive, three hanged, three murdered, seven interned and two arrested. The fate of some of the other bishops is declared to be unknown. The petition asserts that massacres took place at certain points, and that many of those who were forced to leave home for other places died as a result of hardships on the roads.

FARMER RAISES NEW VARIETY OF VEGETABLES

LA MARQUE, Tex., Sept. 15 — Dan George, a truck farmer of this place, has succeeded in producing a new variety of vegetable by grafting the tomato plant upon the eggplant. The product of this blending of plant types is a vegetable that in some respects resembles the eggplant and in other ways is typical of the tomato.

George has one-half acre devoted to egg plant-tomatoes as he calls the new garden product. The yield is enormous. The fruit of the crossed plant is of deep purple colour on the outside closely resembling the egg plant product in that respect but the meat is the tomato red.

Force of Habit.

A consul in Guatemala tells a story of a man who ran a store in Retalhuleu who had been ordering candles from Germany for many years. Each candle was wrapped in blue paper. One shipment came wrapped in yellow paper. The people would not buy them. In vain he argued and showed that the candles were the same as he had been selling. It was no use, and he could not sell those candles until he sent to a paper supply house in Guatemala City and bought sufficient blue paper in which to wrap them. Then he had no difficulty in selling them.

Our Serial Story Page

The new count, my immediate predecessor, was not long in dissipating the great fortune left by his father, the worthy distiller. He had run through with the bulk of his patrimony by the time he was twenty-five and was pretty much run down at the heel when he married in the hope of recouping his lost fortunes.

The Schmicks did not like him. They did not approve of him as lord and master, nor was it possible for them to resign themselves to the fate that had put this young scapegrace into the shoes, so to speak, of the grim old baron Rothhoefen, who, whatever else they may have been in a high handed sort of way, were men to the core. This pretender, this creature without brains or blood, this sponging reprobate, was not to their liking. If I am to quote Conrad, who became quite forceful in his harangue against the recent order of things.

He, his wife and his sons, he sneered me, were full of rejoicing when they learned that the castle had passed from Count Hohendahl's hands into mine. I at least would pay them their wages, and I might, in a pinch, be depended upon to pension them when they got too old to be of any use about the castle.

All attempts on my part to connect the lady in the east wing with the history of the extinct Rothhoefens were futile. He would not commit himself.

"Well," said I, yawning in helpless collusion with the sleepy Gretel, "we'll let it go over till morning. Call me at 7, Britton."

I went to bed, but not to sleep. It was very clear to me that my neighbor was a disturber in every sense of the word. She wouldn't let me sleep. For hours I tried to get rid of her, but she filtered into my brain and prodded my thoughts into the most violent activity. She wouldn't stay put. But finally I dropped off.

I was aroused from my belated sleep by the sound of mighty cataracts and the tread of countless elephants. Too late I realized that the tourists were upon me! Too late I remembered that the door to my room had been left unlocked! One hundred and sixty-nine were huddled outside my door, drinking in the monotonous drivel of the guide who had a shrill, penetrating voice and not the faintest notion of a conscience.

I listened in dismay for a moment and then, actuated by something more than mere fury, leaped out of bed and prepared for a dash across the room to lock the door. On the third stride I whirled and made a flying leap into the bed, scuttling beneath the covers with the speed and accuracy of a crawfish. Just in time, too, for the heavy door swung slowly open a second later and the shrill, explanatory voice was projected loudly into my lofty bed chamber.

"Come a little closer, please," said the morose man with the cap. "This room was occupied for centuries by the masters of Schloss Rothhoefen. It is a bedchamber. See the great baronial bed. It has not been slept in for more than 200 years. The later barons refused to sleep in it because one of their ancestors had been assassinated between its sheets at the tender age of six. He was stabbed by a stepuncle who played him false."

A resolute beholder spoke up, "Can't we step inside?"

"If you choose, madame. But we must waste no time."

"I do so want to see where the old barons slept."

"Please do not handle the bedspreads and curtains. They will fall to pieces"—

I heard no more, for the vanguard had pushed him aside and was swooping down upon me. A sharp nosed man led the way. He was within three feet of the bed and was stretching out his hand to touch the proscribed fabrics when I sat bolt upright and yelled:

"Get out!"

Afterward I was told that the guide was the first to reach the bottom of the stairs and that he narrowly escaped death in the avalanche of horrified humanity that piled after him, pursued by the puissant ghost of a six-year-old ancestor.

"I sat bolt upright and yelled 'Get out!'"

CHAPTER VII.

I Meet the Foe and Fall.

THE post that morning, besides containing a telegram from Vienna apprising me of the immediate embarkation of four irreproachable angels in the guise of servants, brought a letter from my friends the Hazzards, inquiring when my castle would be in shape to receive and discharge house parties without subjecting them to an intermediate season of peril from drafts, leaky roofs, damp sheets and parasites.

I sat down and looked about me in gloomy despair. No words can describe the scene, unless we devote a whole page to repeating the word "dismal." Morning in the midst of repairs is an awful thing. I looked, despaired and then dictated a letter to the Hazzards, urging them to come at once with all their friends!

I needed some one to make me forget.

At 11 o'clock Poopendyke brought me a note from the chatelaine of the east wing. It had been dropped into the courtyard from one of the upper windows. The reading of it transformed me into a stern, relentless demon. She very calmly announced that she had a headache and couldn't think of being disturbed that day and probably not the next.

My mind was made up in an instant. I would not be put off by a headache—which was doubtless assumed for the occasion—and I would be master of my castle or know the reason why, etc.

In the courtyard I found a score or more of idle artisans, banished by the onsweeping tourists and completely forgotten by me in the excitement of the hour. Commanding them to fetch their files, saws, broadaxes and augers, I led the way to the mighty doors that [illegible] to the other side. I stood over my toiling minions, and I venture to say that they never worked harder or faster in their lives. By 12 o'clock we had the great doors open and swept on to the next obstruction.

At 2 o'clock the last door in the east antechamber gave way before our resolute advance, and I stood victorious and dusty in the little recess at the top of the last stairway. Beyond the twentieth century portieres of a thirteenth century doorway lay the goal we sought. I hesitated briefly before drawing them apart and taking the final plunge. As a matter of fact, I was beginning to feel ashamed of myself. Suppose that she really had a headache? What an uncouth, pusillanimous brute I—

Just then, even as my hand fell upon the curtains, they were snatched aside, and I found myself staring into the vivid, uptilted face of the lady who had defied me and would continue to do so if my suddenly active perceptions counted for anything.

In some haste, attended by the most disheartening nervousness, I tried to find my cap to remove it in the presence of royalty. Unfortunately I was obliged to release the somewhat cumbersome crowbar I had been carrying about with me, and it dropped with a sullen thwack upon my toes. In moments of gravity I am always doing something like that. The pain was terrific, but I clutched at the forlorn hope that she might at least smile over my agony.

"I beg your pardon," I began, and then discovered that I was not wearing a cap. It was most disconcerting.

"So you would come," she said very coldly and very levelly.

"It—it was necessary, madame," I replied as best I could. "You defied me. I think you should have appreciated my position, my motives—er—my"—

"Your position! It is intensely Napoleonic," said she, with fine irony. Her gaze swept my horde of panting, wide eyed house breakers. "What a noble victory!"

It was quite time for me to assert myself. Bowing very stiffly, I remarked:

"I regret exceedingly to have been forced to devastate my own property in such a trifling enterprise, madame. The physical loss is apparent—you can see that for yourself—but, of course, you have no means of estimating the mental destruction that has been going on for days and days. You have been hacking away at my poor, distracted brain so persistently that it really had to give way. In a measure, this should account for my present lapse of sanity. Weak mindedness is not a crime, but an affliction."

"Well, now that you are here, Mr. Smart, may I be so bold as to inquire what you are going to do about it?"

I reflected. "I think, if you don't mind, I'll come in and sit down. That was a deuce of a rap I got across the toes. I am sure to be a great deal more lenient and agreeable if I'm asked to come in and see you. Incidentally I thought I'd step up to inquire how your headache is getting on. Better, I hope?"

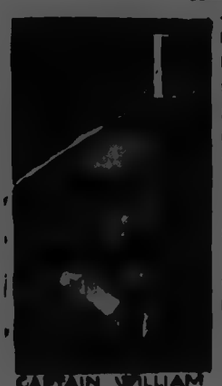
True Tale of the Sea—Mutiny on Board British Bark Casewell Was Quelled Only After Ship's Carpenter Killed Four of Crew

The following narrative, true in every detail, was written by Captain William Ferrie Wood, who at the time of the occurrence he describes was mate on board the clipper bark Windsor Castle.

"Through the skylight, I saw by the empty bottles that the mutineers had been drinking heavily."



CAPTAIN WILLIAM FERRIE WOOD.

LATITUDE 40 deg. north, longitude 32 deg. west, homeward bound to Falmouth for orders, the clipper bark Windsor Castle sighted a trim sailer whose general appearance was well found and well kept, but with an indefinable air of something wrong showing even in the set of her sails. Our skipper, Captain Edward Pilcher, an old sea dog of a school that has disappeared, squinted along his telescope and grunted disapproval, altering his course slightly to pass astern of the stranger.

As the Windsor Castle drew closer a tangle of flags fluttered toward the stranger's peak, bringing forth the caustic remark from our skipper:—"She is manned by lubbers or soldiers. Why do they want to hoist flags spaced like that?" A clear eyed youngster read the letters and danced with impatience as the skipper thumbed through his code book and, translated, "What is your latitude?"

"Latitude? What the blazes does he want latitude for? The sky is clear and the sun at high noon. If it were longitude I could understand their chronometer may be out. There is something wrong on that craft, and, Mr. Morgan [to the mate], clear away my gig and put some boys in her that can pull.

As the Windsor Castle, beautifully handled, crossed the stranger's stern we read her name, "Casewell, of Liverpool," and taking the weather position, Captain Pilcher hailed them to back their main yard and he would come aboard. The rattle of the boat davit blocks and the splash of the lowered gig alongside were not out of our ears before the skipper was climbing the side ladder, disdaining even to answer the mate's inquiry, "Will I put out the accommodation ladder, sir?"

As we came alongside the Casewell six or eight scared looking foreigners looked over her forward rail, while one man, who we afterward found was the ship's carpenter, directed a diminute boy, whose ferret face and cockney accent proclaimed his nationality, to give us a line and throw over the side ladder.

Climbing aboard, we were horrified. The poop and after decks were a shamble. By the companionway, on his face, arms and legs spread, lay a powerful looking foreign seaman with the whole top sliced off his head. The man had never moved an inch from where he fell. In a corner lay another in exactly similar plight, and close to a small scuttle lay another sailor with a boat axe imbedded in his skull, the handle click-click-clicking on the deck as the ship rolled to the swell and backed main yards.

"What has happened here?" demanded our skipper, grabbing a belaying pin from the rail, an example quickly followed by the boat's crew. "Murder or mutiny? Where are the captain and officers?"

"All dead, sir. Murdered by those brutes there!" was the astonishing answer of the powerful looking carpenter. "They meant to serve me and the boy the same way, but they will do no more harm. There is another on the staircase. Come up here and I will tell you all about it."

Captain Pilcher took one good look and, mounting the poop, glanced down the cabin staircase. A murderous looking ruffian, with a heavy revolver in hand and a wicked looking knife in belt, lay huddled at the bottom. The upper part of his head was crushed like an eggshell. A broad axe clotted with blood and hair lay near him. There was no mistaking the means or the sudden manner of their death.

"I see," said Captain Pilcher, grimly, "quick work and well done, but why?"

"First and foremost, sir," said the down looking carpenter, "I am Scotch and was only the ship's carpenter. Now I am captain of this craft and there's my commission.

"I did that," pointing to the three dead on and near the companionway. "The boy got the fourth, and worst, just in time to save me from being taken from behind. [illegible]" pointing to the living, "are what's left of the [illegible], and a white livered lot of curs they are or all this could not have happened.

"We left our loading port with the rakings and scrapings of a nigger boarding house for a crew, and until we crossed the line had no more than the usual troubles, but a fortnight's doldrums hauling and pulling the yards about under a burning sun and not a breath of fresh air blowing the dago crew could not stand the gaff. The skipper and mates kept them at it, and murmuring and discontent were all we heard. These four dead were the ringleaders; the others knew of the plot, but were too scared to tell. Last night when the mate was forward at the jib sheets the helmsman knifed the skipper from behind as he leaned over the taffrail. These two with the top of their heads missing tripped the mate and dumped him with an anchor shackle lashed to his feet. I was sounding the fore peak and had a hatch clapped on over my head, and the rest of the crew cowered in the forecastle.

"The boy was aloft stopping up sail gaskets and saw it all. Sliding down the forestay in front of the foresail, he hid himself over the bow until after dark, when he crawled down the ventilator to me and told me the captain and officers were dead, the wheel was lashed and the murderers were drinking in the cabin. They were going to do for me next and the boy also. I thought it was all up, but remembered if the boy was small enough to get in he could get out and release me, which he did, and, taking my broad axe from my shop and giving the boy a boat axe, we made our way aft before daylight.

"The rest of the crew had locked themselves in the forecastle and were hopeless. We removed our boots and in stocking feet made no noise. Peeping through the skylight, I saw by the empty bottles that the mutineers had been drinking heavily, but the leader was awake and saw me. Calling the others, I started to come on deck. I let the leader come clear of the staircase. One at a time was my game, and I had no intention of making any mistake. One swing of the axe settled him. The second, close at his heels, got the same medicine. The other two were suspicious and separated, one coming up the small hatch, the other, with knife and revolver, taking the staircase.

"He saw the bodies and halted as I swung, and the halt made me miss with the edge, but a backward swing gave him his finish. Edge or back, it was all the same.

"In the meantime the fourth man was up and made his rush from behind, the boy yelling like an Indian to warn me, and at the same time planting the boat axe just as you see it, and none too soon. It was all over in a minute; four dead men, my axe in my hand all dirtied up, and the boy leaning overside, sick. It seemed as if I was in a horrible dream and then I saw your sails."

"Well, we must clear up this mess, first," said Captain Pilcher, "and I'll put an officer on board to navigate you in, change some of my crew and we will keep company, anyhow."

"Not on your life, sir," said this extraordinary man. "I have brought her through this myself, me and the boy, anyhow, and we take her home to Falmouth ourselves. I want no outsiders to get the credit. If you will give me course and distance to English land I will get 'er there myself under easy sail.

"If you won't, I must go my own gait. I thought you were British, so I hoisted the flags. Maybe they are wrong, but I have gone through overmuch. The worst is over now. I am no scholar, but I can sail her. I'll thank you for course and distance only."

Our skipper looked him square in the eye and grudgingly allowed admiration to gleam from his own. "Chips," said he, holding out his hand, "you're a man! I never make any mistake in that, and if you start to take this ship home by yourself I will show you enough to do it. If you will not let me send her a navigator all that I ask is that you won't let anybody else do so later.

"Give me paper and pen and I will do the rest. Your position is 40 deg. north latitude, 32 deg. west longitude. You know the North Star? Good! Steer north by your compass until that star is 50 degrees high and the third star in the handle of the Dipper abreast of it. That's your latitude. Turn her east by compass. Keep the star abeam at 50 degrees altitude and sail 1,000 miles east to the Bishop Light. Remember, 600 miles north, 1,000 miles east. We will help clear the decks, sign your log and start you fair, and I think you can do it.

"Get those hounds aft to clear up this mess, make them sign the ship's log book and I will take a copy to clear you when you do arrive home, and good luck to you."

Their work ahead and night coming on, we helped clear her up while the skipper wrote out his copy and at nightfall pulled back to our ship. The wonderful part is that this extraordinary man made his port, got his pilot and anchored his ship without any outside help from any one.

THE LEGIONARY OF FRANCE AND ITS INSPIRING INFLUENCE

DE MAUPASSANT, describing an officer, said that just to look at him made one feel martial. He did not say warlike or bellicose. The idea he wished to convey was much more subtle. In the presence of this officer one assumed the military attitude of mind and body.

This is a phenomenon that escapes the attention of most people; women, however, observe it. Practically every non-military man at the sight of a well set up, fully accoutred soldier instinctively assumes something of a military bearing. And when the drums roll and a marching column of soldiers flashes into view the civilian involuntarily throws back his shoulders and steps out with a tense measured tread.

And as with civilians so with soldiers. The ordinary regiment becomes more military in the presence of the crack regiment. The crack regiment itself gains something more when in proximity to a detachment of troops of heroic, almost legendary, fame such as the Foreign Legion.

The Legionaries handle campaigns of their own, and probably no body of troops has ever done such constant and arduous campaigning. But France over and over again has used them also as leaven among other troops. They stiffen the mass and men emulate their actions.

The Legion was sent out to the Crimea and got no special credit for covering itself with glory, as that had been expected of it, but did reflect great credit on the judgment of those who had sent it out to help to inspire a whole army.

The Queen of Spain eighty years ago was in a hard fix with a civil war on her hands. The Carlists whom she was fighting were just as good soldiers as her own, if not a shade better. Then the Queen's generals had an inspiration of genius. If they could only get the French Foreign Legion into their army they felt the shade of advantage would move over to their side. So the Queen bought the Foreign Legion from the then King of France and for four years the Legion belonged to Spain.

In the present war part of the French Legion has been sent to the trenches of France and Flanders and Alsace and to the Dardanelles. Part of it remains in Africa, its normal habitat, doing some mighty vigorous campaigning in the Moroccan part of France's wonderful new African empire.

The Americans and other foreigners who are enrolled as volunteers in the French army are put in contact with the Legionaries, and this, while giving them scope for their fighting qualities and assuring them an opportunity for genuine campaigning, is the highest measure of protection for them. It guarantees them against foolish rashness, as well as against being led into traps or losing their heads in critical moments.

Fighting is routine work with the Legionary, just as sailing a yacht is to the expert mariner. The winds may be different on each trip and the craft is never handled twice in the same way, but the expert knowledge of the technique of his trade makes Legionary and skipper each a quiet bit proud of his task finished fashion.

Officially the Foreign Legion is composed of 8,000 men. In reality it is understood that it has nearly double that number, and the Legion becomes readily a whole army corps with the addition of some of France's colonial troops.

France for hundreds of years had regiments of Germans, English, Irish, Scotch, Swiss, Italians and other foreigners enrolled in her armies, but the present Foreign Legion may be considered as dating from 1831. One brief rule in its constitution says that the enlisting colonel may accept a man even though he does not present a birth certificate or identification papers. Wherefore the names of the English and American Legionaries have been Smith, Brown and Jones; of the Germans, Müller, Schwartz and Weiss; of the Italians, Rossi and Grosso; of the French, Pétiot, Legrand and Leclerc and so on. The name or previous condition did not matter, as the Legionary became a number. Almost invariably he had been a soldier, very frequently an officer.

The recruiting officer reads the candidate a warning lecture. "Don't you know what the Legion is, monsieur? Surely there is something better you can do. Severe campaigning in Africa or in China for a sou a day, or a few sous as you begin to advance. Is no bed of roses. You had better think it over, my [illegible] two. No? You already are aware? Very well, mon cher enfant," and his tone changes as he now speaks as a colonel to his soldier. "There is a glorious career down there for the right kind. If you are a good and faithful soldier you may go far. Good luck!"

The recruiting colonel can generally tell at a glance whether the candidate has served in and [illegible] the ranks, as sergeant or an officer. In the latter case he is [illegible] questioned on the point, and it can be [illegible] suggested, for his own benefit, that he confidentially inform his colonel when he arrives at the training quarters in Africa. One who has been an officer in a European army is usually taken into the corporals' class and may be advanced within a couple of years to be a sergeant of the Legion.

Why do men join the Foreign Legion? It has often been told how a fine young man, down on his luck or who has committed some haunting misdeed, is about to seek oblivion in the murky waters of the Seine when the timely arrival of a friend, with the hearty advice that one can commit suicide just as well in Algiers as in Paris, makes him decide to enlist in the Legion, and how this makes a new man of him and gives him a new lease of life. That has happened.

The popular theory is that men usually join the Legion on account of blighted heart affairs. This, however, does not correspond with the hard facts.

The man of romantic soul who in the bitterness of his heart would go out and die with his face to the foe does sometimes get as far as the battlefield. Usually the surgeon major detects him at the very first inspection. The romantic one soon realizes that being crossed in hopeless love is a much milder suffering for a man of soft hands, tender feet and otiose habits than is soldiering in the desert, and, besides, there is no remedy for the former. The occasional hopeless lover who does get into the Legion becomes a notorious cynic regarding the fair sex and usually makes a very gay devil may-care soldier.

Men enter the Legion chiefly, it would seem, because [illegible] of that kind appeals to certain [illegible]. Many of the men who join could assure themselves good pay and relatively easy times in the volunteer armies of other countries. If they join a corps in which the drilling is of the hardest kind, the fighting almost constant, with casualties exceptionally high; the discipline the most severe of which there is any record, the advancement slow and the pay practically nil, it will be understood that some men are born for hard soldiering.

Soldiering is what they get, and they get also the title to the proud boast that they are Legionaries. The man who can make this boast among soldiers knows that his right of city is at once acknowledged.

The term of enlistment is five years. Most men reenlist. There is a pension after thirty years' service, practically fifteen, as one year's campaigning counts for two, and campaigning is almost constant.

The age limit prescribed is eighteen to thirty-five years. All recruits are entered somewhere between that limit, but a remarkably large number of them are around forty when they join—they show no birth certificates. The Legion upsets many established theories. Legionaries between forty and fifty-five make far more durable and reliable soldiers than men between twenty and thirty. This, of course, is heresy to a certain class of physicians and trainers, but the hard facts sustain it.

Marshal MacMahon, Marshal Canrobert and many others of France's great soldiers have been officers of the Legion. Nowhere else is the test of an officer so severe.

Not only must he be a man of superlative military qualities, strong, courageous, highly skilled in the science of war, capable of obtaining and holding the esteem and respect of the hard, strong men whom he commands, but he must also be endowed with rare qualities of judgment, with a profound knowledge of human nature, with a capacity for reaching prompt and accurate decisions, with infinite tact and common sense.

The Legionaries are unusual men in many ways. They are subjected to a discipline of extraordinary rigor and severity. But to attempt to apply discipline by mathematical calculation would, at critical moments, be a fatal error—the error the Germans are charged with in Belgium and elsewhere. The officer must know how to be unflinchingly severe even regarding seeming trifles, but he must know also how to be deaf, dumb and blind at times regarding breaches which may seem of the utmost gravity. In other words, he must be intimately conversant with human nature and know that men are machines only up to a certain point, that at times something breaks, that responsibility cannot always be demanded.

It happens once in a long while that a battalion in the summer is back at a station and inactive. The men are up at half-past four o'clock in the morning and after six hours' work are given an hour and a half of rest, after which they resume the grind till five o'clock in the afternoon, when they get their second meal of soup for the day and are free until bed time. In this free time, of course, they have to take the daily bath and wash their uniforms, also a daily duty, and furbish all their accoutrements. But with a month or so of this life of ease the morale softens and in the meagre cafés or drinking places of the settlement on the edge of the desert an outbreak will take place some night as scandalous as would be an outbreak in a seminary of young clerical students.

But not many hours will elapse before the colonel has prepared the detail for an expedition into the desert or the mountains, for there is always work, if not urgent at least advantageous, to be done, and for several months to come that particular battalion will have neither leisure nor opportunity for boisterous outbreak. For months they will march, work and fight. They may eat and sleep in their spare moments, if they have any.

They are taught two things superlatively, to march and to fight responsibly. Each man must learn all there is to the art of fighting. He must learn to use his initiative, to be always ready to play a lone hand, to fight "on his own hook." The Legionary sums up his training as "le système D." (the system D., the initial letter standing for débrouillez-vous, "look out for yourself," or "pull yourself out of the difficulty").

The exact facts regarding the percentage of the various nationalities represented in the Foreign Legion is not known even to the French government, as the men, for appreciable reasons, do not make accurate statements when enlisting.

GUARDING GOLD AT SEA.

It would be natural to suppose that shipments of gold bullion backward and forth across the Atlantic on big liners would be attended by considerable precaution, but there is probably no other place in the world where the transport of great wealth is carried on with such simplicity.

One of our great liners has two strong rooms, the smaller being in close proximity to the captain's quarters, while the other is next to the provision department. The small strong room has its walls, floor and ceiling lined with two inch steel plate and contains nothing in the way of furnishing other than shelves. This has more than once contained enough gold to buy the liner many times over.

The locks, which are of the double variety, are rendered still more secure by covering the keyholes with steel hasps, which are themselves locked in place with massive padlocks. This strong room, being located in the most frequented portion of the ship, is passed by persons at all hours of the day and night, which, after all, is the great protection.

The strong room located near the provision department is twelve feet long by four feet wide, and it often happens that both these rooms are filled to capacity with gold bullion. On one occasion the two rooms contained £20,000,000 in gold bullion, packed in small kegs bound with steel hoops.—London Answers.

Unhappy Warsaw.

Not city in Europe has known so many changes of masters as Warsaw. Founded about the year 850, it was the capital of the independent kingdom of Mazovia until the fifteenth century, when it was annexed by Poland. In the seventeenth century its possession was contended for by Sweden, Russia, Austria, and Brandenberg, until, in 1764, Russia practically annexed it. In 1795 the city was handed over to Prussia, but Napoleon occupied it in 1806, and at the peace of Tilsit, Warsaw was proclaimed an independent duchy. In 1809 the Austrians seized the city, but lost it again, and after another brief spell of independence the city passed finally to Russia in 1813.

Anvils Date Back of History.

The anvil was known in the earliest times, being spoken of in the Bible, the prophet Isaiah saying (chapter 47, verse 7), "So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, and he that smooteth with the hammer, him that smiteth the anvil." It is not known who first used it, but of course the anvil of antiquity was unlike that of today as perfected by modern workmanship. The anvil still used in the orient, however, is a boot shaped piece of metal inserted in a section of oak or walnut log. Larger or smaller it is used by tinsmiths, shoemakers, silversmiths and blacksmiths. The anvils used in this country are commonly made of cast iron faced with steel and are of parallelopiped form, with a steel cone or beak at one end and a "handy hole" for inserting chisel or other tools at the other end.—Boston Globe.

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." —(Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

SUITABLE FOR SILK OR LINEN.

By Anabel Worthington.

Not only for silk and linen, but for many of the novelty cotton fabrics, as well as for such woollens as are not too heavy, this design will be found an excellent one.

It has a very pretty vest in the front of the plain blouse, and this can be made of pique or of some color in contrast with that of the rest of the frock. The front opening is in regular form, wider at the top than lower down. Around the neck is a small square collar ending in little revers in front of the shoulders. The sleeves are entirely plain, following the shape of the arm, and they may be made long or short.

The skirt shows the new fancy for yokes, and this one, a three piece design, has a pretty lower edge with large inverted scallops. The lower portion is in two gores and is of circular cut, plain at the top and flaring at the lower edge. This measures 2¼ yards in the medium size, avoiding exaggeration in either direction.

There are so many lovely novelties among the summer fabrics from which to choose something for this costume that no suggestions will be needed. Challie will be excellent for dull, damp days, and some of the figured voiles will also be attractive, while the staples, linen, pongee silk, gingham and many other weaves will all be suitable for such a design.

The pattern of this dress, No. 7,194, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4⅛ yards of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting fabric to trim, as shown.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

DARING COSSACKS

Russian Rough Riders an Old and Famous Body.

ONCE KNIGHTS OF FREEDOM.

In Former Times They Were Known Entirely as Defenders of the Poor and the Oppressed—Deadly as Marksmen and Experts With the Sword.

The popular conception of the Russian Cossack is a whiskered atrocity who rides with the speed of the wind, comes to do acts of pillage and of rapine and then goes back again into the bosom of the tall grass from which he came. By many he is supposed to belong to a legendary tribe whose history stretches back into the blackness of the dark ages from which he has not yet emerged.

No; the Cossack is in many respects like the simple Russian peasant. In others he is like the cowboy of the western plains, whose home is as much in the saddle as in his own village. Far from being oppressors, the Cossacks were once known entirely as the defenders of the poor and the wronged. They belonged to an order of rustic chivalry, the Kazachestvo, the Knights of Freedom.

The name Kazak is of Tartar origin and means "Freeman." It was applied to men driven from the more settled countries and who under the blue sky rode without the trammel of tradition, without the interference of kings, potentates and powers. There was a time when nobles laid heavy hand upon the subject and human life was held in small account.

The thirteenth and the fourteenth centuries saw the Cossacks developed into communities living in the neighborhood of the river Dnieper and riding hither and thither to keep watch and ward over the domain of the emperor.

The cowboy guards of the great southwest in this country, who are now disappearing from our American life, are Cossacks in spirit. When they become cavalrymen, Texas Rangers or rough riders they are American Cossacks.

There were some criminals among the Cossacks, but once they had enrolled in the Cossack legions they left behind them all their past. Some were exiles for political reasons, others had been hunted for taking into their own hands the avenging of wrongs. And what avails a name after all? When the officers of the state came inquiring into the Cossack encampments for Demetri this and Ivan that nothing was known of them at all, for the Cossacks permitted men to divest themselves of former titles and to begin the free life with a new nomenclature. To them the newcomer were "Big Nose," "Yellow Buttons" or some other nicknamed comrade.

While other persons paid taxes the Cossack was subject to no such inconvenient levy. His share was paid by the power of his sword and his pistols. He insisted always that he was not to be assessed, but that he should give his military service when Russia required it of him.

When the Cossack communities were first formed they were inhabited only by men. The Kazachestvo took vows of celibacy. It was an order that lived like anchorites and fought like demons.

As the ages have passed there have been many changes. The Cossacks have families and their own home life. At first, however, young and daring youths were sent out to ride with the Cossacks, and there was no system of chivalry more punctilious than was this government of the men of the steppes. Offenses that involved violation of their vows or the ill treatment of the weak and the oppressed were punished with death. The sentences were quickly imposed and speedily executed. Cowboy justice and Cossack rule are the same in principle.

The dress of the Cossack has become more or less conventional as the years have gone. We see him in the long coat of brown or of green, with the great lambskin cap on his head, with strong belts containing cartridges about his waist. He shows the influence of military training. The Cossack of today is a model of elegance compared with what he used to be. He seized garments covered with gold lace, coats of silks and sable and smeared them with mire and tallow to show his supreme disregard for fine trappings. He wore coarse garb, but in the care of his weapons the Cossack has always been punctilious.

His marksmanship was deadly and accurate, even when riding at full speed, as that of the cowboys of the western United States. The Cossacks have been expert swordsmen for centuries. Their proficiency in arms came from their environment. The steppes in which they sought their livelihood were covered with grass often so high only the head and shoulders of the riders appeared above the top of it. Game was abundant in those thick tangles, fruit could be obtained easily; the rivers teemed with fish. The wants of the Cossacks were few and simple. They could do with much or little. A slice of horseflesh curried under the saddle to keep it warm was a ration fit to be called a luxury.—New York Herald.

How Standing Armies Originated.

The earliest European standing army was that of Macedonia, established about 358 B. C. by Philip, father of Alexander the Great. It was the second in the world's history, having been preceded only by that of Sesotris Pharaoh of Egypt, who organized a military caste about 1600 B. C. Of modern standing armies, that formed by the Turkish janizaries was first, being fully organized in 1362. It was a century later that the standing army of France, the earliest in western Europe, was established by Charles VII. in the shape of "compagnies d'ordonnance," numbering 9,000 men. Rivalry thereupon compelled the nations to adopt similar means of defense. In England a standing army proper was first established by Cromwell, but was disbanded under Charles II., with the exception of a few regiments called the guards, or household brigade. This was the nucleus of England's present army.

Bather Drawn Through Pipe

ALLENHURST, N. J., Sept. 15.—Samuel Lash of New York, physicians said, probably will recover in spite of the most terrible ordeals ever experienced by a bather on the Atlantic coast.

Mr. Lash plunged into the bathing pool here not knowing that it had been closed for cleaning and was sucked through a 12-inch outlet pipe 250 feet long into the ocean.

Lash was drawn into the pipe in the position of a diver with his hands above his head and was cast out a quarter of a minute later with both arms broken at the shoulder and lacerated from head to foot.

Last of the Blewetts.

A cablegram which has been received recently from France by Jean Blewett, the celebrated Canadian author, announces that her nephew, Private D. Blewett, has been seriously wounded in the recent fighting in France. He is 19 years of age and is a son of William Blewett, of Kamsack, Sask.

Private Blewett is the last of a long and distinguished line of soldiers in the Blewett family history. The founder of the family came to Cornwall, Eng., from Normandy, France, with Edward the Conqueror, and all down the centuries the name of Blewett has been closely associated with Great Britain's army and navy. One of the Blewetts was an English admiral in the long ago, and two great-granduncles of Private Blewett, the subject of this sketch, were captains and two more lieutenants in the royal navy. Col. Blewett was killed leading his company in the assault at Fort Picuvena, the day of Badajos, in 1812. Both of Private Blewett's great grandfathers were officers in the British army. The sword of Admiral Blewett given him by his sovereign, has descended to the young Canadian, who has already proved himself a worthy descendant of those old world heroes of the Blewett family.

BRITISH HOLD A FIFTY MILE FRONT

"GERMANS HAVE SHOT THEIR BOLT"--KITCHENER

700,000 British Soldiers Now on Western Front

Lord Kitchener Makes Important Announcement in the House of Commons This Afternoon--British Lines Have Been Extended and Now Reach to a Point South of Arras---Secretary of War Says British Positions Are Being Constantly Strengthened.

NEARLY THREE MILLION HAVE ENLISTED

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Lord Kitchener announced in the House of Lords this afternoon that ten divisions, about 220,000 men have been added to the British forces in France and Flanders. These reinforcements, the War Secretary announced, have enabled the British to extend their lines for about seventeen miles taking over the trenches formerly held by the French. The British now hold about fifty miles of a 400-mile front in France, Flanders and Alsace, their lines extending to a point south of Arras. Lord Kitchener's statement to-day indicates probably 700,000 British soldiers are now on the Western front. "The Germans appear almost to have shot their bolt," said Kitchener. "Whereas they were making progress at a rate of five miles a day in Russia, their progress now is not more than one mile per day.

Lord Kitchener met the critics who complained there had been no change on the Western front with the statement that the British positions are being constantly strengthened. This is proven, he said, by the fact that the German attacks even with gas and liquid fire have been fruitless. He spoke too, of successful attacks by the Allies on the Western front, mentioning in particular the capture by the French of the Lorette Hills northwest of Arras. Besides the reinforcements already sent across the Channel new British armies are in training he said. The vote asked by the commons to-day brings the total appropriation for war to date by Great Britain to six billions three hundred and ten million dollars.

"Our positions in France and Flanders have been strengthened," said the Prime Minister. "We have displaced reinforcements to the Dardanelles where our connected front now extends for more than twelve miles. The Russian armies are unbroken, though compelled to retire."

Victory in the world war the British Prime Minister told the Commons, will come to the side which is able and continues to persue the war regardless of cost. In this world's greatest test of endurance, he said, the Allies with their combined resources, are bound to win. Asquith declared that since the war began nearly three million men have enlisted in the British armies.

Lord Kitchener touched significency on conscription in the latter part of his speech. "The new national registration act," he said, "would shortly give the Government possession of important figures.

"Upon this basis," Lord Kitchener said, "the Government can determine the numbers available for army service after filling quotas of the munitions workers.

"During my visit to the French front at the invitation of Gen. Joffre," added the British War Lord, "I was profoundly impressed with the high order of efficiency and morale exhibited by the French army."

Lord Kitchener also praised the fighting qualities of the Italians, whose armies already have won some brilliant success, he said.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—The French Ministry of Marine to-day informed the steamship companies that the appearance of German submarines off the mouths of the Loire and Gironde, need cause no alarm, and declared that the same measures used so effectively in the English Channel against submarines are now being employed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Assurances that the Administration considers the proposed billion dollar loan or credit to the Allies by American bankers within the limits of neutrality, and will not interfere, came unofficially from the White House to-day.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—It is reported from Quebec the Allan liner Pretorian, with 198 passengers and a number of returning wounded soldiers on board, collided last night in a fog with an unknown vessel below the Saguenay river. It is now at anchor. Details lacking.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—(French Official Statement)—The seventeenth day of the artillery battle around Arras in the Champagne region and in the Argonne, was featured by sporadic bomb fighting, the War Office reported this afternoon. Neither side made any important gains. Bomb and grenade combats were especially furious around Neuville, Brimencourt, Chaulnes and Lihons. The heaviest artillery fighting yesterday was around Camp Chalons.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 15.—The daily expenditure for war purposes is now exceeding the wildest dreams of financial experts. In moving a new war credit of one and a quarter billions to-day, Premier Asquith announced that the daily average expenditure from July 18 to September 11 was twenty-one million dollars. The cost is mounting higher every day. In a speech on May 4th David Lloyd George declared that the war up to that time had cost England about ten and a half million dollars a day.

War cost for the next few weeks will mount still higher, the Premier told the House of Commons, approaching 25 millions a day. Appropriation asked to-day, he declared, will last only until the third week in November. The Prime Minister's statement caused a sensation, because it is indicated that the cost of the war to England is doubling every four months. The main cause of the surprising increase in war expenditures, the Premier said, was the fact that Britain was making great advances to the Allies. At the same time she is buying provisions and munitions. These things, he said, were needed to complete the war programme and the country still stood in need of more labourers, women as well as men.

PATRIOTIC MEET IN HARVEY VIED WITH HARVESTERS

Large Attendance, However, and Splendid Meeting Was the Result —Three Speakers From Peterborough

YOUNG MEN BUSY JUST NOW

Three threshing machines laboured noisily and without interruption within easy hailing distance of Ventriss' School House, in the Township of Harvey, last night, while a patriotic meeting was in progress. The threshers were finishing up the work from two farms and were anxious to put everything in readiness for moving to a new scene of operations on the morrow. Hence they toiled on after dark, most of the men being neighbours assisting one another on the basis of co-operation. In spite of this adjacent and laudable competitive attraction there was a fairly large attendance at the meeting which was addressed by Col. Miller, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, and Mr. E. A. Peck. Many of the Harvey young men are in the West garnering the mighty harvest of the prairies. However, there is the promise of recruits; one young man stated that he and three pals intended to come into Peterborough in the near future, as soon as the crops are all in. Just now they feel that they are seriously needed on the farm. Financially, Harvey has done well, and intends to do better. No township in the country has made a better comparative showing.

In his address Mr. Peck dealt with the causes of the war, the situation and circumstances that drew Great Britain into it, and the necessity of defeating the Teuton armies.

Col. Miller made a strong plea for assistance, pointing out the need of men and money; a general and local treatment was the plan of Mr. Gillespie's remarks.

The speakers were accorded a cordial reception and an attentive and enthusiastic hearing.

ELECTRIC FIRE AT THE SUB.-STATION

The Hydro-Electric sub-station at the eastern end of Simcoe Street was the target of a lightning bolt during this afternoon's severe electrical storm. Galvanized iron is used as an outer sheeting on the building and it at least offered no resistance to the electricity. The lightning shot a hole through the wall and set fire to whatever inflammable material lay within its reach. Some of the woodwork was burned but the various electrical instruments are believed to have escaped damage. Chief Howard used chemicals instead of water and thus curtailed the damage.

DOCKET FOR THE HIGH COURT

Chancellor Boyd will preside at the fall sittings of the High Court which open on Monday next. The following list of cases will come up for hearing:

John McNish versus the Peterborough Review, also John Mehaffy versus the Review. Plaintiffs allege that the publication, referred to, caused to be published certain malicious statements. Mr. R. R. Hall is appearing for the plaintiffs and Mr. R. Ruddy for the defendant.

Garnett Innis versus the Anglo-American Insurance Company, in an action in which the plaintiffs claim the sum of $2,000 as compensation for loss sustained when the barns of the plaintiff were destroyed by fire. The company withheld payment of the claim upon the grounds that the property insured was improperly described. Mr. G. N. Gordon is appearing for the defendant.

Mr. J. R. Stratton is plaintiff in an action to recover $3,400 represented by a promissory note. M. Pappas and a Toronto man are the defendants.

LOCAL SOLDIERS LOOK FORWARD TO EXHIBITION

Men of the 80th Battalion Will Take Prominent Part in Programme —Uniforms Will Be Provided as Soon as Possible

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The big event for the men of the 80th Battalion this week is the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, at which the khaki lads will be present on Friday and Saturday. The presence of the soldiers will not only provide a spectacle that will be appreciated by the crowd, but it is hoped will be a decided incentive to recruiting, and every advantage will be taken of this fact. The detachment will parade at the armouries at 1.30 o'clock on Friday afternoon, and, headed by the massed bands of the 57th Regiment, Salvation Army, and 80th Battalion, march to the Exhibition Grounds, here will be a march past the grandstand and after which a squad from the 80th will give exhibitions of physical drill to music supplied by the 80th Band.

Several recruits who have been in hospital for minor operations, reported for duty at the Armouries this morning.

A short time ago a young Peterborough man almost precipitated a riot in the local recruiting office by proclaiming that the present conflict was not Canada's war. That his opinion was quickly changed is evidenced by the fact that he was one of the artillery recruits who left yesterday morning to join the 33rd Battery.

A recruiting sergeant will be left at Apsley after to-night's meeting under the auspices of the Speakers' League. The speakers will be His Honour Judge Huycke, Rev. Canon Davidson and Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P. for East Peterborough. Lieut. Stewart of the local detachment of the 80th Battalion will accompany the speakers.

Fifty Lakefield Recruits.

Lakefield, Ont., Sept. 14.—William Lamey and Stanley Hill, who enlisted here, were presented with gold pieces by the Epworth League. Sherman Mahood was given a wrist watch by the Young People's Association of the Anglican Church. Mr. W. Quinn received a fountain pen from the Presbyterian Sunday School where he was secretary and librarian, and was given a wrist watch by his employer Mr. T. Crawford. Mr. Allan Clark was given a fountain pen by the choir of the Presbyterian Church, a wrist watch from Lakefield Lodge, I.O.O.F., and a Masonic ring from the staff of Mr. J. A. Porter's store. Lieut. G. R. Browning, of the local company of the 48th, has offered for overseas services. This makes over fifty Lakefield men who have enlisted since the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Burnham received a communication from the Militia Department this morning announcing that the local detachment of the 80th Battalion would be supplied with boots and uniforms as soon as possible. The department is anxious to forward these supplies which the manufacturers have been handling as rapidly as possible. They will be forwarded to Peterborough immediately.

DAILY USE OF A HOUSE OF PRAYER

At the request of a number of members of St. John's church a series of short daily informal services of intercession for the needs in connection with the war was inaugurated to-day beginning at 5.15 p.m. and lasting for about ten minutes. The service will be continued daily until further notice. It will be of a general, rather than a distinctively Anglican character, and all citizens desiring to cooperate in what is really a national effort will be heartily welcome.

It was felt that from its central position St. John's was suitable for the purpose.

On Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 12 noon the members of the Auxiliary take their part in a continued chain of intercession offered throughout the Diocese of Toronto.

In addition to these special efforts St. John's is open at all hours of the day for rest, meditation and prayer, and also for inspection by visitors to the city.

NO QUITTERS AMONG CANUCKS IN THE TRENCHES

Canadian Correspondents Find Spirit Everywhere of Hope and Confidence in Eventual and Permanent Success

UNANIMOUS IN SENTIMENT

Special Cable:

LONDON, Sept. 15.—(Special cable).—"We were not professional soldiers before this war started, we enlisted from a sense of duty; we have had strenuous times, but you can send this message to Canada, the Canadians with the British troops on the Flanders front are here to fight till victory comes our way, till we drive the Huns out of Belgium and totally cripple the military powers which brought about this fierce war."

These words of a Canadian University graduate serving as a private in the Canadian infantry regiment within a few hundred yards of the German entrenchments in Belgium epitomized the prevailing sentiment of the soldiers from the Dominion beyond seas, visited by the Canadian journalists now touring the battle front.

The sentiment was everywhere the same. Bronzed and battle scarred veterans of St. Julien, Festubert and Hooge— Canadians who had fought and bled, who had been sent to hospital and returned to duty, veterans of the Northwest rebellion and South Africa some of them, men from every part of Canada, of every arm of the service. They talked of home, of course, and would be glad if the war was over, so that they could return to their loved ones, but there was no sign of the "quitter" among them, but everywhere of hope and confidence in eventual and permanent success.

The Canadian correspondents found everywhere evidence of preparedness of stern work ahead. Evrything seemed to move like a gigantic machine in supplying the wants of the huge army, in the way of munitions and food.

The correspondents in the first party return to-day and another party of Canadians go to-night.

The main building has been greatly enlarged so as to furnish ample accommodation for all exhibits, and the Society has added three more acres to the grounds and the track for speeding has been increased to a half mile.

SUCCESSFUL REHEARSAL

The choir of George street Methodist church, about forty in number, met last night, and had the first practice of Spohr's "Last Judgment." This work is to be given at a not very distant date, and judging by the preliminary practice a successful and accomplished rendition under the baton of Mr. J. H. Renwick, seems to be the only outcome of the choir's labours.

BIG ATTRACTION IS BOOKED FOR MIDWAY

Ten Performers in Vaudeville Acts Secured Concession for Peterboro' Exhibition To-day—Other Attractions Already Signed Up.

Major A. G. Larter.—Promoted to Captain's rank, to take charge of the troops supply column at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

MIDWAY IS PROMISING

A big vaudeville show with ten performers and a good outside act, was signed up to-day for the midway of the Peterborough Exhibition. This is an eleventh hour extra. All the other attractions secured their concessions early and it was intimated to-day that the "one ballyhoo" will be noisier and more active than ever.

This latest attraction is said to be a particularly good one. They had the last two days of the week unbooked, and rather than remain idle decided to come to Peterborough. They have a tent 100 by 50 feet, and their advance man says them will be easily the best attraction on the midway. That, however, remains to be seen. Their outdoor act is of the straight jacket and handcuff variety and is in itself decidedly interesting.

Citizens and farmers alike will welcome a lively and attractive midway.

MAY'S SCHOOL DEMAND $5,300

Salaries of Five Teachers Tota $2,800—Two Hundred and Thirty Pupils Attending

The teaching staff of May's school has grown to five, their aggregate salaries $2,800.00, and the demand from the North Monaghan Council for school purposes, including debenture interest, is now $5,300.00 a year. A few years ago the trustees were able "to get along" on $500 a year, but as the city's population overflowed the south-western boundaries, their children, two hundred and thirty of them, became pupils of the township school. They assemble from an area with a radius of two miles, some having to walk from the Brinton Carpet vicinity. The Monaghan people are proud of their five-room school, but many of them look a second time at the cost of its upkeep.

JUNK DEALER CONVICTED AND FINED

Hugh Connors was fined $10 and costs and ordered to compensate the Canadian General Electric Company to the extent of fourteen dollars. Connors was convicted of receiving a quantity of copper wire from three boys. The latter pleaded guilty to stealing the wire and were allowed to go on suspended sentence. The case was heard this morning before Magistrate Dumble.

The junior member of the trio was the first witness called. On Sunday, September 5th he visited the yard of the company, and in company with another youth removed a rail full of short pieces of copper wire. Returned home and had the wire in a shed. The entered the yard of the Canadian General Electric Company by crawling through the fence. Next day the boys sold the wire to Connors.

SUMMER WORK AT CHEMONG PARK

Dr. Archbold held the morning service on the Park pavilion, following which the offering being given to help buy the material for bandages. The afternoon tea under the auspices of the Archbold Chapter, under the management and preparation of Miss Baldwin, there was served to the Progressive Euchre Club 200 sandwiches, 7 ring cakes and 7 slips. Twenty-five dollars was raised by a sale and eight dollars and twenty cents, the offertory at services, a donation of cakes, jams from Mrs. Hopewood and Mrs. W. H. Hill. The material over this amount was supplied by the Progressive Club.

The Brownworth band met the afternoon at Mrs. Baldwin's to make bandages.

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN LOCAL DENTIST

Dr. W. C. Gowan, 186 Brock street, died this morning at 7.30 o'clock.

The late Dr. Gowan leaves a widow and two sons, namely, Hubert and Julian. Also two brothers and one sister. One of the brothers, Dr. T. J. Gowan, of Morning Mills, is expected in the city this evening. Dr. Albert Webster, Dean of the Royal College of Dentistry, Toronto, is a cousin.

Dr. Wm. Gowan was born in Nottawasaga in the Province of Ontario, on the first day of November, 1864. He was a son of the late Colclough and Charlotte Gowan. His father was a member of the Gowan family dwelling in Queen's County, Ireland, and also to the Westend family of which Captain Hunter Gowan, distinguished in the rebellion of 1798 was a member. Dr. Gowan received his preliminary education at the Collingwood Collegiate Institute and Model School at Bradford and for a short period of time was engaged in Public school teaching. He was afterwards engaged in the work of photography in Toronto, Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago. In 1891 he entered the Chicago College of Dental Surgery and there graduated in 1894 with the degree of D.D.S. and also graduated at Toronto in 1896 with the degree of L.D.S. He entered the practice of his profession at Cremorne, Ont. in 1895, and in 1896 he moved to Peterborough. He was a member of the Ontario Dental Society since 1897 and was a distinguished member of the leading American and British Dental Societies. He attended the fourth national congress at St. Louis in 1904 and the Louis and Clark Congress at Oregon in 1905 at both of which he contributed papers on Dental Science, opening up new branches of research which brought him into prominence before the profession in the United States and Great Britain. He was an interesting writer on certain matters relating to his profession and many of his articles have appeared in the leading dental publications and he was requested by the editors to write English work on The Science and Practice of Dental Surgery to furnish several chapters which work was published in London, England in 1914. He was a man highly respected by all for his good qualities and in the community for his quiet and retiring disposition, invariably refusing to accept of honour in any profession.

The remains will be removed to Cremorne, Ontario, via C.P.R. train leaving Toronto this morning. The funeral will be private.

THE WEATHER

The thermometer yesterday registered 87 degrees in the shade and to-day at noon it stood at the same figure. The hot wave has been followed by an electrical storm accompanied by a very heavy downpour of rain which should cool the air and bring more moderate conditions.

RED CROSS AUXILIARY

A largely attended meeting of the women of St. Paul's church was held in the school room on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 14th, for the purpose of organizing a society to cooperate with the local branch of the Red Cross Association. Mrs. J. Allan presided over the meeting, which was opened with singing and prayer led by Rev. Mr. Pogue.

The opening words were spoken by Mrs. Allan, and her special message was the great need for women workers at the present time and the opportunities afforded by the Red Cross Society for all willing to do their part.

Mrs. Allan was followed in her address by Mr. Keyes who took as his subject, the three great principals, Liberty, Justice and Equality. These addresses were a great stimulus to all present and will no doubt bear fruit in the work in which the organization is engaged.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 15, 1915

THE EXHIBITION.

Don't let other distractions, due to the demands of patriotism, turn or keep attention away from the Peterborough Industrial, which opens its appeal to public patronage on Thursday, nominally, but especially on the "big days," Friday and Saturday next. The Exhibition is a part of our war work. If patriotism and production go together, the production, represented by the exhibition is worthy of attention. The prospect is that the Exhibition this year will show an advance in all departments, and be increasingly worthy of patronage. One of its chief merits is the great opportunities it presents for the people of the city and country getting together and getting the mutual point of view in regard to common interests. They will have opportunities for exchanging views on the great issue that engrosses all minds, and the military displays will help to concentrate attention upon our duty and help stimulate us to action in more directly meeting it.

THE TIME HAS COME.

The action of Germany placing women and children in front of her advancing forces in the East, to prevent the enemy from using their arms to full advantage, is a repetition of the cowardly tactics that were practiced in and upon Belgium. The Huns feel that they can safely practice such a trick. They know that the enemy has a human regard for the lives of defenceless non-combatants, a regard that Germany has failed to show in all her operations on sea and land—by her Zeppelin raids and her submarine destruction of ships laden with peaceful, unarmed, and defenceless, men, women and children. We have had repeated evidence that Germany is restrained by no considerations of humanity or fair fighting, such as would appeal to civilized nations.

Though we in Canada are not directly exposed to the danger of the application of the spirit behind German barbarity; yet we are not free from danger. We must reflect that if every effort is not employed to defeat and crush the German power of evil doing; that if we permit Germany to triumph, we shall come under German domination. And from what we have seen from former, as well as recent manifestations of the German spirit, we shall be compelled to submit to conditions that are almost unthinkable. These conditions are not a mere alarmist suggestion; but are as certain to come if Germany is permitted to win, as the sun is to rise to-morrow.

It is therefore seen that Canadians have something to consider besides the discharge of their duty as a part of the Empire, which has gone into this great war in championship of the rights of the oppressed, and in the interests of human freedom. We have to fight literally for our lives; for our menaced homes, and our menaced liberties, and all the conditions of peaceful, prosperous and happy life. The lesson to Canadians is direct; and the lesson involves a call. That is a call to every able-bodied Canadian of military age and capacity to join the ranks in the fight against the enemy that indirectly but surely, if allowed to win, threatens our individual liberties, the integrity of our homes, and all that are dear to us. The time has passed when we can content ourselves with perfunctory interest in the tremendous issue forced upon us. This war, in its magnitude, in its numerous national ramifications, in its wide area and wide reaching effects, is unprecedented in the history of the world. The conditions and the call to duty are also unprecedented. The necessity for action is without precedent. We have never been confronted with anything a tenth part as serious. We must face the situation like men; and this obligation comes to every Canadian eligible for enlistment. The problem is becoming narrowed down to a personal issue. The danger is not alone now to defenceless and assailed small nations; not to human liberty in the abstract and in large, but to the personal liberty and well-being of all the population of the British Empire; to every Canadian home and family; to every individual unit of the population—to you. Our young men must think; and if they think to the point of realisation of the danger of the crisis that is at hand, they can do no other than throw themselves into the fight to avort the danger. It can be done by all whose interest and duty are appealed to, uniting actively in the fight. And it can only be done by such unity of action. Now is the time to show ourselves men.

THINKING WOMEN.

The Otonabee Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire are to be credited with more than academic ambitions. They have not only shown themselves practical and hard-working, but they have applied themselves to the supreme test—self-denial in the interest of the cause they represent. Instead of appealing for funds to the public by the numerous direct and indirect means usually employed, they will raise funds for the prosecution of their activities by weekly contributions, themselves, in turn contributed by personal self-denial. This is the spirit that should animate us all, and if it were more generally deferred to we should get more means for effective work; and recruiting would be much more active.

The new departure by the Chapter seems at first academic, but it will doubtless have practical results, such as come from thought and information. The Chapter proposes, in the words of the secretary—

> "To offer a prize of a five-dollar gold coin or handsome silver medallion (as the winner may choose) to the children of the Public Schools for the best essay on "Why is the British Empire at War."

This generous and thoughtful offer involves both the academic and the practical. It will stimulate the pupils to do what the school curiculum does not enough encourage, to think, to apply themselves to research, and seek the underlying causes of historical events, instead of confining themselves to rote attention to the dry facts of history. It will get pupils and those with whom they associate a better understanding of the causes of the war, and of the righteousness of its object. It will be a present day application of solution to the problem of Southey's "Little Peterkin"—

> Now tell me all about the war
> And what they killed each other for.

The Chapter is to be congratulated upon having proposed this competition; and it is no surprise that, as stated, Mr. Inspector Mowat has given the proposal his hearty approval. We may expect that the medium selected to present it to the pupils of the schools, Miss Harstone, will give it a currency and vogue that will create the deep interest we should expect would be created. Without being patronizing we should encourage women who think as well as act, and help their work. They should not be allowed to add to the personal self-denial they practice to promote their work, by allowing them to bear the expense of the prize their public-spirited proposal offers in the general and great interest of the public. Some public-spirited citizen has an opportunity to donate the prize, if it is not already provided for.

WHY PEACE IS IMPOSSIBLE NOW

Germany has had enough of the war. She will fight on desperately and determinedly if she is forced to fight, and she will not be beaten without many more months of fearful struggle and endurance. Her successes have been considerable, but she fears her power to hold on to them. The German general staff knows that she has passed the zenith of her strength, and that neither Great Britain nor Russia have reached their's. Germany never neglects anything that might made to her advantage. Peace now would necessarily leave her some of the spoils, and would enable her to prepare for another attempt to plant her jackboots on Europe. Peace now would, therefore, be a betrayal of the cause of freedom and democracy, and would make all the suffering and sacrifice of the last twelve months absolutely useless.—London Daily Express.

THE PEACE INTRIGUE.

The object of the present revival of the "peace" intrigue is doubtless rather to shift the blame for the prolongation of the war upon the Allies than to excite any real peace movement amongst responsible neutrals. But the scheme is too transparent to succeed. The German Press Bureau has a very pretty talent and a great deal of industry, but its warmest admirers must allow that its manner is crass. With a little more respect for its audience and a little more delicacy of conception it would not be so stupid as to repeat these peace choruses from half a dozen quarters quite so simultaneously. The practice shows a really lamentable lack of the artistic sense amongst the hard-working and experienced officials of the Reptile Department.—London Times.

It is better not to always judge a woman by the husband she selects.

RUSSIAN BUREAUCRACY IS RESPONSIBLE FOR LATE RUSSIAN REVERSES

The story coming from Stockholm telling of the widespread public indignation in Russia against the failure of the government to keep the army supplied with munitions of war is but confirmation of reliable information that has come out of Russia within the last six weeks. There can be no question that the Russian bureaucracy has failed and that its failure is the chief reason for the defeat of the Russian armies in Galicia and Poland.

Mr. Samuel G. Blythe, the experienced American correspondent, has recently spent some weeks in Russia, being there during the early and middle stages of the Russian retreats, and in his articles on the subject, compiled from information gathered in civil, governmental, and army circles, he has placed the blame for the failure of the armies under Grand Duke Nicholas on the incompetency and dishonesty of the bureaucracy. According to him, there has been more dishonesty than incompetency. Added to this, there has been the German influence—an influence that has endured even during the war, its tentacles being rooted in the civil service and at the court itself.

There has never been a word of condemnation for the Russian armies. Everywhere there has been the greatest praise for their bravery and fortitude. Their loyalty has been almost ideal. But if Mr. Blythe's sources of information are to be trusted, the Russian soldiers in some cases have fought the well-equipped Germans with clubs because grafting bureaucrats at Petrograd prevented them from having guns. Against this dishonesty Grand Duke Nicholas was impotent. He did the best he could with what he had, displaying generalship that has never been surpassed, but clubs were poor weapons against the all-efficient German guns.

With the fate of Russia more surely in the balance than that of any other nation engaged in the war, the Russians, who have seen their sons and brothers fall by the thousands in a hopeless fight will not long endure such treachery at the seat of government. Already the Czar seems to have taken the matter into his own hands, but if the Czar should fail there is something stronger than him in Russia for the correction of the evil, and that something is the Russian people, aroused to the real reason or the loss of their territory and the defeat of their armies.

It will take some time — many months, perhaps for Russia to retrieve the effect of this treachery, but she will retrieve it. A people who have answered so nobly to the call to fight an alien foe will not suffer defeat at the hands of that foe through the workings of an internal enemy.

The Russians will come back, there is nothing more certain, but in the meantime the effect of the graft and treachery of the Petrograd bureaucracy goes beyond Russia. It extends to the western allies. Because of Russia's failure they will have to do more, and especially will Britain have to do more. It was very likely his knowledge of the Russian situation which inspired Lloyd George to his latest appeal to the energy of the British people. Had Russia been able to stand her ground, the peril would have been past by now. But with Russia's failure, that peril is still present. The efforts which would have sufficed with Russia giving adequate battle to the enemy will no longer suffice. And it is the British who must make up the deficiency. France cannot do it, because France has been putting forth almost her maximum strength for a year.

Something New.

Many advertisers are constantly trying to think up "Something New" or "Different" and the results are startling to be sure, but certainly not convincing nor conducive to increase in the business of the advertiser.

The craze for originality is a mistake. People do not care for stunts or mental gymnastics. They do want to know the facts in regard to your business and whether you can offer better prices or better quality than your competitors.

Tell the facts in a straightforward, unassuming manner. You will gain the confidence of your patrons, and you will find that advertising pays abundantly.

How to Absorb an Unlovely Complexion

The face which is admired for its beauty must have a satin-smooth skin, pink and white and youthful looking. The only thing I know of that can make such a complexion out of an aged, faded or discolored one I mean a natural, not a painted complexion is ordinary mercolized wax. This remarkable substance literally absorbs the unsightly cuticle, a little each day, the clear, healthy, girlish skin beneath gradually peeping out until within a week or so it is wholly an evidence. Of course such blemishes as freckles, moth patches, liver spots, blotches, and pimples are discarded with the old skin. If you will procure an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, use like cold cream every night, washing this off mornings, you will find it a veritable wonder worker.

Another valuable natural treatment is a wash lotion to remove wrinkles which can be easily prepared. Dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and you will find it "works like magic." Phyllis Moore, in Town Talk.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A SALON DIALOGUE

(By William Chandler)

"What a pity it is," said Betty Chamberlin to me, "that Harry Ashurst is going to throw himself away on that Perkins girl!"

"What's the matter with Ida Perkins?" I asked.

"Oh, nothing," replied Betty, "only she's not half good enough for Harry."

"Why don't you interrupt the proceedings?"

"How could I do that?"

"Step in between them."

"You flatterer! One would think to hear you talk that I could have any man I want for the asking."

"So you could and not half try."

Betty tried hard to conceal the pleasure my appreciation of her powers gave her, but failed.

"There's one man I could try."

"Who?"

"The first letter of his first name is A."

"That's because you never tried. My first name is Jane."

"Perhaps I will."

"What would poor Harry do in the meanwhile? He would be swallowed up by Ida Perkins."

"Oh, that affair could wait."

"When are you going to begin on me?"

"Your Oh, you can wait too. Good morning. Come and see me some day. I have that to tell you."

"Very soon. Good-bye."

This scrap of conversation, which I am free to admit was not concentrated wisdom, occurred at the glove counter of Jones', where I met Miss Chamberlin. The next time I saw her was at Mrs. Winter's salon, so called from the brilliant dialogues that take place there. Betty was tied to Ashurst. He was a graduate of a scientific school and could drown her in a pool of ideas seven feet deep. I was sandwiched between two girls directly behind them. We conversed with one another, but had our ears open for what Ashurst and Betty were saying. One of the girls beside me was Ida Perkins. The only remark that could be considered to refer to the couple in front of us was made by Ida. It was this:

"Leave out the 'you' and I will answer the question," I replied.

But he wouldn't, and I confess I would not have been pleased if she had.

Betty made a betement with Ashurst at that salon, and that's the way she did it.

"I have heard, Mr. Ashurst," she was saying, "that you are not one of the kind to feel certain of anything and that you never force your opinions on any one."

"Confound those persons who know everything!" grunted Ashurst.

"So say I; that is, I mean persons who don't know as much as other persons who know a great deal, but are not constantly trying to show it off."

This was a trifle mixed, but Ashurst didn't seem to mind it.

"Some of the women here make me laugh," Betty went on. "They think they're quite wise. Don't they, Mr. Ashurst?"

"I don't know; some of them do."

"I heard one of them just now talking about the late European war. She said the allies had the best generals, only they had been short of ammunition."

"Which allies?"

"Why, I suppose she meant is there more than one ally?"

I saw Ida Perkins and Belle Townsend. Belle was the other side of the sandwich that had me for a middle. I looked at each other. Fortunately for Betty a lady passed her, bidding her good evening and making a remark about the weather. So Bet was not obliged to go any further into the military problems of the great war. Indeed, it had not been her intention to do so. She had become inadvertently drawn into it by attempting to hold up one of her rivals in an unfavourable light.

"Are you fond of motoring, Mr. Ashurst?" was her next remark. "I don't suppose you are. At least so busy a man as you is not likely to have time to enjoy yourself."

Ashurst was the scientific adviser of a gigantic manufacturing corporation. He looked relieved that Betty should have spared him the trouble of answering the question she had asked him. But his beautiful eyes and brain that they serve her a better purpose than her tongue, for unfortunately the latter member cannot wag without drawing on her brain.

"The reason why I asked you if you were fond of motoring is that I have a car and if you could spare me some afternoon about 4 o'clock"

"I should be very happy," was the reply.

"Don't you think an ice would cool us? These rooms are very warm."

They arose and went elsewhere. Bet had caught sight of Ida in rather too close proximity to suit her.

The next time I saw Betty I congratulated her on her engagement to Ashurst. "Didn't I tell you," I said, "that you could if you tried?"

"What's this I hear about you and Ida Perkins?" she asked, looking at me anxiously.

"Oh, we're engaged, too."

I have never since regained the place I occupied in Betty's good graces. I don't see why. Surely she could not have Ashurst and me, too. Perhaps if I had married any but the girl she robbed of another man she might have remained my friend.

Will Threatens Curse if it is Not Borne Out

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.—Mrs. Magdalena Merkel, in her will, filed for probate by her eldest daughter, directed that her daughters Magdalena and Elizabeth be guardians of her other children, Gertrude, Mary and Alois, and threatened that her curse would be upon them and they should have no rest upon earth if they failed to carry out her directions.

The will was written by Mrs. Merkel about nine months before her death, three years ago, and was still enclosed in the sealed envelope in which she had left it in the care of her daughter. Magdalena, when the latter brought it to the office of the probate clerk.

Miss Merkel said that neither she nor any member of her family knew the contents of the will, as it had never been opened and read. She had had no intention of filing the will until her father advised her to do so when he told her a few days ago that he might marry again, she said.

In the will Mrs. Merkel directs that her husband Joseph, be permitted to live in the family home until the house is sold, when the proceeds are to be divided equally among her children and the husband, but he is not to receive his share until he is seventy years old. He is now fifty-one. The house is not to be sold unless $3,000 is obtained for it.

The will was written in German and witnessed by Andrew Kuenzel and John Nauert. Mrs. Merkel wrote the will shortly after a severe hemorrhage led her to believe she was about to die, her daughter said. Elizabeth Merkel died about a year after her mother's death.

Inventor of Automatic Pistol Says Allies' Triumph is Certain

NEW YORK, Sept 14.—"There is no question in my mind that the Allies eventually will win this great war It may not be this year or next, but it is inevitable. They gradually will wear out Germany, and in the end will be able to dictate any terms they please."

This statement was made yesterday by John M. Browning of Ogden, Utah, the inventor of the Colt automatic pistol, which has been in the East for several weeks. Mr. Browning's royalties from his patents are nearly $1,000,000 a year. They will be considerably more if the Germans pay him what they will owe him when the war is over. Since their capture of Liege the Teutons have been manufacturing weapons on the Browning patents at the works of the Belgian Fabrique Nationale by the hundreds of thousands. Mr Browning said he did not know whether the Germans are keeping an account of their indebtedness to him.

Mr Browning is the first man who "tamed" the "kick" of a gun, and his invention revolutionized the manufacture of nearly every form of firearm. It is said 30,000 of his machine guns and nearly 2,000,000 of his automatic pistols are doing duty in the European war. Every part of the Colt machine gun is the invention of Mr. Browning. This deadly instrument was used first in the Philippines.

His millionth "vest pocket" automatic pistol was made by the Fabrique Nationale at Liege. At a banquet given on the occasion for the inventor in Liege, King Albert bestowed upon him the Belgian Order of Leopold and gave a replica of the millionth pistol to the Kaiser.

When he was thirteen years old Mr. Browning made his first gun in his father's shop at Ogden from scrap iron. His father, who was a gunsmith, was born in Tennessee. He went to Iowa in 1830, and for twenty years conducted a gun and tinker's shop. In 1852 he crossed the plains in an ox cart and settled in Ogden, where John M. Browning was born sixty years ago.

Mr Browning obtained his first patent in 1878, for a breech loading rifle. He perfected his repeating rifle in 1884, and eleven years later the box magazine, which used by the United States Army in the war with Spain. He sold all his patents until he hit upon the method of harnessing the "kick" of a gun.

That his principle of doing this was correct he proved by a simple experiment in his shop. Fastening to the floor a block of wood through which he had bored a hole the size of a 45 bullet, he set up a rifle so that the muzzle touched the hole in the wood. Then he fired the rifle. The gases were stopped by the block of wood and the rifle was hurled backward against the wall of the shop. Thereupon he transferred the gas pressure to the breech mechanism and thus made it operate all the movements of the rifle. Such speed was developed that six hundred bullets were fired in a minute.

Then he applied the principle to a pistol. This was the beginning of the automatic pistol, which discharged eight shells in one and three-fifths seconds. Within a year these weapons had been adopted by six nations.

Mr. Browning has eight children, whose ages range from twelve to thirty-four years. Some of them are gun makers, while others are devoting themselves to music and literature. Mr. Browning, who is six feet three inches in height and as straight as a Maine pine, finds his principal diversion in playing the banjo. Next to that he likes hunting and fishing. His favourite melodies are "The Blue Bells of Scotland" and "The Beautiful Blue Danube," which he says he plays "tol'-robly well."

Swedish Newspaper Says Germans Try to Arouse Hatred of Russia

Rumours of a possible break between Russia and Sweden have been mentioned in the English and American press quite frequently during the last few weeks. Just as often such alarmist reports have been refuted and shown to be groundless by persons in a position to give authentic information on the subject. Prominent Swedish newspapers, which all through the war have observed the strictest neutrality, as the government itself has done, do not give the slightest impression of there being any uneasiness in the country over its relations to Russia. That an impending rupture is as little anticipated in Russia is clearly evidenced by Russian press despatches, of which the following, which appeared in a Stockholm newspaper on August 19, is a fair sample:

"By the exceedingly kind reception accorded in Sweden to the Russian invalids returning from Germany as exchange prisoners Russia has been reminded of the humane sympathies shown by the Swedes toward the many tourist refugees who at the outbreak of the war passed through Sweden on their way home At the present time, as well as on the previous occasion, the Russian nation is eager to express its deep appreciation of such proofs of humanitarian feelings and uprightness, especially since Germany, after posing so long as the leading exponent of civilization, has trampled all principles of humanity under foot. The sympathies of Russia have, at any rate, become much more heartfelt on account of the correct stand of the Swedish people, in spite of the persistent efforts of German propagandists to inoculate a sentiment of hatred against the Russians.

"Swedens political distrust of Russia may be safely assumed to have been entirely removed by this time. The fable about Russia's aggressive designs on Sweden probably does no more receive any credence there. Russia, having already enough of non-Russian elements in its make-up, is absolutely foreign to a policy of acquiring Swedish territory, even were it only for the purpose of securing an out let to the Atlantic Ocean. This latter question, of which the German agitators have tried to make so much, cannot hereafter be given serious consideration, since the Murman railroad now under construction, will open an ice free harbour for Russian trade, and also because the economic policy of Russia demands, first of all, a ready access to southern waters. For Russia's whole export trade is now tending toward the south, where, owing to the wars, the most promising field for Russian industries is to be found.

"Russia's policy toward Finland is of as little relevancy as a means for German agitation, and does not involve anything that should stir up discord between Russia and Sweden. Those who have a true conception of the real interest of the two countries will surely demand that friendly relations be maintained and promoted between the neighbouring nations. The economic interests of Sweden will be best advanced, at the present time, by the furtherance of closer commercial relations with Russia, in the import trade of which Sweden most likely is destined to take the place formerly held by Germany."

ROUMANIAN TROOPS GATHER ON BORDER TO MEET A BIG CONCENTRATION OF AUSTRIANS

Bulgarian Premier Gives Out Another Interview Regarding Relations With the Powers—Turkey in a Bad Way and Demands Assistance

ATHENS, Sept. 14.—It is reported in diplomatic circles here that there has been a heavy mobilization of Roumanian troops, including several regiments of cavalry, to face an unexpected concentration of Austrians, which is directed presumably against Roumania.

Railroad traffic in northwestern Roumania is declared to have been suspended in favour of the troop movements. All horses have been requisitioned. The second series of reserves are now with the colours.

It is asserted that the Austro-German explanation is that the concentration is directed toward the suppression of espionage in Transylvania, but that this statement is not taken seriously.

Will Soon Be Ablaze.

ROME, Sept. 14.—All signs lead to the conclusion that the Balkan conflagration is imminent, but until the very last moment even the most competent in the politics of those States, even Balkan representatives themselves, are uncertain as to the definite attitude of certain countries, especially Bulgaria and Roumania. The opinion is gradually progressing that if Bulgaria, siding with the central Empires, attacks Serbia and favours the Austro-Germans to go to Constantinople through the Balkans, the allies will be forced to intervene themselves in the Balkans, which, therefore, will become another and most important theatre of the European war.

Turkey Needs Aid.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Daily Telegraph correspondent at Athens says: I am informed from a Turkish source that the higher German command in Constantinople has notified Berlin that unless assistance is received the Turkish army cannot continue its resistance beyond September 25.

The critical state of Turkey has given rise to renewed rumours of an impending Austro-German attack on Serbia. The northeastern corner of Serbia, at which it is supposed the Germans will aim their attack, is a position eminently adapted to a prolonged and stubborn resistance. Unless the Austro-Germans bring up at least eight army corps, the Germans themselves admit that the success of the movement could not be assured. It is doubtful whether the Germans can spare so large a force.

If the German attack on Serbia coincides with an attack by the Bulgarians, however, the position of Serbia would become critical. In such a contingency, however, the Graeco-Berbian treaty would come into operation, and the obligations incumbent upon Greece through their treaty alliance with Serbia would be faithfully fulfilled.

Bulgaria Still Bidding.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 14.—Premier Radoslavoff continues in touch with the Ministers of the Triple Entente powers. He has informed them that Bulgaria has assumed no political obligations with Turkey or the central powers as a result of the cession by Turkey of territory to Bulgaria.

Denial is given here to the report that the Ministers of the Triple Entente powers have made new proposals to Bulgaria. It is stated that the Entente Governments are still working with Serbia with the intention of securing from her a satisfactory answer to their demands that she should cede territory to Bulgaria. The German military attache here, Major Baron von der Goltz is leaving his post. He will be replaced by General von Lossow, who formerly was attached to the Legation. It is stated that Baron von der Goltz is leaving voluntarily.

Mr. Thomas Detcher Waits Upon the Board of Health in Connection With an Account for $62

Mr Thomas Detcher waited upon the Board of Health yesterday afternoon in respect to an account amounting to sixty-two dollars. The origin of the account dates back to the year 1911 when Mr Detcher was isolated in a tent and his case was diagnosed as smallpox. Since that he has been asked to pay the above named amount in consideration of expenses involved in connection with the case. Mr Detcher claims that some doubt existed as to whether he was suffering from smallpox. The day he was removed to the tent in the ambulance he worked around the tent and among other things dug a post hole three feet deep. This he contended would hardly have been possible had he been suffering from smallpox. He has paid to payin gthe remainder

The matter was laid over until a report can be obtained from Capt A W McPherson, M.D., who is now in England on active service. Capt McPherson was the Medical Officer of Health when Mr. Detcher was taken ill.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity, therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, should try a meal of any food or foods in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has direct action on the stomach, but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. Do not dose an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs but get rid of the acid the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and note remarkable results.

THE DOUROS STORE EXHIBITION OF FRUITS

No better retail exhibition of first class peaches, pears, plums and tomatoes can be seen in any city store than what is now exhibited at the Douros Fruit Store, 376 George St. The care and attention bestowed on the selection of all its fruits is one of the guarantees the Douros store affords its patrons that the choicest is only shown. With such salesmen as Mr Pringle and "Peter" Gettes, who never tire of guarding the customers' interests, and watching how best to give satisfaction to everyone dealing with them. The youngest as well as the oldest customer is fairly dealt with. Peaches, pears, plums and tomatoes are now at their very best, and housekeepers who know when to buy and how to handle fruit will find no difficulty in getting what ever they desire of the choicest fruits from the Douros Store.

NOSE TOO GOOD.

"The minister of a small country flock was discussing with an illiterate member of his church religious topics of varying interest. The member expressed the suggestion that even the best were none too good in this vale of sin and tribulation.

"You believe, then," interposed the preacher, "in the doctrine of total depravity?"

"Yes-sir, I do," rumbled the member, "that is, where it is lived up to."

Accused of Having Aided Chum To Obtain a $50,000 Estate

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept 15.—It has just become known here that Mrs Clara Myers, of Charleston, W Va., an intimate friend of Mrs Mamie Hamlin, who is under arrest on an indictment charging her with poisoning Mrs Polly Davis, a wealthy widow of Portsmouth, has been indicted at Jackson on a charge of being an accessory to the forgery of a will by which Mrs Hamlin would have secured control of Mrs Davis's estate, valued at $50,000.

Mrs Hamlin's hearing on the murder indictment has been set for Monday. She also is under indictment charged with signing Mrs Davis's name to the will.

Mrs Hamlin says she is the widow of Bert Hamlin, a son of H T Hamlin, former Attorney-General of Illinois. She is an artist and musician and went to Portsmouth several months ago to paint a series of pictures of Eastern Kentucky scenery. She became a guest of Mrs Davis, who is said to have confided to her that she had made a will leaving her property to charity. Mrs Davis is also said to have asked Mrs Hamlin to see that her relatives did not get any of it.

Tells Her Story.

Mrs Hamlin has reiterated her statement that she was innocent and tells thrusts of her relations with Mrs Davis.

"I met Mrs Davis several months ago while doing art work in the mountains," she said, "and stayed two weeks at her home. She seemed to think a great deal of me and told me she was going to make her will so her son would get nothing as he was mean to her, that she wanted Joe Davis, a boy she raised, to have part of her estate and would leave the remainder for charitable purposes. She wanted a church built and named for her.

"I was in Arkansas when she died and knew nothing about it for a month. I left here two months before she died. When I left her house to go home she made me hold my hand on the Bible and say I would come back to Kentucky when I learned of her death and go to the place that she described and showed to me and get papers, which she said she would keep there. She said she was afraid to leave them in the house for fear her son would find them. She said she would provide money to pay my expenses here and back and asked me to take the papers to her lawyer and have him carry out her wishes.

"I learned of her death through people writing to me and I wrote to the county clerk at Jackson and know who Mrs Davis's lawyer was and he told me McGuire and McGuire.

Suspicious of Lawyers.

"I came to Jackson and went to see McGuire. He was away. I told my story to Miss McGuire and she said her father would get the papers for me. McGuire claimed he could not go and I became suspicious and went myself after dark and hunted for the papers, looking under the rock where Aunt Polly said they would be. They were not there. I got a man to accompany me and went again and looked and found a package under the same rock.

"A new Testament was there and had directions on it to take it to James P. Adams at Jackson. I did so and in the presence of several witnesses opened it. It said that Adams should open it after twenty days and place it on record. Adams refused to have anything to do with it and I then sought other advice.

"I have since seen the handwriting of Mrs Davis and I believe that the will we found was forged, but I do not know who forged it and I do not know what was in the original, if there was any.

"I did not kill Mrs Davis and knew nothing about it. I never gave her poison nor any kind of medicine at any time. I do not say that she was not poisoned, because she may have been. My husband is dead. I have two children living with my mother, Mrs M J Coleman, of Fayetteville, Ark. My husband's father was former Attorney-General H T Hamlin of Chicago. He is dead now. I was born in Memphis, Tenn.

OVERSEAS TOBACCO FUND USED ONLY FOR BENEFIT OF SOLDIERS

Mr. Arthur Private Has Been Relieved and is Succeeded by Mr. F. R. Jones—Complete Statement Substantiating the Disinterestedness of the Overseas Club.

INTEREST TO CONTRIBUTORS

Mr. Arthur Private, who was sent to Canada by the Overseas Club in connection with their Tobacco Fund for the Canadian soldiers, has resigned, and is returning to England. He is succeeded by Mr. F. R. Jones, the honorary secretary and treasurer of the Sales Managers' Association of Great Britain. Contributors to the fund are assured that their money has been and will be used only for the purchase of tobacco for the soldiers. Mr. Private has been, it is stated, over-zealous and extravagant in his methods of organization, but any expenditure he incurred is met by the Overseas Club out of its own funds and not from the contributions received from the people.

The Toronto World recently raised the question as to Mr. Price's connection with the club. It had no grievance against the Overseas Tobacco Fund.

Mr. Jones gave the following statement to the World last night:

"Mr. Arthur Private was sent to Canada by the Overseas Club of London, England, to organize contributions from the Dominion to supply comforts in the form of tobacco for the Canadian troops at the front.

"The Overseas Club in sending him had every reason to believe he would accomplish a great work, and he has initiated many plans, including the placing of collecting lists in banks and the placing of lists and boxes in post offices throughout the Dominion, etc.

"It should be understood that the Overseas Club in starting him on this mission did so from purely patriotic motives, and have themselves incurred heavy expenditure to carry out their ideal. The purpose of the club is to pledge its members as citizens of the greatest empire in the world to maintain the heritage handed down by our fathers, believing the British Empire to stand for justice, freedom, order and good government.

A SMALL BEGINNING

Five years ago the club had a small beginning. To-day it has magnificent premises in Aldwych, London, in the heart of the empire's greatest city. It has upwards of 130,000 members, with His Majesty the King as patron, and H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught as vice-patron. Its long list of presidents and vice-presidents include names of empire fame and its central committee are some of the best known men in the city of London. The honorary secretary and organizer is Mr. J. Evelyn Wrench, and there are branches and corresponding secretaries in every town of any size in the empire.

"The demand of The Toronto World for an account of the money collected by Mr. Arthur Private is answered by the statement that all moneys are paid by contributors, collectors, post offices, etc., into the various banks in Canada and by them remitted to their headquarters, who in turn have instructions to make no payments except to the head office of the club in London.

"Mr. Private has received no moneys which have not been at once paid into a bank and he has always when moneys have been offered to him urged that the donor should himself make the payment into the nearest bank.

"The Overseas Club would be glad to know of any single donation which has not been properly accounted for, and will offer facilities for anyone who has paid money for the purposes of the fund to satisy themselves that the collector to whom it was paid duly handed it to a bank and that the bank in turn remitted it to the head office of the club in London. Very careful investigations make it abundantly clear that there has been no leakage of the kind suggested.

HERE TO INVESTIGATE.

"When Mr. Private was sent to Canada in behalf of the Overseas Club Tobacco Fund, he was provided with money for his expenses, and from time to time such further credits as have been necessary have been forwarded. The club having reason to fear somewhat indiscreet and extravagant expenditure on Mr. Private's part made arrangements some weeks ago to secure the services of Mr. F. R. Jones, the honorary secretary and treasurer of the Sales Managers' Association of Great Britain, to visit Canada, take up the threads of the work initiated by Mr. Private and investigate carefully his expenditure.

"Looking into the financial side Mr. Jones has discovered certain items of expense incurred without the authority of the club and the responsibility of these will be borne by Mr. Private personally, and he accepts all responsibility with respect to the same. The investigations, however, leave no room for question but that all moneys received from the public have been properly accounted for. In connection with this we produce below an exact copy of a cablegram received by Mr. George R. Lightball, notary of 303 Quebec Bank Building, Montreal, from Mr. Evelyn Wrench, the secretary of the club, and which bears date September 10, 1915.

The cablegram reads as follows:

"Total money eight thousand, seven hundred and twenty-three pounds, received from Canada for tobacco fund from October to end August. One hundred and fifty two thousand parcels despatched in same period, each parcel value 25 cents. Total contents seven million, six hundred thousand cigarettes and thirty eight thousand pounds tobacco. Balance Canadian cash in hand, eleven hundred and twenty three pounds. Please appreciate that two months and more necessarily elapse before subscribers can receive post cards from the front. Delays arise through customs formalities, military authorities and war exigencies generally. Everything possible being done expedite deliveries but abnormal times abnormal delays. Post cards should be delivered Canada tree."

"From this it will be seen that the total sum subscribed, £5723 sterling, represents 174,600 packets at the rate twenty packets to the pound sterling, or four to the dollar, each packet representing twenty five cents. Of these 152,000 packets have been forwarded to the front, leaving a balance of 22,400 to be forwarded. The cash in hand £1123, if mutiplied by 20 covers the exact number, 22,460, and it will thus be seen that a complete balance sheet is presented so far as moneys remitted to London are concerned.

"Of course there are other moneys in transit and which are being paid into the bank each day, and it should be borne in mind as pointed out by the cablegram, that a period of something like two months must elapse before the packets subscribed for can reach the front and an acknowledgment be received by the donors in Canada; and further it is impossible to ensure that every recipient of a packet will take the trouble to fill up the post card addressed to the donor which is enclosed in each packet on

LIFE OF PARLIAMENT MAY BE EXTENDED OR ELSE AN ELECTION

Ottawa Believes Parliament's Life Will Be Lengthened by Agreement —Late Fall Session

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—"An extension of the life of Parliament until some time after the war, if not, an election right away."

This seems to sum up the leadings question in political circles to-day, and this seems to be the general attitude of the Conservative party.

So if the Liberals will not agree to an extension of the life of the present parliament, it is fairly certain that there will be a general election before long.

What will probably happen is, that when Sir Wilfrid Laurier is better, Sir Robert Borden will pay one of his little personal visits to the Liberal chieftain, and he will put the proposition before him. To this it is believed Sir Wilfrid will agree.

If the opposition agrees to an extension of a short session of parliament in the late fall to secure the necessary legislation may be anticipated with a regular session at the end of January or the beginning of February.

It is evident that the government will not allow itself to be caught napping towards the limit of the parliamentary term.

Initial Rehearsal of the Peterboro' Choral Society

A distinctly favourable impression was created at the initial rehearsal of this society last evening, close upon 70 singers turning out to welcome the new conductor, despite the sultry weather prevailing, and the fact that many of the members are still away on their vacations.

After the introduction of the new conductor to the members, Mr. Allan gave a short, but very interesting address, mainly upon the duties devolving on singers, dwelling chiefly, among other things, upon the necessity, as is always the case with instrumentalists, for home practice and earnest study.

The deputy conductor, Mr. Chandler, was also afforded a very hearty welcome, and several choruses of the Messiah having been given, the meeting terminated at 10 p.m.

It is confidently expected there will be a much larger attendance at the second rehearsal next Tuesday, and intending members are requested to send in their names without delay to Mr. Bert Neal, the secretary, Rubidge street, city.

NEW EXHIBITORS WITH BIG ENTRIES FOR LOCAL FAIR

Fair Secretary Mr. Fred Hall stated that to-day's entry list of exhibits touched a new high mark. Not only were they numerous, but many of them were new to the Peterborough Exhibition. One Bowmanville man recorded eighty-four entries, one from Warkworth had fifty-four entries, and a local man registered one hundred and twenty. Mr. Hall has two assistants at Mr. R. Denne's store and they were kept busy all morning. Whether this was an extra flash in the exhibits pan or not remains to be seen from the records of the next few days. Up to the present, however, the entries have been most satisfactory to the directors, especially the number of big entries from new exhibitors.

HINTS TO HOUSEHOLDERS ON THE FIRE DANGER

The season is fast approaching when cool evenings will demand the starting of fires in our homes. September and October have become known to firemen as the months when chimneys and flues cause the most trouble.

The following suggestions of a practical nature, if faithfully followed, will do much to prevent damage to property and loss of life.

Stoves—Place a metal stove-board on the wood floor under the stove, and extending at least twelve inches in front of the ash pit door. Protect all walls and partitions within two feet of any stove with a metal shield, leaving an air-space between the shield and the wall. Leave no kindling or other wood in the oven over night. Do not hang clothes too near the stove or stovepipes.

Pipes—See that the lengths of stovepipe are well fitted together, free from rust holes and parted seams, wired firmly and fitted perfectly into the chimney. Stovepipes passing through partitions, walls, floors, attics and roofs are dangerous at best. Where these must pass through partitions, walls or floors, always use a large, ventilated double thimble. You should examine the stovepipes in the attic. They may come apart or rust. Fluff and spider webs are likely to gather on and around them, to be set on fire when you least expect it.

Chimneys — Chimneys should be built from the ground up, and never rest on wood support. The settling of the woodwork will cause cracks in the chimney. Nor should the chimney walls be used to support joists or other woodwork. Soft brick and poor mortar are often responsible for defects in the chimney. Use a good quality of brick and cement mortar. Chimney walls should be at least eight inches thick, the flue of ample size and lined with fire clay or terra cotta. Never stuff up the flue holes with rags or paper, nor cover them with anything but a metal stock. Chimneys should be cleaned frequently.

Furnaces — Protect all woodwork above and around boilers, if within three feet, with a metal shield, also all woodwork near furnace pipes. It is best to rivet the lengths of pipe together to prevent dispointing. The pipe should fit perfectly into the chimney. Examine the pipe frequently for rust holes or other defects. Keep them free from dust, fluff and spider webs, which are easily ignited.

Defects — Defective stoves, boilers, furnaces, pipes and chimneys should be promptly repaired or replaced.

Overheating — Beware of overheating stoves, boilers, furnaces and pipes.

Ashes — These should never be placed in wooden receptacles or bins, on wood floors or against wood partitions, walls, fences, buildings or any other woodwork. Use metal receptacles only, and dump ashes away from all buildings.

Care—These matters are technical, but very simple and merely call for ordinary care. You cannot afford to be careless, when the lives of our loved ones, and the property of yourself and neighbours, are at stake. Let "Care and Caution" be the watchword and in this way assist in reducing Canada's enormous fire loss.

GEN FRENCH STUDIES ARMY FIRST HAND.

Makes Automobile Rushes From Headquarters to Inspect the New Troops

British Headquarters, France, Sept. 1 The only man of the hundreds of thousands at the British front who wears the crossed batons of a Field Marshal on his shoulders appeared in an opening in the shrubbery which bordered the field where a machine-gun battery of the new army was waiting for orders to move.

None of the men in the battery had any idea that he was coming. They were lounging and chatting as they waited. In a glance every one identified that sturdy figure with its square chin and white drooping mustache with the pictures which they had seen in the papers. There was no need for a call to attention. The effect was like an electric shock which sent every man to his place and made his backbone a steel rod.

"Does Sir John French often slip up on you that way?" gasped one of the battery Lieutenants who was all of nineteen years of age. Nineteen is the limit of youth for officers in the new army, and there are scores no older. The difference between the one chocolate drop on that boy Lieutenant's sleeve and the crossed batons represented a dizzy altitude.

The battery had just come out from England. It took the Commander in Chief about five minutes to form his judgment of the results of their nine months' preparatory drill. He asked a few questions as he looked over each gun and its crew. "Very good," he said, and returned to his car, which was to take him on to inspect some other formation.

The automobile enables him to get over a lot of ground in a day. Sometimes the inspections are quite formal. Different battalions of a brigade drawn up in fields await his coming. Commanding officers know of his approach when they see the flag of his car fluttering along the road. On these occasions he usually makes a little speech. Once when a platform had been arranged for him to address a battalion he passed it by and went closer to the men standing in the field with their rigid columns around him. After that platforms went out of fashion.

"One might think that he could learn very little by a brief inspection or watching troops march past on parade," said the staff officer, "but a soldier's eye takes in more than a civilian can guess. He not only sees that uniform and equipment are in good condition, but he is able to judge both the spirit and the physical condition of the men. If they have been having a hard time of it in the trenches he can tell how much fight is left in them. He may judge the character of the reserves who have filled the vacant places. And the men see him. He is no longer a distant figure. They feel the effect of his personality."

The new army contingents as they arrive receive particular attention.

"Every General in the army seems to be taking his turn in inspecting us," said one of the new army officers. "We had plenty of inspections at home. We came out here to fight."

When this was repeated to a staff officer who belongs to "G. H. Q." as they call general headquarters, he said: "They need not worry about that. They will be getting fighting enough when the time comes. But they have the right spirit. All the armies in this war have found that the men who have been in the trenches know from experience how to hold the trenches. They can dig and they can stick, no matter how heavy the shell fire. But fresh troops, when properly drilled, are the best for the offensive. England has a far larger army which has never heard the click of a bullet than has ever been under fire. The new army men learned a good deal in England, they are to be taught more at the front."

KAISER'S MEN MADE TO PLAY

Recruits in Barracks and Garrisons Taught the Value of Recreation

FRANKFORT Germany, Sept. 15— "Learning how to play" is now a part of the curriculum of the embryo German soldier who is prepared and trained for the front. In every garrison and barracks in the empire there are at present thousands upon thousands of recruits, young and old and every last one of them has to know how to play before he is considered fit for the trenches.

This new policy is based upon the sound principle that the soldier, in the hours or days when he is resting behind the front while his relief fights, must have something to occupy his mind and keep his body fit.

A correspondent recently made a fairly comprehensive tour of southern, western, and central Germany and there was not a city without its thousands of men and at work at the paradoxical combination of fighting and playing.

Goose Step Not Essential.

Rigorous drilling has by no means been omitted from the curriculum of the soldier under training, and he probably can do the famous goose step quite as well as he could in peace time. But nevertheless vastly less attention is paid to it than in former years, for the reason that the goose step is not exactly an asset even in the trenches of France or Russia.

Frankfort's largest barracks are built around a square perhaps 500 feet square, a square large enough to accommodate easily a score or more companies of soldiers. There the customary marching exercises, saluting, cleaning, drill work, etc., are gone through, and nothing else.

The first impression is almost invariably one of confusion as squads go charging across the parade ground, throwing themselves suddenly to earth, rising and charging again.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. No one's treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr Chase's Kidney Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

The Fashionable New Suits are Simply Tailored and Trimmed with Furs and Braids

Simple as they are they are nevertheless extremely smart. A suit with a Russian blouse, either fastened over on the side or buttoned down the front, with the fulness drawn in at the waist line or slightly above it will be a much wanted garment. In many of the new suit coats the shield effect is noticed; also yokes. Collars are usually high, but convertible, being practically two collars in one. Pleated and gored effects prevail in skirts. A smart skirt has pleats introduced at the sides, starting from the hip or belt. Cluster pleated and pleated panel, skirts are also shown. Many have pockets and belts of suit material. Furs, fur fabrics and braids are the accepted trimmings. In materials those to which preference is given are the mannish mixtures, broad cloths, small checks, neat stripes, serges, gabardines, poplins, whipcords, and peau de souris. Velvet, panne velvet and velveteen are also shown. There is no end to the variety, so there should be little difficulty in choosing. Colors are navy, tete de negre, mole, dark green, mulberry; also black. These are favorite. Of course there are others.

Colors to Match Suits and Frocks Will Prevail in Hosiery

Just as throughout Spring and Summer, colors to harmonize with outergarments will be necessary. And as skirts are somewhat shorter more of the stocking will be seen. The importance of obtaining a supply of hosiery to match is therefore obvious. We are showing quite an assortment of new shades; also black and white in both silk and lisle of the very finest qualities.

Flared and Fitted Coats Are The Thing This Fall

It is doubtful if a season ever introduced coats more likely to meet with immediate approval. There is, for instance, a Russian coat, quite long and fastened at the side, giving a double breasted effect and much desirable chest protection. Another coat, the Redingote, is also very smart. It is fashionable to wear either a coat that flares or one that is form conforming. In flared effects the flare is emphasized by hand trimmings at the bottom. Belts are used extensively. Collars as a rule fasten high around the neck, but can be converted at will. A high open collar is also a feature. Yokes serve to give the flat appearance now so desirable. Sleeves with turn over or flare cuffs, also raglan sleeves are noted. Materials are serges, gabardines, whipcords and numerous becoming Scotch and English mixtures, checks and stripes. Fur and braid trimmed collars and cuffs, also bandings of fur are noted on many of the coats in this highly interesting collection of new styles, here awaiting your examination.

Fall Opening

In High Favor For Fall Wear Are High Neck-pieces. They Are Smart

They are the result of the high effects in suits and dresses. Of course there are many low styles for those who cannot wear the other. Two pretty pieces of neckwear are a high stock and jabot of lace and net. A new idea is a butterfly jabot of net edged with Venise lace. Georgette crepe plays a prominent part in high and low neck fixings. Ribbon bows are used on a good many of the new effects. Bright touches of color and even metallic laces appear on lace and net combinations. Pleatings, too, are featured and stand high and close around the neck. We show these and many other new effects.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday
Sept. 16th, 17th, 18th

We present a review of the Autumn Modes approved by those who form the Court of American Fashion.

We Invite You To Attend

Because of the war creating Fashion is not pursued with the same diligence abroad as heretofore, so we think it rare good fortune indeed to be able to present as we do in this opening exhibition, a summary of style more interesting than its most interesting predecessor. Seeing these charming new modes one is impressed with a simplicity that seems to reflect the solemnity of the times. Even the subdued fabrics are almost like a hush. Yet there is novelty, beauty and variety aplenty.

The styles we exhibit in this opening display include the best creations of designers on this side of the water as well as copies and adaptations of Paris models. We earnestly invite every women to attend this exposition and to veiw these new styles as they are displayed in extensive assortments of quaint and clever models, all scrupulously correct, and priced as garments seldom are in an introductory exhibition.

THE DOORS OPEN ON THIS FASHION FESTIVAL TO-MORROW

If You are to Dress Fashionably You Will Want A New Corset

The prevailing Fall fashions demand a shapely figure. The normal Corset has therefore returned. It has a 4 to 5 in. bust, moderate curve at the side fronts, slight spring at the hip, medium length skirt and more boning. We show it in quite a number of styles and sizes.

Skirts for Fall Wear are of Practical Design but Unusually Becoming.

One is almost tempted to believe that the wide skirt has come to stay, judging from the overwhelming preference given to it this Fall. It is not so extreme as heretofore, conservative widths ranging from 2 to 2½ yards, with greater fulness for novelty effects. Practically all skirts are of the modified circular type, flared or pleated, many of the pleats being introduced at the sides. Pockets and belts are used on most of them. Materials are Satin, Faille, Taffetas, Gros de Londres, Velvet Cords, Velveteens, Broadcloth, Serges, Whipcords, Gabardines, Poplins, English and Scotch Tweeds, Checks, Plaids and Stripes, dark colours receive preference. Here one may see all of these, priced quite moderately.

Waists, Too, Are More Practical, and Prettier Than Ever.

Dressy Waists to match Suits in colour, and made of Chiffon, Silk and Georgette Crepe are shown in interesting numbers in this new collection of ours. A more practical waists for everyday wear is of white or flesh color Crepe de Chene. The Semi-Tailored finish is the one most employed. Sleeves as a rule are long, and the collars are in the characteristically high military styles or flat. Indeed, in an assortments such as we now present it becomes simple matter to choose, almost haphazard, with every assurance that your selection will be pretty and fashionable.

See Our Handsomely - Trimmed - Show Windows

We do not hesitate in saying we have two clever designed Show Windows To-Night and for Opening Days to show off the Beautiful Garments therein. The colour scheme is carried out in Tan, Black and White and makes a handsome effect indeed. The idea being brought here from New York.

Semi-Fitting Bodices and Skirts Pictures the New Silhouette in Dresses

Dresses for Fall reflect simplicity in a pleasing new light. The Redingote and Princess styles define figure curves more than any other type. Sleeves are long and unusually snug. Novelty sleeves have a fulness from shoulder to elbow. These sleeves are usually of net, chiffon, marquisette or some other soft material. Collars are high, hugging the neck, although some are open; not a few are flat. Silks are Taffeta, Satin, Charmeuse and Faille for the more expensive dresses. For others Messaline, Crepe de Chine and Poplins are used. Velvet, Serge, Gabardine and Broadcloth are extensively employed for every day street dresses. Colors are subdued, navy, green, mulberry, tete de negre and purple leading. Black and black & white are also in evidence.

THE REID COMPANY

GREEKS IN TURKISH EMPIRE AGAIN SUFFER PERSECUTION

Correspondent of the Paris Temps Says Greek Churches Are Being Turned Into Mosques and Greek Women Dare Not Appear in Streets of Constantinople

From Dedeachatch, Turkey, the correspondent of the Paris Temps has sent the following report on the suffering of Greeks in Turkey's Asiatic domain.

"Sad news is daily communicated to the patriarchate here regarding the wretched treatment meted out to Greeks, who have been expelled from their homes in Asia Minor. All able bodied men up to the age of fifty years have been drafted into the army, while old people of both sexes and the children have been set to the hardest kind of work, which is killing them by degrees. The younger maidens and grownup girls have been plotted among the harems of a few Turkish notables and government officials.

"Some time ago the patriarchate delegated the metropolitans of Godlipoli and Chalcedon to look up the various groups of refugees and distribute among them the relief funds and provisions which had been collected by the Greek colony at Constantinople. These messengers were intercepted by the Turkish authorities who confiscated their funds and relief supplies, with the declaration that the Turkish government was well able to care for the Greek refugees and had no need of any help from the patriarchate.

"When the patriarch protested complaints on this account directly to the Sublime Porte he met with such a rude reception that it brought tears of indignation to his eyes. Persecution of Greeks in Constantinople is on a assuming alarming proportions. The best educational institutions have been transformed into hospitals, so as to compel the Greeks to send their children to Turkish schools. Also a number of Greek churches, which were first requisitioned for use as hospitals, have gradually been converted into mosques on the pretext of giving the wounded Turks an opportunity of observing properly their religious devotions.

"Most of the Greek stores have been forced to close, their stock having been seized for government purposes. German clerks and their families have practical luxurious apartments by means of supposedly official requisitions on the Greek dry goods and clothing firms. Fraternization between Germans and Turks, both soldiers and civilians, is complete, and the latter, insulting and harassing the Greek inhabitants on every available occasion. The situation has come to such a pass that decent women no longer dare to venture into the streets."

DESTROYING MAIL BY THE TON

That correspondent of ours was quite right who declared that the loss of mail matter in enormous quantities is a feature of Germany's method of conducting the submarine warfare that deserves more attention and condemnation than it is receiving.

There really is something of sacredness about letter and parcels and anybody's letters once intrusted to the post department of it has come to be so nearly universal among all nations exponent of modern civilization that destroying or even tampering with them anywhere along their progress from sender to receiver has become highly exceptional and both is and should be highly resented.

Despotisms and tyrannies have always violated the seals of private correspondence, and they do it still, but among free peoples it is not practiced or permitted for any reason except the detection of crime with good reason strongly suspected and it is always done under a heavy responsibility for any mistakes that may be made. Of course, in war the laws relating to letters as well as to other things tend to become inarticulate but any military device that results in the sending of mail bags by the thousands to the bottom of the sea inflicts injury and loss so ruthlessly and with such lack of decent discrimination between friends and enemies that it constitutes a crime ranking not far above murder itself.

A letter is such a helpless thing! Its covering is a wall only for the courteous and the honorable. From others it has no protection what ever if it gets into their hands and yet it is respected by nearly all, mending many whose scrupulosity runs in other directions — but slight.

Whoever will may see significance in the fact that the most persistent and successful destroyer of mail in modern times are the same people who have put the scornful quotation marks around the phrase, "a scrap of paper." A letter, too, for them is only that! New York Times

"Barbarians" Is The Right Word

Prominent American Says It is Only One to Paint the German Race

NEW YORK Sept. 14 — To Mrs William K Vanderbilt has come a letter from Whitney Warren, who was in Venice at the time. In his message, which deals entirely with the war, the American architect speaks with pride of the work of the American Ambulance at Neuilly, near Paris, and predicts two years of war. Writing from Venice, under date of Aug. 15, he says:

"I came on here a little less than a week ago to have a look in on the situation and to see what had been done in the way of protecting the treasures from what, alas, must be called the barbarians. I hate the word, and have refused to use it up to the present, but it is the only one to paint the race. As Angaro said to me yesterday, 'They are plunderers in the world of art, of science and of material things consumed by envy and the knowledge of their inferiority, in their brutality they are capable of anything and to glory in it.' Many precautions have been taken, but it would seem that a bomb could fall nowhere without destroying something most precious. The great danger from aeroplane bombs would be fire. The rafters all through the Ducal Palace and St Marco are immense and as dry as centuries can make them. All the paintings have been removed, but they are really secondary. What I especially tremble for are those extraordinary wooden ceilings in the Ducal Palace. They have been the inspiration of the world since the Fifteenth Century. From my window away off in the distance I can see the big fort ready to resist attack. Should the Austrians wish to try it on. This is hardly likely unless the submarines can greatly weaken the Italian fleet, which is, according to reports, much the stronger and in prime condition.

"I seem to be the only stranger here. Everybody who has had the price has left, and one sees only the real people who are calm, enthusiastic, and convinced. At 7.30 all lights go out, and the nights believe me, are dark indeed. Thank heaven one is allowed to smoke. Otherwise navigation about the piazza would be almost impossible.

American Ambulance

"I wish for everybody's sake you could get back. It would mean so much to France if you could both be here, if only for a short stay. It is, as I have said above all the sympathetic gesture they long for.

"While material aid is necessary and deeply appreciated, what is really wanted is the moral sympathy and sacrifice—that which goes to the heart, not to the stomach!

"The impression produced by the American ambulance all over is tremendous. It is known everywhere as the best run and the most complete of all such establishments. In my work at the Ecole I have had many requests from wounded pupils to have them removed from where they are to Neuilly. It appears a sort of paradise which is none too good for those fine fellows, and, since it is America which is doing it, is what is necessary for our reputation. As you know, there is a certain criticism from the 'talk-ers' (forgive the word, but it paints the article) as to the cost of running it. This is absurd as we must run the concern according to American ideas and not as a simple French army ambulance. Otherwise we might as well quit it. It is going to remain in the memories of the war as America's monument to France. America might well be proud of having organized it, sustained it.

"Just now a Taube went off and I realized an aeroplane was approaching. Soon it appeared and all about it hundreds of shells exploding, but it was away off, quite impossible to reach it. It went off to reconnoiter the fleet pursued by four Italians, but I fancy it has escaped as it was very high and it takes forever for an aeroplane to mount. It dropped on bombs on Venice, so they say; one never knows however. The quay was black with spectators all hoping, needless to say, to see it fall, and most enthusiastic are the Italians started off in pursuit.

"Keep your patience. Hold on to it with both hands. This is going to be a long, long business, two years, and you will surely have the opportunity of manifesting yourself again as you desire. Keep your interest up. The fact that you believe in the justice of the cause has much greater weight than is possible to imagine—all they want over here is your moral weight, and that you are giving to your utmost, and it will bear great fruit believe me."

AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR

A wedding company on the way to the church had to cross a river in a boat, when as luck would have it the bridegroom fell into the water. Wringing her hands the bride cried for some one to save her beloved. "What for?" asked one of the company. "He is a good swimmer." "That's just it," cried the bride. "Don't you see that he is swimming towards the other bank."

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

In the issue of The Toronto Sunday World of September 12 1915 answers were demanded to various questions.

1. It was pointed out that on or about June 12 last Mr Private cabled to a tobacco firm in London asking for quotations. We do not know how The World became possessed of a cablegram from Mr Private to Messrs Martins, Limited, who are the buying agent and contractors for the supply of tobacco to the Overseas Club, but there is no doubt that such a cable was sent, and when it is understood that great pressure was being brought to bear on Mr. Private to secure the sending of Canadian tobacco to the Canadian troops it should be appreciated that in getting into direct contact with the suppliers in England he was doing what he could to forward the expressed wishes of the Canadian.

2. It is stated that in The Evening Telegram of July 20 1915 an advertisement announced the sending of full four ounce packages of tobacco, and a reference is made to packets weighing 3 1-5 ounces, but at this time arrangements had not been concluded for the supply of Canadian tobacco, and it was when a supply of the best Canadian tobacco was arranged for, and an improvement effected in the size and quantity of the cigarettes that the wording of the advertisement was altered to make it read:

"Your donations provides 50 cigarettes, a packet of Canadian manufactured smoking tobacco, a supply of matches, and a return postcard addressed to the donor of the package."

"It will be seen, therefore, that no attempt was made to misrepresent but rather every pains taken to state exactly what would be given in return for the money subscribed.

"3. Further reference is made to the cablegram and statements contained therein, but it should be borne in mind that Mr. Private was, in the interests of the Canadian troops, bringing pressure to bear on the head office of the club in London, in order to secure a supply of the Canadian tobacco for which he had been asked. As to his statement that in the event of its being arranged he would take over all existing Canadian funds, etc., this may well be dismissed as mere boastfulness.

"4 On the question of the size of the packet, Mr. Private pointed out that Canada could only supply 50 cigarettes without tobacco for 25c and, in proof of this, it may be mentioned that advertisements appearing in Canadian papers previous to this time were advertising a package of 50 cigarettes and a quarter of a pound of tobacco for 50 cents or double the price stated. As has been already pointed out, it is only the extraordinary facilities secured by the club and their contractors for packing in bond, and forwarding carriage free to the front, that makes it possible to supply a package for twenty-five cents which contains three times that amount in retail value.

"5. The talk about cooperation is quite needless and is easily explained when it is pointed out that by getting the contractors to accept and use Canadian tobacco Mr. Private hoped eventually to overcome the opposition of some of the Canadian manufacturers to the supplying of tobacco by the Overseas Club.

"6 The statement as to a cooperative collecting arrangement with The Montreal Gazette is not true. Mr. Private never made any arrangement with The Montreal Gazette, but before the Overseas Club had commenced to operate in Canada the Gazette had started a fund of their own, and were availing themselves of the services of Messrs Martins, Limited, to supply the tobacco for which their readers subscribed.

"7 The final reference to a proposed collection at the Canadian National Exhibition, and a payment of six per cent. commission to a Toronto man, was made without the knowledge of the club, and must be attributed to Mr. Private's zeal for his work. Undoubtedly it was an indiscretion, but the arrangement was made without the knowledge of the club, and has not received their sanction or approval.

"In coming to Canada Mr. Private had clear and definite instructions as to the lines upon which he could work and is not the first man of brilliant initiative who has let his zeal outrun his discretion.

"The Overseas Club has been defraying Mr. Private's expenses by direct remittances from London, England, but in all cases his account is subject to surcharge for items that are considered personal, extravagant, or unnecessary. The special train is among such items and Mr Private has accepted responsibility in that particular case.

"In the articles in The World special emphasis has been laid on the fact that no attack has been made on the Overseas Club, but only on the conduct of Mr Arthur Private, who is now returning to London. The work here in Canada will, however, proceed in the hands of Mr. Jones, and we do not hesitate to ask for the enthusiastic support of our readers to a fund which is filling so useful a purpose. Letters should be addressed to Mr F R Jones, Windsor Hotel, Montreal."

British Government Has Subject of Forming Policy on Conscription Before It Now, Says Asquith

LONDON, Sept 15. After six weeks' recess Parliament reassembled yesterday, the first session developing nothing notable except the Premier's flat refusal to discuss conscription proposals.

The Prime Minister will move today a vote of credit variously estimated at from $750,000,000 to $1,250,000,000.

Official admission that the Cabinet is seriously debating the subject of conscription was made publicly for the first time in the House of Commons this afternoon. The subject was raised when the motion for adjournment was made. It was brought up by both the opponents and the advocates of conscription. Premier Asquith finally arose and announced:

"This is not a matter which has escaped the attention of the Government. When the Government, without undue delay and with due deliberation, which the gravity of the subject demands, have arrived at their conclusions they will be presented to the House and will then become the subject of Parliamentary discussion. The Premier expressed regret that the question of the best way "in which this country shall meet the call to bring the war to a successful conclusion" had become a matter of public controversy. He hoped there would be no further debate on this subject for the present.

Officer Members Rebuked.

Premier Asquith rapped the knuckles of the office members of the House of Commons who recently returned from the front and signed a memorial urging that the Government hasten to adopt conscription. The Premier repudiated any desire to close their lips, but added that "they ought to feel themselves under the most strict sense of responsibility. Let them remember," said the Premier, "that they sit in the Commons not as representatives of the army, but of their constituents. It would be most unjust that because they happen to be in the army they should pretend to come to the House with any mandate from the army. That would be an evil thing for the army and a bad thing for the Commons. It is a claim I would never admit."

The vote of credit which the Premier will move today will, it is understood, be at least £150,000,000 and possibly more. In the House of Lords Field Marshal Earl Kitchener will review the progress of the war, and explain the present state of recruiting.

The question of defence against airship raids was brought up in the House of Commons yesterday, an attempt being made to interrogate Thomas J MacNamara, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty. Mr. MacNamara evaded discussion of this point by saying it would be improper to give any information in regard to what was being done. The member who questioned Mr. MacNamara was anxious to know whether the Government at this late date was seriously considering for the first time the defence of London, and whether the Admiralty had studied carefully the steps so successfully taken for the protection of Paris from air attacks.

Beyond saying that he could not accept the proposition that the Government was not prepared to defend London, and announcing that Admiral Sir Percy M Scott had already assumed his duties in charge of the gunnery defences of London against aircraft, Mr McNamara declined to be drawn out.

A clergyman had taught an old man in his parish to read, and found him an apt pupil. Calling at the cottage some time after, he found only the wife at home.

"How's John," asked he.

"He is well, thank you," said his wife.

"How does he get on with his reading?"

"Nicely, sir."

"Ah! I suppose he can read his Bible comfortably now?"

"Bible sir! Bless you, he was out of the Bible and into the sporting papers long ago!"

Five Started Out But Only Three Returned to Base

LONDON, Sept. 14 — In a despatch from Amsterdam Reuter's correspondent says:

"A telegram from Ameland, Holland, says that only three of five Zeppelins which last evening sailed westward returned this morning, flying in an easterly direction."

Another German air raid was made over the east coast of England last night, but as far as appears there were no casualties and no damage done.

A single Zeppelin was the raiding aircraft, according to the official announcement, which reads:

"A Zeppelin visited the east coast last night. Bombs were dropped. Anti-aircraft guns, fixed and mobile, were in action.

"So far as can be ascertained, there were no casualties and no damage was done."

A number of London theatres announced to-day that evening performances will begin at 7 o'clock and close at 8.40. The explanation given is that closing at an earlier hour enables people to reach home before Zeppelins could appear. The theatre taking the initiative pointed out that its patrons were equally able to come an hour sooner and says it believes the public will approve.

HALL'S GLEN, Sept. 15 — Mr and Mrs. Wm. Batton spent Sunday visiting friends in Warsaw.

Miss Ida Jory, who has been visiting friends in Oshawa, returned home Sunday accompanied by her uncle, Mr. R Dickson.

Messrs L. Armstrong and W Murdiff, of Lakefield, spent the week end as guests of Mr D Little.

Mr. Joe Madill, of Kingston, is the guest of his sister, Mrs M E Crowe.

The lights are rapidly disappearing from the lake, an evidence that the cottagers are returning to their homes.

The harvesters' strike at the Glen has proved quite serious to some of our farmers. We wonder how long it will last.

Our prospects of the electric car line from Peterborough via Warsaw to Stoney Lake, has been somewhat assured by the fact that some parties have been engaged to lay out the route and examine the road generally for that purpose.

Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

WOULD YOU CONSIDER

a proposition making provision for your family in the event of death, or, if living, provision for old age?

POTATO ROT IN THE COUNTY

Potato rot is said to be prevalent throughout Peterborough county, due to the unusually wet season. The extent of the damage will not be known until the crop is taken up. In some parts of the township the farmers are raising their potatoes earlier than usual in the hope that it will save them from further deterioration. The damage varies according to the grade of the land.

Harvesting operations are still in progress in some sections of the county.

DEFENDS HOME JAIL SENTENCE IS HIS REWARD

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 15.—Is a man a criminal because he protects his wife and home against an intruder?

If the story of Charles Tompkins in gray prison uniform at the Lansing Penitentiary is true, then he is a living affirmative to that question.

When Tompkins comes before Governor Capper for a parole, he will plead the "unwritten law" which permits a loving father and husband to defend his home against the abuse and violence of a man under the influence of liquor.

At Tompkins' name in the record clerk's office are the words, "assault and great bodily harm." He received a prison sentence of from one to five years because he assaulted an intoxicated man who was trying to gain entrance into his home and who was frightening his wife and children.

Lived in a Mining Camp.

Tompkins with his young wife and two children lived at the Bartow mining camp, a mile and a half west of Mulberry, Kan. He worked in the mines and was known to be honest and industrious.

One day a year ago Tompkins went to Mulberry for provisions, leaving his wife and children at home. Before he had finished his buying he was called over the telephone by his wife and told to hurry home. In frightened tones she told him someone was there of whom she was afraid.

Running almost all the way, Tompkins, arriving at home found a drunken man kicking the barred doors and cursing. Already enraged, he rushed at the man with the club which he had picked up on the way. As the intruder turned on him he struck him with the club and then gave him a severe beating.

The next day Tompkins was jailed. Later he was tried. Evidence was introduced to show the man had suffered permanent injury. The testimony of the defence to show that the attack had been provoked by abuse and threats was not allowed.

Sentence Was Heavy.

Thinking the maximum sentence for such an offence was six months in the county jail, the jury returned a verdict of guilty against Tompkins. The sentence, however, was from one to five years at the State prison.

Shortly after the trial the assaulted man returned to work and nothing more was heard of his injuries.

Tompkins is in the prison now. He has not yet the hardihood to become the "chain dog" expression of many of his comrades. And having gotten his case before Governor Capper he is hoping that before his year of sentence, which expires next spring is out he may receive a pardon. Laying aside his gray uniform and go home to the wife and children for whose defence he is behind the bars.

DARK HONEY REPORT

The Crop Report Committee of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association met on Thursday, Sept. 9th, to consider the crop of Dark Honey. It was found that 105 members had reported 116,400 lbs. from 4,867 colonies, being an average of 20 lbs. to the colony. This is about double of last year's average. The committee advises members to ask 7 1-2c to 8 1-2c per lb. wholesale dependent on the size of package and the quantity sold in one order. No buckwheat honey should be retailed for less than 10c per pound.

The local demand for white honey is exceedingly good as many people are buying honey to put away in place of canned fruit, and the prices recommended by the committee are best to realize.

Wholesalers are cautioned against all kinds of goods including honey and naturally have made an effort to buy as low as possible. A few carload orders have been filled at a slightly lower figure than recommended but these orders were for ton lots.

There is yet a large quantity of light honey unsold, but the market is firm and a great many of the smaller beekeepers report that practically all of their crop is disposed of at satisfactory prices. All considered the committee feel that honey need not be sold at low prices to continue.

Aeroplanes And the War

Their Use Has Been Enormously Developed in the Past Year

This war has done more during the one year of its duration than any other cause in a like period to develop the higher mechanics.

Among the most notable developments have been those in airships both Aeroplanes and Zeppelins. Among the special purposes for which Aeroplanes have been particularly developed are scouting, counter service, map making, bomb dropping, and aircraft destruction.

For scouting, highly built high power and very speedy planes were constructed and arranged to carry only two men. They are sent out to locate the enemy and report immediately all important facts. Their trips were frequent but short. The planes for counter service were much the same, though usually designed for somewhat longer journeys.

For map making the planes were much the same as those for courier service and designed to carry two men, but they were equipped with special apparatus. It was necessary for the topographer or map maker to have the driver follow exactly above the particular section which he was to plot. The noise of the engine would make it impossible for the two to communicate. Accordingly, a special telephone system is installed between them, with a transmitter secured in front of each mouth and receivers over the ears of each. So as the topographer follows the country beneath them, he can give easily instructions as to course. But it would be impossible for the greatest expert to make full notes and draw detailed maps of the whole section at the rate at which the machine travels. To overcome this, a phonograph is used. Instead of writing notes, the topographer dictates notes into the phonograph which duly records them. At the same time he makes his map, by hand. When he returns to headquarters, he puts the record on and reproduces the notes.

The bomb dropping planes are more powerful and designed for both longer journeys and greater carrying powers. They are fitted with a special bomb dropping appliance which may be operated automatically as the machine reaches certain positions directly above the objects on which the bombs are to be dropped.

The planes equipped for destruction of other aircraft are the most powerful of all and have their cars or baskets armoured to deflect bullets and shrapnel. They are armed with one or more special high power aircraft guns, specially mounted to fire at almost any angle and in almost any direction.

Rumour says that Russia has developed an enormous bi-plane capable of terrific speed and carrying a crew of sixteen men and a very heavy load of bombs or explosives. It is said that this monster can travel at very high speed for very long distances, even when carrying its maximum load, and great things are promised for it.

The German submarine policy has been a fiasco and their wonderful Zeppelins have done no more than arouse curiosity as to when and where they will make a raid of any real consequence. On the other hand the aeroplanes of the Allies have done wonderful work of many kinds throughout the war and, with the advent of Russia's armoured aeroplane we may look for something really startling.

When this bill is adopted the total of appropriations since August 1, 1914, will be 28,194,000,000f. $5,638,800,000)

Italian Submarine Sinks Two Austrian Destroyers in Mid-Atlantic

Bulgarian Foreign Office Has Demanded an Immediate Explanation From Greece and Rumania of Concentration of Troops---Massacre of Armenians Continues.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Two Austrian destroyers were sunk by an Italian submarine in Mid Adriatic on Monday, according to Turin despatches received here to-day. The captain of the Genoa steamer Concetta B. was given as authority for the story. He reported that he was being chased by the destroyers when the submersible came to his rescue.

AN EXPLANATION FROM GREECE.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Bulgarian Foreign Office has demanded an immediate explanation from Greece and Rumania of the concentration of Greek and Rumanian troops on the Bulgarian frontier, according to a Sofia despatch.

FEAR AN INSURRECTION

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Exchange Telegraph's Athens correspondent reported to-day that the Turkish authorities are preparing to transfer all government and financial establishments to the interior of Asia Minor, fearing an insurrection in the Turkish army. All the Turkish artillery is soon to be manned by German gunners, with the object of suppressing quickly any attempt at revolution.

MASSACRE OF ARMENIANS

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Courier to Dedeaghatch, Sept 16.—Turks have resumed their methodical extermination of Armenians in all the provinces of the Empire. Frightful scenes are being enacted. Women are being outraged or sold into slavery. Males are being massacred, and whole communities driven off into the desert countries.

Autonomy of Poland and Full Civil Rights for Jews; Reforms Wanted

LONDON, Sept 16.—The following facts about the reforms that occupy the attention of the Liberal and Democratic parties in Russia at the present moment have been ascertained from a reliable source.

The reforms demanded during the war are.

The autonomy of Poland, the three divisions to be united within ethnographical limits, one under parliament, with common ministers for war, marine, and foreign affairs. Full civil rights for Jews, and removal of their present disabilities in inhabiting Russia proper. Amnesty for all political prisoners. Removal of disabilities of working men and recognition of right of organization in trade unions and so forth. Appointment of a special minister of munitions, and eventually of a mixed munitions committee. A liberal and tolerant policy in respect to Finland. Complete economy and emancipation of commerce, especially from German restrictions. Alterations of the export arrangements in wheat in south Russia, and generally in rates of exchange after the ultimate opening of the Dardanelles and the probable possession of Constantinople.

AFTER-THE-WAR REFORMS

In addition to the above, it is urged that the following concessions be granted after the war, or as soon as practicable.

Appointment of a new legislative body elected by universal male suffrage. Autonomy of Lithuania, Siberia and the Caucasus. Reform of the schools, autonomy of the universities, and the establishment of secular elementary schools. Reforms in the church, restriction of the powers of the synod, and the restitution of the patriarch. Repeal of the statute of Zemstvos of 1890 and reform of municipal administration, the power in which is at present largely exercised by great land owners. Restrictions of those privileges of local governors which are at present exercised in defiance of the Minister of the Interior.

RESTRICT UPPER HOUSE

Restriction of the powers of the upper House the Council of the Empire. The responsibility of Ministers. Liberty of the press, of speech, and of assembly—in a word, recognition of the essential rights conceded in the manifestos of October, 1905, and April, 1915. Agrarian reforms. The greatest possible encouragement of industries. Conclusion of a new commercial treaty with terms designed to protect Russian industries—failing this the declaration of a tariff war.

Italy's Royal Family Busy at Battle Front

ROME, Sept 16 — The war has brought hard work to the entire Italian family. King Victor Emmanuel is at the front in supreme command of the army, and his two cousins, the Duke of Aosta and the Count of Turin, are each in command of an army corps. The Duke of Abruzzi is commander in chief of the Italian fleet and the Prince of Undie, another cousin of the King, is in command of a submarine flotilla. There are two sons of the Duke of Aosta in the army, both serving in the ranks as volunteers and a son of the Duke of Genoa the King's uncle, is a sub-lieutenant of artillery. The Duke of Genoa has been appointed lieutenant-general or viceroy during the King's absence from Rome.

Queen Elena, Dowager Queen Margherita, the Duchess of Aosta and Princess Letitia are all working hard in connection with the Red Cross hospitals and the organization of relief for soldiers' families. As soon as war was declared Queen Elena insisted on overseeing all arrangements for wounded and sick soldiers, and, despite the admirable organization of the Army Medical Corps and the Red Cross, her experience served to improve even what was supposed to be perfect.

BELGIAN MINISTER OF STATE IS DEAD OF GRIEF

HAVRE, Sept 16 Louis Hymans, late Belgian Minister of State who died here on Thursday, left in the hands of his son, Eduard, an envelope marked, "Not to be opened until the day after my death." The envelope was found to contain a fervent farewell to the Belgian statesman's King and country, written in the conviction that he would never see his own land again.

"In spite of the generous welcome given us by the great, noble French nation," the letter concluded; "in spite of the solemn oath of the allied peoples to revenge us and return to us independent and sovereign Belgium after having driven out the last barbarian; in spite of the hope I maintain that this word of honour shall be fulfilled, I feel I shall no longer be of this world when the hour strikes.

"Sorrow consumes me, kills me. It is in the land of France that my body will be buried, and I ask that over my tomb be planted a simple cross with my name and the words, 'Died for the Fatherland,' because it is for it that I shall have died before my time."

War Office Bars Rakish Uniforms In the Army

LONDON, Sept 16.—Piccadilly fashions among army recruits are frowned down by the War Office. Turned up trousers with low shoes, rakishly cut uniforms and other affections must go. A new set of dress regulations has been issued which puts these reforms into effect.

Low shoes are forbidden except to the Highland regiments. Dismounted officers must wear high top shoes of brown leather and plain toe caps.

The jockey style of army caps with a shapeless crown and an exaggerated brim are forbidden. No deviations are allowed from the standard cap, which is shaped like one used in the American army. It must be worn straight on the head and not tilted. In the trenches only is it permissible to remove the wire frame.

Turned up trousers have always been distinctly against regulations but the practice is so widespread that the War Office can only put the order in force against trousers to be made hereafter. Breeches with putees or leggings are prescribed for the streets and public places, and trousers only for undress purposes.

Socks must be of khaki colour, and the gloves of brown leather, and either carried in the hand or worn with a stick or cane, which must be perfectly plain. Collars are required to match the khaki uniform in colour.

The jauntiness in dress now prevalent is due to the thousands of college boys being given commissions and the informalities of trench life.

Take Belgian Railway Tracks To Poland

HAVRE, Sept 16. The Belgian government has protested to neutral States against the action of the German administration in tearing up and transporting to Poland the tracks of the Belgian railroads. The protest is based on an article of the Fourth Hague convention, which stipulates that the occupation of invaded territory shall constitute only an occupation de facto.

Removal of the railroads, the note contends, will make much more difficult the transaction of business by a large portion of the population of Belgium.

Fleet of 10,000 Aeroplanes to Protect London

NEW YORK Sept 16 The Herald says:

A fleet of 10,000 armoured aeroplanes equipped with machine guns searchlights and newly perfected bomb-dropping devices is being planned to completion in this country, Canada and elsewhere for use by the British Government in protecting London and the fleet of coast from further attacks by Zeppelin dirigibles. Great Britain already has a fleet of 20,000 aeroplanes of various types and speed.

Germany is making new Zeppelin raids on London and attempts to revenge the great damage done by the allies' aeroplane raids on important munition depots. Mr. Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aero Club of America and aviation editor of Leslie's said:

But England is determined that the most up-to-date methods shall be employed to combat the Zeppelin menace. I have reliable information that there are 5000 to 10,000 aeroplanes now in readiness and hundreds of great armoured war planes guarding London and those lands.

WOMAN SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She was Finally Restored to Health.

Hammond, Ont. — "I am passing through the Change of Life and for two years had hot flushes very bad, headaches, soreness in the back of head, was constipated, and had weak, nervous feelings. The doctor who attended me for a number of years did not help me, but I have been entirely relieved of the above symptoms by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills, and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LOUIS BEAUCAGE, Sr., Hammond, Ont., Canada.

New Brunswick, Canada. — "I can highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's VegetableCompound to any suffering woman. I have taken it for female weakness and painful menstruation and it cured me." — Mrs. DEVERE BARBOUR, Harvey Bank, New Brunswick, Canada.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Weak on the Classics.

One of the latest stories of the Canadian navy being told in Ottawa betrays a healthy disregard of ancient lore on the part of the men behind the guns on our steel walls. It concerns an electrician who was among those volunteering to make up the crew of the "Niobe" at the opening of the war. He was leaving behind him in Ottawa a wife, and that wife was expectant. Just before starting for the port of duty the stalwart sailor told her that if the child should prove a boy he should be named Niobe. Evidently the father had never heard of the sorrowful lady after whom his ship was named. The mother, in all simplicity, told the mistress of a home in which she was temporarily employed the charge which the husband and father had laid on her. It was necessary to explain to her as gently as possible that that particular name did not belong to the boy sex. Niobe, according to the legend, was the mother of twelve children.

The Crimean War.

The Crimean war was in 1853-56 between Russia on one side and Turkey, France, Great Britain and Sardinia, as allies, on the other side. It was called the Crimean war because it was mainly fought in the Crimean peninsula. It arose through the demand of Russia for a protectorate over the Greek subjects of the sultan and was closed and its issues decided by the treaty of Paris March 30, 1856. By this treaty Sebastopol, which had been captured, was restored to Russia. Russia abandoned her claim as to Christians in Turkey and the Black sea was neutralized.

Lost It.

"There is a good deal of talk about the English being slow to appreciate a joke," said Marshall P. Wilder once. "I have not found that to be the case at all, although one Englishman did come to me for an explanation after I had made the remark that 'I dreamed one night that I was dead, but it was so hot that I woke up.'

"'I beg your pardon, Mr. Wilder,' he said, 'but it must be deuced hot in your country.'"

"If you choose to bang your old castle to pieces in order to satisfy a masculine curiosity, Mr. Smart, I have nothing more to say," she said, facing me again—still ominously, to my despair. Confound it all, she was such a slim, helpless little thing—and all alone against a mob of burly ruffians! "Will you be good enough to send your —your army away, or do you prefer to have it on hand in case I should take it into my head to attack you?"

"Take 'em away, Mr. Poopendyke," I commanded hurriedly. As they crowded down the short, narrow stairway I remarked old Conrad and his two sons standing over against the wall, three very sinister figures.

"I see, madame, that you do not dismiss your army," I said, blandly sarcastic.

"Oh, you dear old Conrad!" she cried, catching sight of the hitherto submerged Schmicks. The three of them bobbed and scraped and grinned from ear to ear. There could be no mistaking the intensity of their joy. "Don't look so sad, Conrad. I know you are blameless. You poor old dear!"

I have never seen any one who looked less sad than Conrad Schmick. I rather peremptorily ordered him below.

"I will attend to you presently—all of you," said I. They did not move. "Do you hear me?" I snapped angrily. They looked stolidly at the slim young lady.

She smiled, rather proudly, I thought. "You may go, Conrad. I shall not need you. Max, will you fetch up another scuttle of coal?"

They took their orders from her!

"By Jove!" I said, looking after my trusty men servants as they descended "I like this! Are they my servants or yours?"

"Oh, I suppose they are yours, Mr. Smart," she said carelessly. "Will you come in now and make yourself quite at home?"

"Perhaps I'd better wait for a day or two," said I, wavering. "Your headache, you know. I can wait just as well as"—

"Oh, no! Since you've gone to all the trouble I suppose you ought to have something for your pains."

"Pains?" I murmured, and I declare to heaven I limped as I followed her through the door into a tiny hall.

"You are a most unreasonable man," she said, throwing open a small door at the end of the hall. "I am terribly disappointed in you. You looked to be so nice and sensible and amiable."

"Oh, I'm not such a nincompoop as you might suspect, madame," said I testily, far from complimented.

"And now, Mr. Smart, will you be kind enough to explain this incomprehensible proceeding on your part?" she said, facing me sternly.

But I was dumb. I stood just inside the door of the most remarkable apartment it has ever been my good fortune to look upon. My senses reeled. Was I awake? Was this a part of the bleak, sinister, weather racked castle in which I was striving so hard to find a comfortable corner?

"Well?" she demanded relentlessly.

"By the Lord Harry!" I began, finding my tongue only to lose it again.

The room was completely furnished, bedecked and rendered habitable by a hundred and one articles that were mysteriously missing from my side of the castle. Rugs, tapestries, curtains of the rarest quality; chairs, couches and cushions; tables, cabinets and chests that would have caused the eyes of the most conservative collector of antiques to bulge with—not wonder, but greed; stands, pedestals, brasses, bronzes, porcelains—but why enumerate? On the massive oaken center table stood the priceless silver vase we had missed on the second day of our occupancy, and it was filled with fresh yellow roses.

And so complete had been the riffling of my rooms by the devoted vandals in their efforts to make this lady cozy and comfortable that they did not overlook a silver framed photograph of my dear mother.

I tried to smile. "How—how cozy you are here," I said.

"You couldn't expect me to live in this awful place without some of the comforts and conveniences of life, Mr. Smart," she said defiantly.

"Certainly not," I said promptly. "I am sure that you will excuse me, however, if I gloat. I was afraid we had lost all these things. You've no idea how relieved I am to find them all safe and sound in my—in their proper place. I was beginning to distrust the Schmicks. Now I am convinced of their integrity."

"I suppose you mean to be sarcastic."

"Sarcasm at any price, madame, would be worse than useless, I am sure."

Crossing to the fireplace, I selected a lump of coal from the scuttle and examined it with great care. She watched me curiously.

"Do you recognize it?" she asked.

"I do," said I, looking up. "It has been in our family for generations. My favorite chunk, believe me! Still I part with it cheerfully." Thereupon I tossed it into the fire. "Don't be shocked. I shan't miss it. We have coals to burn, madame."

She looked at me soberly for a moment. There was something hurt and wistful in her dark eyes.

"Of course, Mr. Smart, I shall pay you for everything—down to the smallest trifle—when the time comes for me to leave this place. I have kept strict account of"—

She turned away, with a beaten droop of the proud little head, and again I was shamed.

"Madame," I said, with considerable feeling, "I have behaved like a downright rotter today. I do not know who you are nor why you are here, but I assure you it is of no real consequence if you will but condescend to overlook my insufferable"—

She turned toward me. The wistful, appealing look still lingered in her eyes. The soft red nether lip seemed a bit tremulous.

"I am an intruder," she interrupted, smiling faintly. "You have every right to put me out of your—your home, Mr. Smart. I have been very selfish and cattish and inconsiderate, Mr. Smart. You see, I'm a spoiled child. I've always had my own way in everything. You must look upon me as a very horrid, sneaking, conspiring person, and I—I really think you ought to turn me out."

She came a few steps nearer. Suddenly it was revealed to me that she was the loveliest woman I had ever seen in all my life.

I am afraid that I stared.

"Turn you out?" I cried. "Turn you out of this delightful room after you've had so much trouble getting it into shape? Never!"

"Oh, you don't know how I've imposed upon you!" she cried plaintively. "You don't know how I've robbed you and bothered you"—

"Yes, I do," said I promptly. "I know all about it. You've been stealing my coals, my milk, my ice, my potatoes, my servants, my sleep and"—here I gave a comprehensive sweep of my hand—"everything in sight. And you've made us walk on tiptoe to keep from waking the baby, and"— I stopped suddenly. "By the way, whose baby is it? Not yours, I'm sure."

To my surprise her eyes filled with tears.

"Yes; she is my baby, Mr. Smart," she said, turning away.

CHAPTER VIII.

"The count—my husband."

MY face fell.

She couldn't have been a day over twenty-two. But she had a baby!

Facing me once more, she said:

"Doubtless you are very much puzzled by my presence in this gloomy old castle. You have been asking yourself a thousand questions about me, and you have been shocked by my outrageous impositions upon your good nature. I am here, Mr. Smart, because it is the last place in the world where my husband would be likely to look for me."

"Your husband? Look for you?"

"Yes. I shall be quite frank with you. My husband and I have separated. A provisional divorce was granted, however, just seven months ago. The final decree cannot be issued for one year."

"But why should you hide from him?"

"The—the court gave him the custody of our child during the probationary year. I—I have run away with her. They are looking for me everywhere. That is why I came here. Do you understand?"

I was stunned. "Then, I take it, the court granted him the divorce and not you?" I said, experiencing a sudden chill about the heart. "You were deprived of the child, I see. Dear me!"

"You are mistaken," she said, a flash in her eyes. "It was an Austrian court. The count—my husband, I should say—is an Austrian subject. His interests must be protected." She said this with a sneer on her pretty lips. "You see, my father, knowing him now for what he really is, has refused to pay over to him something like a million dollars, still due for the marriage settlement. The count contends that it is a just and legal debt, and the court supports him to this extent: The child is to be his until the debt is cleared up, or something to that effect. I really don't understand the legal complications involved. Perhaps it were better if I did."

"I see," said I, scornful in spite of myself. "One of those happy international marriages where a bride is thrown in for good measure with a couple of millions. Won't we ever learn?"

"That's it precisely," she said, with the utmost calmness and candor. "American dollars and an American girl in exchange for a title, a lot of debts and a ruined life."

"And they always turn out just this way. What a lot of blithering fools we have in the land of the free and the home of the knave!"

"My father objected to the whole arrangement from the first, so you must not speak of him as a knave," she protested. "He doesn't like counts and such things."

"I am not asking for pity."

"I don't see that it helps matters. I can hardly substitute the word 'brave' for the one I used," said I, trying to conceal my disgust.

"Please don't misunderstand me, Mr. Smart," she said haughtily. "I am not asking for pity. I made my bed, and I shall lie in it. The only thing I ask of you is—well, kindness."

She seemed to falter again, and once more I was at her feet, figuratively speaking.

"You are in distress, in dread of something, madame!" I cried. "Consider me your friend."

Totally Discouraged by Nervous Prostration

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chases' Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well gets little sympathy, as few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration successfully. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams, Tilsonburg, Ont., R.R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and dependent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well, and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ARMSBY'S CAPTURE

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Armsby was to be his aunt's heir. The day he came of age the old lady sent for him and thus addressed him:

"Bert, I wish you to marry. I take it for granted that you are fancy free. I would not for the world force you to wed any one you don't love. There is a girl who I am sure you would love if you only knew her as I do. I wish you to become acquainted with her, and if, after a certain time, you don't fancy her I shall not insist on your yielding to my wishes."

"I don't wish to marry and I won't."

"But you are not so unreasonable as to avoid the girl I have mentioned?"

"Yes, I am."

Perhaps it was the fact of her nephew's indifference to her fortune, perhaps her great affection for him, perhaps a desire to have her own way. At any rate, the old lady resolved to conquer. She talked of other matters for awhile, then said carelessly:

"How would you like a trip abroad?"

"I should be delighted, but it would cost several thousand dollars."

"I will furnish the amount necessary on one condition—that on your return you spend a week with me."

The conditions were accepted. Armsby went abroad and on his return went directly to his aunt's country house, where she was at the time. At dinner he was presented to Miss Lucy Ellison. He saw at once that he had been drawn into a trap. He had agreed to spend a week in the house and was to be besieged by this young woman.

This was true, and there was more that he was not aware of. Miss Ellison had a way with her that was very taking with men. No one could find out exactly why, but they tumbled over one another in endeavoring to win a smile from her. Sometimes she was coy, sometimes aggressive. She knew when to be the one and when to be the other.

Armsby was indignant at the trick his aunt had played him. After dinner, finding her alone, he said to her:

"Aunt, you have brought me here in order that this girl may get me for a husband. I will keep my contract. I will remain with you a week, but you may tell your friend that I will have nothing to do with her. I shall expect you to order my meals served in my room."

"Certainly, Bert; anything you wish."

The next morning Armsby sent downstairs for the morning paper and sat himself down by his window to read the news. Glancing up from it, there in a hammock swung between two trees was Miss Ellison in a pure white summer costume, a dream of loveliness. There were no windows in Armsby's room that did not face in that direction, and the only way he could shut out the view was to draw the shade. This he did, but the interior of his room soon grew tiresome, and he raised it again.

He stood looking down on the charmer, trying to conjure up some plan for freeing himself from the siege to which he must be subjected for a week. He was free to spend a portion of each day elsewhere, but he had no friends in the neighborhood, and how can a man amuse himself alone? He began to realize, to speak in commonplace language, that he was in a hole.

He went down to the library, selected a book, returned and sat himself down to read. But somehow in spite of all he could do his eyes would wander from the book and out to the girl in the hammock. Surely it was a pleasing picture, so retired. The folds of the skirt hung gracefully over the side of the hammock; the point of a dainty white slipper peeped beyond a fringe of lace.

Armsby sent down word to his aunt that he wished his room changed to the other side of the house. After luncheon he went for a walk, but he did not go far—the day was too warm. Returning, he took a siesta and, when he awoke, went to the window. There sat or, rather, reclined Miss Ellison on a rustic bench, propped by half a dozen pillows. She saw him, waved her hand to him and smiled.

The smile was a telling shot. Armsby couldn't forget it. He rubbed his eyes to get rid of it, but it would not be downed. There was something so unusual in this barefaced attempt to capture him that it began to interest him. Barefaced or not, its very aggressiveness captivated him. He had a mind to let the girl have her way just to see what she would do with him. Besides, how was he to live for a week by himself? The first day seemed interminable. What would be the last? An eternity. Anyway, he would rather stand siege, with the freedom of the house, than shut up in his room.

So he lowered his flag so far as this was concerned, went downstairs and thereafter took his meals with the others. Miss Ellison for five days continued her aggressive tactics, then changed like a south wind hauling to the north and froze him. The remaining two days of the time set for his visit she kept him in tortures, relented on the sixth, and on the seventh he declared that if she didn't love him he would blow out his brains.

What Armsby's aunt wanted was that the girl, of whom she was very fond, should enjoy her property as the wife of her nephew. What Miss Ellison wanted was a rich husband.

HAD DYSENTERY.

WAS VERY BAD WITH IT.

Mrs. C. A. McKnight, Mulvihill, Man., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for nine years, and I would not be without it in the house. I was very bad with dysentery, a friend gave me a dose of 'Dr. Fowler's,' and told me to get a bottle right away, which I did, and it did me lots of good. My brother was bad too, and I told him to take it, and he was cured. I hope there are others who will get 'Dr. Fowler's' and keep it in the house, for it will surely save doctor's bills."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 70 years, and has been used in thousands of Canadian homes during that time.

You do not experiment when you buy it. See that you get what you ask for, and if your dealer tries to palm off a substitute on you, insist on getting "Dr. Fowler's," or go where you can get it.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—The state of the wheat crop and markets is a subject that occupies the minds of the public considerably these days. The prospects of a billion bushel wheat crop in the United states were increased this past week by a report from Washington, which forecasts 967,000,000 bushels, based on the September 1st canvass. Corn, oats, barley, rye, and buckwheat are also in excess of last year. To the majority of us it is rather hard to understand why quotations on wheat are so low at present, in view of the fact that foreign authorities assert that Europe will need to import as much wheat or more than last year. Explanations of these conditions are numerous. A New York commercial paper says:

"With European governments fixing a maximum price for wheat, speculative buying is removed. Our own wheat crop is larger than last years, and other neutral countries have increased their harvests. A 50-cent drop in foreign exchange complicates the situation. It is called equivalent to a 12-cent per bushel fall in wheat, and ocean freight rates are higher."

Quotations on dairy produce have increased slightly during the week; coarse grains are quiet; live stock is reported steady.

WHEAT.

It has been suggested that Holland might make a good market for Canadian off grade wheat this year if arrangements were made by which it could be admitted into that country. It is possible, however, that if such measures were taken this wheat might reach the hands of Germany. At present No. 1 Northern spot wheat is quoted $1.06, No. 2, $1.03, Manitoba wheat No. 1, $1.05; No. 2, $1.02; Ontario wheat, No. 2 new, 99c to 92c, sought by tough, 65c to 68c, sprouted or smutty, 70c to 80c.

COARSE GRAINS.

Quotations: Ontario oats, No. 2 white, new, 36c to 39c, No. 3, 37c to 38c; American corn, 84c; other grains nominal. At Montreal oats (C.W. No. 2 are quoted 44c, No. 3, 43c; local wheat, 42c to 43c; American corn, 89c.

MILL FEEDS.

Bran and feed flour have taken another drop, bran now being quoted $25, shorts, $27, middlings, $28, and feed flour, $1.80 a bag. At Montreal, bran is quoted $22 to $23, shorts, $25 to $35, middlings, $29 to $33, moullie, $17 to $17.25.

HAY AND STRAW.

The receipts of new hay are reported ample for all requirements, and prices have dropped during the week. No. 1 baled hay being quoted $15 to $16 on track here. No. 2, $13 to $14; baled straw, $6.50. At Montreal No. 1 is quoted $18 to $19.50, No. 2, $17 to $17.50, No. 3, $15 to $16.

EGGS AND POULTRY.

Eggs are coming on to the market very freely and the quality is good. At Montreal receipts during the week were 22,397 cases against 5,362 cases the same week last year. Eggs in cartons are quoted at 25c to 27c; straights, 25c to 27c; No. 1, new-laid, 23c to 24c; No. 2, 17c to 20c.

Poultry quotations follow: old fowl, 12c; dressed, 15c to 16c; spring broilers, live, 16c to 17c; old turkeys, live, 13c to 17c; dressed, 17c to 23c; ducklings, live, 15c to 17c; dressed, 17c to 18c; turkeys, dressed, 21c to 25c.

HONEY.

Honey: Buckwheat, 7½c a lb in one 7c to 7½c in barrels, strained clover honey, 12c to 12½c, 5lb in 5-lb tins, comb honey, No. 1, $3 a dozen, No. 2, $2.40 a dozen, 60-lb. tins, 11½c; 10-lb. tins, 12c.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES.

The market here was glutted with peaches last week. Railways were backward with deliveries and the weather was hard on the fruit. In order that completeness might be averted loads of dead-ripe fruit were carried away to be manufactured into jam. There was a large quantity of corn on the market, also tomatoes. Quotations:—Thimbleberries, box 6c to 6c, blue berries, bkt., $1.15 to $1.50, crabs, 11 qt. bkt., 25c to 30c; apples, 11 qt. bkt., 25c to 40c; pears, 11 qt. bkt., 30c to 50c; peaches, 11 qt. bkt., 30c to 60c; plums, 11 qt. bkt., 25c to 30c; potatoes, Ontarios, 75c to 80c a bag; tomatoes, 15c to 20c; corn, 7c to 10c a dozen; onions, bkt., 40c to 50c.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

Although prices on butter are steadily moving up, dealers complain of a cheap pointing local demand for this time of the year when buyers usually lay in a supply. Several outside orders have been received, however, which have tended to strengthen the market. Advices from Calgary and Edmonton state that the prospects for the fall make of butter are good and that the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan hope to share with New Zealand in supplying the coast trade during the coming fall and winter. Creamery prints, fresh made, are quoted on the market, at 29c to 30c; solids, 27c to 29c; dairy prints, 25c to 26c; bakers, 22c to 25c.

Advices from England for cheese are firm, and prices on cheese boards here during the week have advanced. At sterling prices brought 1c more than at the previous week's sale, the offerings being 13 5-16c. At Madoc 14c was paid and at Peterboro 14¼c. Quotations on other boards follow.

LIVE STOCK

In reviewing the market for the week, we find that about 500 cattle came on the market and while this number was considerably in excess of the previous week, it was 1,000 behind the corresponding week of last year. For the most part the quality of the cattle was poor to medium, but this account prices for same did not vary. Sheep sales were active during the week. Prices on hogs and calves remained steady. Quotations average as follows:

Heavy, choice steers, $8.20 to $8.40; heavy steers, $7.90 to $8.20; butcher steers, good, $7.50 to $7.90; com. to med., $6 to $7; butcher steers, choice, $7.50 to $7.90; choice cows, $7.50 to $7.75; med. to good, $6.50 to $7; com. to med., $5 to $6; canners, $3.50 to $4; choice heifers, $7.25 to $7.75; med. to good, $6.50 to $7.25; feeders, $6.50 to $7.50; stockers, $5.25 to $7; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $5.

Milch cows remained high in price, choice ones being quoted $75 to $100; med. to good, $60 to $75; com., $45 to $60; springers, $50 to $90. Calf shipments fell off considerably during the week but prices continued fairly firm, good veal calves going at $8.50 to $10.50; com. to med., $6.50 to $8.50.

Mutton values were easier, almost twice as many sheep and lambs being handled last week than the same week last year. Lambs, yearling, light, $6.50 to $7.50; spring lambs, cwt., $4 to $4.50; ewes, light, $6.50 to $6.50; heavy sheep and bucks, $4.50 to $5.50; culls, $2 to $3.50.

Prices on hogs remained practically unchanged, packers quoting $8.90 to $9.90 f.o.b. country points, and $9.40 to $9.65 off cars.

Crisco and Lard

There is something about animal fat that is hard on the human digestion. Lard is entirely an animal fat.

Vegetable fat is a good deal easier to digest and a great deal better for you. Crisco is a purely vegetable fat.

CRISCO
For Frying-For Shortening
For Cake Making

There are different grades of vegetable fats. Crisco is made of only the very highest grade, strained and re-strained, and put through special processes which insure its purity.

Crisco melts at a temperature below that of the human body it does not require the action of the digestive juices for this purpose.

If you appreciate food which digests easier and is more wholesome than when made with lard, you should try Crisco. You will find it the ideal cooking fat.

KAISER TO REFORM ?

Prussian Socialists Hope Unjust Evil Army Constitution Repealed

Will the Kaiser and the Socialists enter into a compact to break down the rule of the Junkers in Prussia and pave the way for a new constitution which will make the people of Prussia free and self governing? The Socialists cherish this wild hope. In the Frankfurter Zeitung a well known Socialist, Wolfgang Heine, explains why he has full confidence in the Kaiser, who in a recent manifest stated that if Germany were to progress along the new lines destined for her after the end of the war all domestic discord must cease and old adversaries must forget their enmities and work in harmony to fulfill their duties as true and loyal German citizens. At present the constitution of Prussia is the most antiquated in Europe, the aristocratic and wealthy classes being in almost absolute control, while the majority of voters are very inadequately represented in Diet. To remedy this evil a thorough reform of the Prussian election laws is absolutely necessary and for years such reform has been promised the people by the government, but the conservative and reactionary parties have always found means to obstruct the way.

"The principal foundation of the claim of the wealthier classes for political privileges," Heine writes, "has always been that they contribute a greater share of the taxes, but what does this mean now when it is impossible to imagine that anyone would dare speak of money in comparison with the enormous sacrifices in lives, blood and health which the working classes have made. We demand that what was always injustice be now abolished and we expect that the state as well as the other political parties will realize how poorly their former treatment of the Socialists has served Germany's best interests. What the governments of the empire and the various states and the ruling classes are asked to grant—political equality and freedom—is as nothing compared with what the state asks from those who have hitherto been suppressed and who have been deprived of all their rights, that they forget the injustice they have suffered in the past." There is no doubt that those words aroused a strong echo throughout the German people, but it is equally certain that they have fallen upon deaf ears, as far as the reactionary parties are concerned.

ENGLAND TO RESTORE JEWS TO PALESTINE

Wisdom of Zionists in Sending Brave Hebrews From Jerusalem to Aid Against Turks is Argued

Sir Ian Hamilton had occasion to commend the Zion Mule Corps for its excellent work at the Dardanelles and for the bravery of its members. Jews from Palestine, in carrying food and water under severe Turkish fire to the Tommies in the trenches. In this connection the Jewish Daily Eagle, a leading Zionist organ, says: Our readers will have read the interview with Mr W. Zhobotinsky, the noted Zionist, who organized the "Hebrew Corps," of Russia fugitives from Palestine to fight for the Allies against Turkey. Mr. Zhobotinsky has been criticized by some American Yiddish papers for undertaking such a dangerous venture that could only enrage the Ottoman government against the Jews remaining in Palestine and above all against the Zionists. The Yiddish press contends that the Zionist movement must be absolutely "neutral" in the present crisis. But after weighing the arguments and explanations of Mr. Zhobotinsky, one must admit that he has acted in a thoroughly diplomatic spirit.

"Turkey has in any case been seeking to destroy the Jewish colonization," said Mr. Zhobotinsky, "but she could not succeed on account of the intervention of the American Government. The American ambassador at Constantinople, Henry Morgenthau, (a Jew), exerted his utmost power to prevent such a catastrophe. He also influenced Germany to persuade Turkey to treat her Jewish subjects equitably. Only by his good offices the Jewish colonies were saved from the direct disaster."

If Turkey Wins

Mr. Zhobotinsky further declared that after the war, should Turkey emerge victorious with her Allies the Jews could expect no help from her, as she would endeavor with all her energy to extirpate the movement from Palestine. In whatever manner peace may be concluded, the Allies will always play a more prominent role than Turkey, even if with Germany's aid, she survives the terrible chastisement given her. And without the help of the Allies, it is certain that the Jews cannot gain Palestine, nor will it be advisable for them so to get it. Zionism demands the restoration of Palestine as a Jewish home whose independence and security shall be guaranteed by the Powers, and what Powers are to be looked to but England, France, Russia, Italy, etc.?

The Zionists themselves would not recommend the Jews to settle in Palestine without the guarantee of the above nations that the Jewish people will be left to live and develop in Palestine according to their own social and religious customs, and without any interference. As far as Turkey herself is concerned, it is a matter of history that she has always placed obstacles in our way.

To Neutralize Palestine

Not only the destiny of our own people will be finally determined by the Allies, but also the fate of Turkey herself. The war between England and Germany will sometime again be reconciled, whichever of them is triumphant, for both are Christian and kindred nations. Thus, Turkey will remain the weaker, the "alien." The unnatural love between her and Germany will soon or late dissipate and vanish. The question will then again arise. Which of the two great powers Germany or England—shall be paramount in respect to Palestine? It is certainly in England's interest that that little strip of territory the key of Asia shall be in neutral possession and in no event in Ottoman control, for the very reason of Germany's influence over Turkey. If then Palestine is to be surrendered to a third, entirely neutral nation, it will assured by be the Jews, if of course, England sees no difficulty with them. It will be more to England's advantage than Germany's, that Palestine shall no longer remain under Turkish administration.

Accordingly, England will be the only power who will fight the Jewish cause in the peace conversations. England will be the only one who on account of her own interests, must also defend our Jewish interests and it is therefore of the utmost importance that England shall not be given cause to harbor any doubt of our friendship. Mr. Zhobotinsky therefore very properly sought to convince England of the devotion of the Jews to the Allies' cause. It was a far-sighted move made when he organized the corps of Jewish volunteers to fight against Turkey under the joint flags of Zion and England. Under England's banner the existence of the Jewish people will be "legally and worthily secured" and our national autonomy complete, which is exactly what the Zionist movement seeks.

GERMAN AMMUNITION DEPOTS ARE EXPLODED BY FRENCH ARTILLERY

Enemy Bombarded Arras Once More But Their Guns Are Silenced by the Effective Fire of the French--Lively Artillery Actions Reported All Along the Vosges Battle Front and at Other Points on the Western Line.

AMERICAN CARGOES SEIZED IN PRIZE COURT

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(French Official Statement)—The suburbs of Arras already partly in ruins, were subjected to a heavy bombardment by the German gunners last night. Buildings were sent toppling in ruins and several fires started. The French artillery quickly got the range of the German batteries and the bombardment ended. The French gun fire was particularly effective last night around Roye and Lassigney. German amunition depots were exploded at a number of points and destructive fires started. The whole front was illuminated by the glare of burning buildings along the German trench line. Lively artillery actions continue in the Woevre, Champagne, and all along the Vosges battle line, this afternoon's communique stated, but they have been devoid of important results. No infantry actions of any importance occurred last night.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The Government to-day introduced a bill calling to the colours the classes 1917 and 1888, the date to be fixed by the Minister of War. This brings to the colours the French youths of eighteen years, and men of 47 years, who are still fit for service. About 250,000 French boys, many of them now in schools, will thus be ordered to the training camps to prepare for the trenches under this act.

ADMITS LOSS OF E-7.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Admiralty officially admitted this afternoon the recent Turkish claim that the British submarine E-7 has been sunk and its crew captured, is presumably true.

$65,000,000 ARTILLERY ORDER FOR CANADA.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The first order which the British Government is placing with Canadian manufacturers for artillery field guns and howitzers, is for $65,000,000 according to a statement of a prominent delegate who attended the Ottawa munition conference on Monday.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Valuable cargoes on several ships bound from America to Copenhagen were seized by the Admiralty Prize Court in a judgment handed down to-day. In delivering the judgment of the Prize Court, Sir Samuel Evans charged that a number of American shippers had attempted to evade the British blockade of Germany through false manifests, and warned them that their acts would "weigh heavily against them in the future.

The value of goods confiscated estimated at more than ten million dollars. American meat packers are the heaviest sufferers.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Bulgaria's demand for explanation from Greece, Serbia and Rumania as to the concentration of troops on her borders by these countries is the first intimation here that the other Balkan powers had taken notice of Germany's intimation recently that Bulgaria would shortly join the Germanic allies in the present war.

AUSTRIANS BADLY DEFEATED.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 16.—The Austrian right wing has been shattered and thrown back nearly twenty miles in the fighting in Southeast Galicia. The Russian pursuit continues and slav detachments have crossed the Strypa and now occupy positions on the western bank. The number of Austrian prisoners exceeds 30,000. Official despatches to-day indicate that the Austrian retreat extends northward to near Brody. German divisions are making desperate efforts to stay the Russian advance by counter-attacks and have lost severely in the fighting before Tarnopol. The Austrians who attempteed to approach Rovno have been beaten back and are under heavy attack in the Aovno-Dubno fortress district. From Rovno north to the Baltic the situation was described as most optimistic in to-day's official despatches. The Germans southeast of Riga appear to have been brought to a halt.

DUMA IS PROROGUED.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 16.—Russian Duma has been prorogued by order of the Czar. Many reforms demanded by Liberals were tabled till next session.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The New York financiers who have been meeting with the English-French commission allowed it to be understood to-day the billion-dollar credit sought by the visitors is practically arranged for. They have found the bankers of the Unted States sufficiently willing to participate, they said, to guarantee the success of the proposed loan. This was the upshot of views changed and reports made on the course of a conference at the Biltmore Hotel which ended at an early hour this morning, after having been in session since yesterday afternoon. Whether or not they were ready to concede the request of the visitors that no security other than the word of the English and French governments be enacted was not stated.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—The German forces have captured Pinsk. This is 100 miles east of Brest-Litovsk, and is 10 miles west of the Vilno-Rovno railway lines.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The British losses at the Dardanelles to date total 79,238 in killed and wounded, Under-Secretary Tennant announced in the Commons this afternoon.

HOLY LAND IS NOW A VAST MILITARY CAMP

LONDON, Sept 15.—A despatch from Jerusalem says Armed airships and aeroplanes are continually flying over the birthplace of the Prince of Peace, at Bethlehem, according to the Rote aus Zion (The Messenger from Zion), a newspaper published in Palestine by a Swiss missionary. Nearly the entire Holy Land has been transformed into a military camp. Soldiers are manoeuvring every day on the Mount of Olives, at Golgotha and Jerusalem. The English, French and Russian convents have been turned into barracks and between Judea and Jericho, where transportation was by mule pack in the days when Christ came to bring "peace on earth," a road is being constructed for armoured motor cars. Long columns of buffaloes, driven by Arab peasants, are hauling carts loaded with powder, projectiles and other supplies for the Turkish army along the favourite routes of pilgrims in Palestine. Fast dromedaries of the Camel Corps maintain communication between the camps in Palestine and the Turkish headquarters. It is supposed that the concentration of the young recruits in the Holy Land is with a view of another attack upon Egypt.

LOCAL RECRUITS ARE MEASURED FOR THEIR UNIFORMS

It is Hoped That They Will Be Outfitted Shortly—News That They Will Be Billeted Here During the Winter is Well Received

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The measurements of all the men of the 80th Battalion were taken this morning by Company Quartermaster Sergeant Jack Williams, and will be forwarded at once to Kingston. It is expected that the local men will soon receive their uniforms. A message from General McDonald received by Mr. J. H. Burnham, last night, intimated that the demand would be met as soon as the size rolls are sent in.

The intimation from Major General Hughes that the companies to winter in Peterborough are to be billeted in private homes has been gladly received by the men of the 80th. They realise that they will be much more comfortable in billets than in barracks, while financially, they will be better off, inasmuch as they will receive $1.85 per day while in billets, as against $1.10 per day in barracks, in the latter case the men being fed by the Government. In favour of the barracks proposition, of course, there is the fact that the men are always under strict control, but with the calibre of the men enlisting in Peterborough there is no need for any alarm about their conduct. Yesterday was pay-day for the local recruits an occasion that among some soldiers means a crowded guard-house next morning, but there was absolutely no trouble about the men of the 80th.

The 80th Battalion may have to furnish a guard of honour for Sir Sam Hughes on Saturday, although the details of the reception have not been arranged.

A number of the Peterborough members of the 8th C M R are home on leave from Barrie field to-day.

The local detachment is growing steadily larger. Each day new recruits are added, and from the district outside the city men are beginning to come forward. Lakefield has done especially well in view of the number of recruits already sent out by supplying about a dozen men to the 80th. Keene has already sent five, and from other points recruits are reporting for medical examination.

Pte Tilleock of the 80th Battalion is in Kingston for duty in the Quarter-Master's office of the 80th Battalion.

There will be a recruiting tent at the Exhibition Grounds and a recruiting staff will be hard at work. It is likely that a motor car will be placed at their disposal to transport recruits to the Armouries for medical examination.

Sergt. Barlow of the 8th C M R was discharged from the K G H yesterday morning after suffering from a fractured leg.

Trooper Lawrence of the 8th, who was in the K G H, is well again and back on duty.

Gunner Cook of the 3rd battery has been discharged from the Hotel Dieu and returned to the field hospital suffering from malaria. Cook is an old soldier who has seen service in India and Egypt and contracted malaria in Fashoda.

TOMMY, YOU AND I

(AFTER KIPLING)

When you've finished making bandages, and through with knitting socks,
When you've done your bit for China and Japan,
Will you kindly drop a dollar in my missionary box,
For another, who's a "brother and a man"
He aint no "bally Heathen" and he aint no "Plaster Saint,"
But he likes his pipe, the same as you and I:
Perhaps it's wrong to want it, and then perhaps it ain't,
That's a matter we can settle bye-and-bye.

Tommy is not at a picnic, and he is not at a dance.
But where'er he is he likes his little joke;
And the other day he wrote me from place "somewhere in France"
That "the only thing he wanted was a smoke."
And the shrapnel shells were singing overhead,
"And he said the shots were humming just like a swarm of bees,
And the gases they were floating along upon the breeze,
And the stench was just delightful," so he said

"For it reached right up to Heaven; he could cut it with a knife;
That's the time," he says, "that eating was a joke,
But the ONE fly in the ointment of his 'sweet, pastoral life'
Was, he'd like to have the makings of a smoke."
So I put it to you plainly, just as a pal to pal,
And I'm going to give it to you good and strong
Tommy sends—TO YOU—a message out of that infernal hell,
Are you going to keep him waiting very long?

—STEVE COLLINS,
Treasurer T. & D. F. A.

There are many times when eating is a joke, and our boys would give all they possess for the makings of a smoke.

FIVE HUNDRED MEN WILL BE QUARTERED IN CITY DURING WINTER MONTHS

According to Information Supplied to Mayor Butler By the Minister of Militia---Men Will Likely Be Billeted in Private Houses---Two Companies Will Go to Belleville

COUNCIL ACCEPTS THE REPORT

A special meeting of the City Council was held last evening when the following report was presented by His Worship Mayor Butler:

Gentlemen of the Council: At a meeting of the Council held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 7th, a deputation from the Speakers' Patriotic League presented to us the following propositions:

Would the Council be willing to pay five hundred dollars per month as rent for the housing of a battalion of troops here during the winter months?

The advantages of the proposition were discussed and nearly all were agreed that it was a good one. Some thought it could be secured without any liability on the part of the City, and suggested that the Mayor and one alderman go to Ottawa to see if this arrangement could be made.

On Friday I went to Ottawa in company with Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Alderman Edgar. We called on the Hon. Sir Sam Hughes, and asked if he would not, in consideration of what Peterborough had done in the way of recruiting, give us a battalion for the winter. He said "No." Belleville had expended a considerable amount of money in providing the Government with free quarters and only had a battalion for two months, therefore, they had been promised two companies (600 men) and the other two companies would be given to Peterborough.

Mr. Burnham asked the question "If we make an offer to provide free quarters, can we have a full battalion?" Answer "No."

In reply to a question by the Mayor the Minister said the Government would assume all expenses in connection with the disposal of troops here. He outlined three plans: 1st, by the renting of a suitable building; 2nd, by providing shacks, but that this plan had not proved satisfactory in Canada; 3rd, by billeting the troops in private houses. This plan the Minister considered as the most satisfactory one, as a greater number of people would receive benefit therefrom, the government guaranteeing the board.

With regard to the suggestion of the Speakers' Patriotic League your deputation is not in a position to say whether better results could have been obtained without going to Ottawa before the recommendation was made by the officers commanding the district, but it had, in our opinion, a tendency to reopening the question with results as already stated.

Mr. Burnham gave us all the assistance possible in the matter and told us of this Council thought it advisable to take any further steps in the matter he would be only too glad to assist in any way.

Ald. Green considered the report a very satisfactory one. It practically provides for the establishment in Peterborough of two companies of two hundred and fifty men each, while a similar number will be quartered in Belleville. The report was accepted without discussion.

"San Toy" Had Splendid Start

San Toy had a splendid send-off on Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the initial practices. The high standard of excellence set up by the Gerrard Company in the Earl Grey competition in Toronto will be maintained in the present production.

A kindly letter of appreciation of the vim of amateurs in taking up such a difficult play has been received by Mr R. J. Dewey from a lady in the city, who for three years was engaged in the original production at Daly's Theatre, London, England.

Practices for this week: Friday, 7 to 10 ladies; Saturday, 2 to 10, gentlemen; at the same time and place.

LAKEFIELD FAIR

Sept. 21 and 22

The annual Exhibition of the Lakefield Agricultural Society will be held in the Society's Grounds in Lakefield on Tuesday and Wednesday Sept. 21 and 22. There is every prospect for an excellent Fair and the directors are working hard to make it one of the best in the district.

The main building has been greatly enlarged so as to furnish ample accommodation for all exhibits and the Society has added three more acres to the grounds and the track for speeding has been increased to a half mile.

SIR SAM HUGHES TO VISIT PETERBORO'

Canada's Minister of Militia Has Signified His Intention of Visiting This City on Saturday Next—Will Inspect the 80th Battalion at the Exhibition.

A CIVIC RECEPTION

Major General Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B., Minister of Militia and Defence, will pay an official visit to this city on Saturday next. A message to this effect was received last evening by His Worship Mayor Butler in reply to a formal invitation from the City Council. When the Council met last evening Mayor Butler announced that he had received word to the effect that Major General Sir Sam Hughes might be able to visit Peterborough on Saturday afternoon. With this information at hand the Council decided to forward a formal invitation on behalf of the city. An hour or so later a reply was received confirming the Minister's original intention to visit Peterborough if possible on Saturday next. It was the hope of the Fair directors that Canada's distinguished knight would be able to open the Peterborough Industrial Fair today. Counter engagements prevented this. His presence here on the closing day of the fair will afford many people the privilege of seeing the Minister of Militia in "a row," as the programme includes an inspection of the 80th Battalion.

A Tentative Programme.

Major General Sir Sam Hughes is expected to arrive in the city on the noon train from Berlin, Ontario. He will be tendered a luncheon by the city, after which an informal reception will be held. The party will then proceed to the Exhibition ground where Sir Sam will inspect the members of the 80th Battalion and in all probability deliver an address. Members of the Federal and Provincial parliaments representing Peterborough and a dozen counties will be present to welcome the visitor. The Reception committee of the City Council have charge of the arrangements for the civic reception to be tendered the Minister, who will probably spend the week-end at his home in Lindsay.

LOCAL "EX" GATES OPENED TO-DAY FOR BIG FAIR

Horticultural Display Had Large Exhibit at Early Hour—Horses Should Be Feature

ATTRACTIONS REPORTED GOOD

This is the opening or get-together day of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. Mr. J. H. Garbutt, the president, with many of the directors was on the grounds early supervising the final details in arrangements, receiving exhibits, letting final concessions between times, turning their weather eyes to the west. Industry on every hand was directed to bringing order and neatness out of the usual bustle of the opening day.

Even at eleven o'clock the horticultural exhibit had reached splendid proportions and lovers of flowers will find this tent a bower of bloom by Friday afternoon. Asters, gladioli, dahlias, are being extensively used, with numerous varieties of each. The flower display is enhanced by the professional exhibits of arrangements, for which generous accommodation has been devoted.

Poultry.

It was rather early for poultry entries, but among those from outside Peterborough was W. J. Monroe's black and white Orpingtons, Leghorns and other birds. Mr. Jos. Kelly was engaged in arranging and designating the various coops.

Not Exhibiting.

Mr. Allen B. Mann of Bridgenorth stated that he was not exhibiting Shorthorn cattle this year. He has entered a mare and foal, however. Mr. C. E. Moore of Smith, found the duties too strenuous to enter Holstein cattle, but he has exhibits in the roots.

Art Work.

Quite a number of art exhibits were received this morning and this department should make a good showing.

Oshawa Horses.

Mr. W. J. Cox, a local director has returned from the Oshawa Fair and states that all the horses shown there are coming to Peterborough. This was the intention of their owners at any rate. There were twenty-five concessions coming from the Oshawa show and most of them are midway and industrial features.

Mr. Cox says that the grand stand performance is one of the best he has seen. It is booked for Peterborough and Mr. Cox is confident it will be well received.

Early Exhibitors

Jas. Seymour & Son of Ida have a string of exhibits in the horse and cattle class. R. E. Johnston of Bobcaygeon enters his dogs and cattle here for the first time. Thomas Thompson of Hiawatha is exhibitor in apples, pears and other fruits. Wm. Roberts & Son of Petrie Island are showing cattle. G. H. Mark & Son of Little Britain, cattle and sheep.

It is impossible to estimate the number of entries to be received to-day, it is hoped that the total will be an uniformly large one.

Hote Meals Served

Five lunch and hot meal tents are located just east of the exhibit building. Ladies of the Co-Workers Bible class of the George street Methodist church of St. George's church, the Park street Baptist church and other have undertaken to provide hot eats for the farmers especially, from all accounts a ready home task. This morning they were bombarded by several showers, but no inconvenience was experienced.

WILL PROSECUTE

Mr. G. W. Hatch, has been appointed prosecuting attorney for the Fall Assizes at which Chancellor Boyd will sit next week.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 16, 1915

ASK AND RECEIVE.

Mayor Church, of Toronto, joins the ranks of complainers as to the scarcity of uniforms for recruits. The fact that he, a Conservative, is unable to restrain his condemnation of a Conservative government, is taken by some who apply the party gauge to everything, to mean that there is more in his complaints than in those of the average arm-chair critic. But one can be fair and make allowance for facts as well as conditions. It is only fair to remind grumblers, that a good deal of the shortage of uniforms mentioned, is due, not to lack of a supply at headquarters, but to the neglect of commanding officers of recruit units to ask for them. There are known cases where shortage of uniforms has been a grievance of recruits and the public, and the whole fault lay in the commanding officer not having sent in a requisition for them. When he did this the uniforms arrived post haste, almost. In managing a highly complex machine, system and order, and red tape to a limited extent, are as necessary in the supply department, as the goose step is in the ranks. In the majority of cases it is said, commanding officers who need uniforms for recruits have only to ask to receive.

REMEMBER THE BOYS AND REMEMBER THE WEIGHT.

Reference has been made as to how sweet and beautiful a thing it is to remember the boys in the trenches or the fighting lines, with little gifts from home, and relatives or friends, which, trifling as they may be, are odorous with the fragrance of home remembrance. We are also impressed in this connection with evidence of the carelessness with which some persons read the newspapers. It was announced in the press, not once but impressed by repetition, that the local branch of the Red Cross, would send parcels to soldiers in the field free of charge. It was stated as clearly as words could do, that the weight of each parcel must be limited to seven pounds. Yesterday the Red Cross ladies were wrestling at the Public Library with the parcels sent in under the new arrangement. While most of the parcels were of seven pounds or less, there were several parcels that would balance two or three times that weight. This not only gives the ladies a great deal of trouble, but tends to produce disappointment of the senders and the intended recipients of the over-weight parcels.

Let it be clearly understood that the weight of parcels to be sent through the Red Cross free of charge for carriage, to soldiers on active service, must be limited to SEVEN POUNDS, securely parcelled. If senders want to be more generous the parcel that threatens to be overweight, can be divided into two or more in order to bring the weight of each parcel within seven pounds. If senders of parcels will remember this they will save the Red Cross ladies a world of trouble, and lessen the danger of disappointment to themselves and the soldiers for whom parcels are intended. Seven pounds is seven pounds—the limit—not ten pounds or fifteen pounds. Keep this in mind.

THE MORAL OF NORTH ONTARIO STRAWBERRIES.

The offering for sale, by Mr. E. F. Mason & Co., of strawberries September-ripened in Northern or New Ontario, has a moral and a lesson for us. It teaches us something of the extent and wide range of our food-production possibilities, and gives us larger conceptions of the possibilities of our resources, and gives us larger faith in the future development of Canada. We feel vaguely that we have a country of great resources; but, we have not all, in the past, had a lively faith in them, nor have we all now, perhaps, even in the light of the marvellous development of our brief past, measurably adequate conception of what we have and of what can be made of it.

About sixty years ago, an outline wall map of North America hung upon the rough plaster of the walls of an Ontario country school house. This map showed the United States, and the fringe of settlement represented by the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Ontario. The whole region, now occupied by Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, was represented by a great blank, a big splash of white, and it was labelled "The Great American Desert." Yet in the same "great American desert" we now have a population nearly equal to the total population of Canada seventy or eighty years ago, and a grain production this year of about 600 million bushels, including 300 millions of wheat.

Our forefathers, even that far-sighted optimist Joe Howe, never saw this ahead of them. The projectors of our first transcontinental railway were accused by many good patriots with having a quixotic faith in the resources and future of the West; and the splendid realization would have dazzled the hardy eye of the optimist if he could have seen things as they are to-day — nearly a billion bushels of grain ripened on the plains of the "great American desert," and the same desert become the granary of the Empire. Now we have three transcontinental railways, and before long they will be glutted to inadequateness in the removal of the products of the West.

Fewer than twenty years ago a representative of West Peterborough in the Ontario Legislature, speaking to the budget, pictured the potential resources of New Ontario, and advocated a policy of exploring the then unknown land. He was regarded as a visionary, and even when in 1900 the government of the day explored this country, and in part revealed its possibilities of resources, a prominent political leader declared its uselessness as "the land of the stunted poplar." Yet this same "land of the stunted poplar" has even in a few short years become the greatest money-maker in Ontario—it contains the greatest silver deposits of the world, and now hidden stores of gold are being brought to the light, and its "stunted poplars" feeds the printing presses of a continent. It is provided with railways which are the connecting link, of the mighty internal traffic between the great west and the great east of Canada. It holds a hardy, if yet scant, population of farmers, and from the heart of the "stunted poplar" belt, the citizens of Peterborough and Ontario, have on their tables luscious strawberries ripened in the month of September.

In these things we have more than a hint; we have proof of the immense potentialities of the resources of Ontario, and a justification for robust optimism, and even a ground for the assertion that there is not a square mile of the vast area of Canada, that cannot, and will not in time, be made to respond to development and yield its share of national wealth production. When we think on these things we shall gain a higher appreciation of the extent and importance of our national resources, the raw material of nation-building. And when, in addition, we think of the splendid political equipment we possess; of our already achieved place in the greatest empire in the life of humanity, we shall be seized of a new ambition on behalf of our country, of a deeper spirit of devotion to its welfare, and of a livelier sense of the duty of preserving this great heritage intact from the dangers that threaten it to-day.

Canada and its possibilities; Canada and its civil institutions; Canada the land of happy homes, of prosperous conditions, is worth fighting for. Its interests, its integrity, its homes and its people, are in peril now from German aggresson, which has for its ambition, our domination, involving the loss of all that makes our country worth living in, and our life worth living.

The question, squarely faces the young men of Peterborough and Canada, whose life is all future—is Canada and what it stands for in the way of human liberty and ideal conditions of human happiness, worth fighting for? If so their place is in the ranks to fight for those who cannot fight, but have done their share in making Canada as our home worth fighting for. We all stand by the colours, but the one colour our young men should not only stand for, but stand in, is the khaki of the Canadian volunteer for overseas' service.

TORCH BEARERS WILL TRIUMPH

Now and then, one hears some person possessed of more knavery than knowledge remark that the English are doing little to promote the cause of the allies in the great war in which nearly all of Europe is engaged. The losses of the English, running into hundreds of thousands, belie the statement. Day by day the English are slowly, but none the less certainly, doing their part to overcome the Germans on the battle-lines in Flanders and France. In the great drive of the Teutons on Paris last September, did not the mere handful of King George's soldiers intercept, and do even more than seemed possible for so few to do, to halt the apparently irresistible rush of the Germanic armies and drive them back beaten and broken over the road they had so lately victoriously traversed? Who, prithee, is bearing the brunt of the allies' campaign in the Dardanelles? Who has swept the high seas clean of German battleships and German commerce? Who, by and large, is furnishing the money to prosecute this war? These questions answer themselves.

"But what we started out to say is this: If there is any racial pride, most South Carolinans feel, or should feel, it is in the fact that in their veins runs the same blood that has made the English people the torch-bearers of civilization, the one race that never has been more than momentarily beaten; in our veins is the same blood that is being so freely spilled on the battlefields of Europe that the God-given right of man to participate in his own worldly destiny shall not forever perish from the face of the old world. The Germans conquer the English? Never!" — Fort Mill, South Carolina, Times.

CANADA SACRIFICES.

A Tribute.

Canada has not dealt in billions of dollars and millions of men, but Canada has nevertheless made commensurate war sacrifices in money, suffering and blood. All the world has stood ready with ambitious imaginations for any suggestion from the European chancelleries and applauded unstintedly when the complete successes of the billion-dollar loans have been announced, but Canada and its patriotic offerings, under the most peculiar circumstances, have had scant notice. Even her American neighbours seem to have forgotten that bigness of spirit is as moving as bigness of numbers.

The temper of the Canadian soldier has already been proved and approved in the theatre of war, but the same bravery of the home people in facing a rapidly rising public debt has had a much less spectacular setting. During June alone there was an increase of no less than $17,970,000, and the increase in that last twelve months has been $130,906,086, making the total net debt $450,287,721, or nearly $60 per head for a young government. These sacrifices made at a critical period of Canada's life for a war across the seas calling for stamp taxes and increased tariffs, in addition to exposing for slaughter the flower of the manhood of the country, are highly idealistic. France, England and even Belgium are fighting and making sacrifices — but no greater sacrifices in proportion — in the midst of a struggle that actually threatens their existence, but Canada is giving lavishly her best blood and money without any thought that physically, at least, she is in danger from the Teuton. Both life and money are more precious too, to a country just entering upon a period of national development.—Chicago "Tribune."

WHICH IS TO INSPIRE CANADA, PATRIOTISM OR PARTY POLITICS?

Sir Robert Borden knows to-day, even if he did not know a year ago, that the war situation is much too serious for any man except a traitor or a fool to play party politics in Canada during this war strain.

Sir Sam Hughes knows as surely as he knows anything that every ounce of Canadian energy, physical, mental, and moral, must be conserved and utilized if Canada is to face up worthily to the nation's responsibilities and the Empire's needs.

Sir George Foster knows, no one of them knows better, that alike on the battlefronts and in the councils of the nations the moral impact of Canada will be as important as its military prowess, and that an election campaign is neither a unifier of national sentiment nor a school of national morality.

It may be Hon. W. T. White also knows that Canada's most dangerous enemies at this moment are not the Kaiser and his Huns, but are the Ministers of the Crown who, for themselves and the private interests an election might serve(!) shout loyalty from the housetops but are conspiring now for the third time within a year to sell Canada's birthright for less than a mess of pottage.

And the people of Canada know—Conservative as well as Liberals know—that if a general election is called for this critical war year it will be because the Prime Minister and his more responsible colleagues have been mastered, and stay mastered, by Rogers and Cochrane and Reid and Crothers. These are the men who partly by their incapacity and partly by their chicanery, have already earned defeat for the Borden Government, and are now doing their best or their worst to merit disgrace for the Conservative party and humiliation for Canada.

There is no use mincing words. All this babbling of the Rogers newspapers about the responsibility of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberals is the noisy game of political tricksters, for which neither Sir Robert Borden nor his party will be held responsible unless they endorse it. The full and final responsibility for calling an election at any date within the next twelvemonth rests alone on the Prime Minister. If he does not want it, and is strong enough to say so, there neither can be nor will be an election. And as for a coalition, the men echoes in Toronto and elsewhere who echoes in cronto and elsewhere who organized and are carrying on this campaign of party suspicion and innuendo are not the men who would sacrifice their selfish chances in an election for the sake of the country's honour, or who would agree to any coalition which honourable and patriotic men could accept.

This much ought to be taken for granted, if the Government's election policy is dictated by the Rogers clique, and if its programme is fixed to suit the exploitation interests that are now dogging the Government, there is no place in such company either for Liberals or for Liberal opinion.

Neither Rogers nor any of his ilk ought ever to have been allowed in a Canadian Cabinet. Those of them that are utterly incapable are utterly corrupt. The Premier has them on his hands, and may not be able to rid himself of them. If so, Sir Wilfrid Laurier should, for the nation's sake in war time, agree to any reasonable proposal for extension of the term of Parliament, even though it carried the Government's burden of incompetent and compromised Ministers. But to ask the electors of Canada to endorse before the war is over the cut-throat antagonisms within the Cabinet, and to whitewash Hon. Robert Rogers or the High Commissionership in London, would be to insult the decencies of Canadian life.

The Globe affirms again that, in the face of the war's growingly stern realities, it cares next to nothing for the fortunes of mere party programmes and personalities in Canadian politics. But every truly patriotic Canadian, Conservative and Liberal alike, will absolutely refuse to condone any election scheme inspired by the disrupted Tammanyism that sank Manitoba neckdeep in the mire and filth of political criminality and rottenness. We are quite ready to acquiesce in any proposal agreed upon by Sir Robert and Sir Wilfrid, uncoerced by the Rogers junta, whom self-respecting Conservatives themselves distrust, but it would be treason to the ideals of life for which Canadian soldiers fight in Europe were trickery allowed to triumph over public morality and patriotism.

Sir Robert Borden might even yet redeem his lost chances were he to give his own best instincts free play. Were he to grip this persistent Rogers cabal with a strong hand he would find what Manitoba found—a painted lath. And as for the Rogers newspapers fed out of his hand—a subsidized Press in Canada has neither teeth nor claws. But so long as these pap-fed journals are allowed to speak as with Government authority, to traduce Conservative manufacturers who joined in the C. M. A. protest against an election, and week after week to vilify Liberal leaders to do all this for election purposes and the Prime Minister keep silence as to the probabilities of an election so long will recruiting and patriotic enterprises suffer and the national sentiment be divided by petty controversies.

Let Sir Robert Borden play the part not of an uncertain party leader, but of the real Prime Minister of Canada and let him take this whole war situation as seriously as he knows it to be, and the Liberals of Canada will join their Chief, by whom they have been pledged, in giving him devoted and loyal service until the war is over and the victory won.—The Globe.

A Primate Condemns Political Corruption in High Places of Canada

His Grace Archbishop Matheson Primate of All Canada, delivered a remarkable opening address before the seventh session of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada yesterday afternoon in Trinity College. In ringing tones and straightforward terms the Primate expounded the Law and Prophets to the leaders and people of Canada. "Nothing as usual" was his dictum, and, true to his dictum, he made an unsual and scathing attack upon political corruption in high places. On this subject the Primate said:

"That the politics of our country have been growing more and more impure as years go on is a sad and self-evident fact. It seems almost as if no political party can remain long in power before corruption creeps into it and spreads like a dread disease until it gnaws upon its vitals and kills it. Revelations of wrongdoing came to the surface here and there like hideous local eruptions, and it is not encouraging to be told that these are only slight compared to what is covered up and remains seething underneath. The situation, I repeat, is most menacing to the future wellbeing of our country. There must be a cleansing of the springs of our political life or else our whole character and ideals as a Canadian nation will be grevly imperilled. The cleansing is in the hands of the electors, who must see to it that only clean men are placed in public positions, and not only that, but that only clean men will be kept there.

Political Parsons.

"It may be asked what has the Church to do with this? Much every way, is the reply. The question is, how is this to be best done? If a clergyman takes these matters into the pulpit he is accused of being a partisan, and the chances are in many cases that he is. Then we have that most undesirable production, the political parson. What I venture to recommend is that the Church after prayerfully forming its judgment on public questions and holding up proper ideals of character and conduct should not embalm these in journals of Synods, which are seen by but few, but should have them each printed separately in such a form as to be capable of distribution among our people at the proper time. I feel that the Church must do something as combining with other agencies towards stemming the tide of political impurity which is, and has been, flooding and defacing our fair land.

PEOPLE'S KING GEORGE

At home King George and his Queen have opened nothing less than an era completely new in the mutual relations of people and Crown. King Edward, as a great European gentleman, was concerned to hold himself in close and constant touch with the leading interests and incidents in continental society and politics. Unaffectedly pious in the ordering of his daily life, King George personifies the strenuous industry, the love of work for duty's sake, the self-sacrifice and self-denial of which, in things other than details of diet, he sets a daily example. The old Anglo-Saxons were remarkable for a patriotism quickened and deepened by a lively faith. Of such ancestors the King is a true lineal descendant. With him, therefore, as in the case of his grandmother, Queen Victoria, Court ceremonies have taken upon them something in the nature of religious rites. Royal interest in the dwellings of the poor and the nursing of the sick was brought into courtly vogue during the last reign. George V. is the first King to have personally visited the mechanics, artisans, and the factory men of his realm in the places of their daily toil and to have examined the sanitary, social, and religious conditions under which they work as systematically as if he had been trained for a factory inspector.—T. H. S. Escott, in the British Review.

MUZZLED GERMAN PRESS

No Wonder There Are Few Criticisms of War-plotting Lords

Long before the war began, the militarist ruling class in Germany had dealt out smashing blows to the freedom of the press. Radical and independent newspaper editors have spent many years in German prison for daring to express so-called seditious and treasonable opinions. Even for daring to speak of the Kaiser as if he were an ordinary human being—let alone a royal autocrat—a newspaper would be liable to come under the mailed fist of militarism. A German editor once, commenting on one of the Kaiser's hunting expeditions, said the so-called wild boars were more like old hogs, and the party had taken all day to hunt one old hog to death. For such awful lese-majeste the offending editor served a long term of imprisonment. Even for exposing and proving moral perversion among some of the Kaiser's court and intimates, one fearless German editor had to suffer durance in a vile cell.

The total terms of imprisonment of all the editors nd writers condemned under the German censorship, since the present Kaiser came to power, would amount possibly to several hundred years. It is therefore to be understood, since the war began, very seldom has any opinion or sentiment contrary to the policy of militarism been allowed to appear in print. No matter how strong the antagonism among the common people to the continued domination of the swashbucklers and bureaucrats in Germany, the censor will see to it that such sedition or treason does not find vent in the public press. Occasionally, however, there is a lapse in the watchfulness of the censor's office. The Neues Vaterland, a paper said to be favored by the German crown prince, and edited by a well known writer, von Tepper Laski, made the following trenchant remark: "If you were to ask confidentially any man who is not a contractor for the war office, or does not sit in a "patriotic" newspaper office, or has not become one of its dupes, whether he would not prefer that the war had never occurred you would have to take those who replied in the negative to a lunatic asylum. The biggest war shouters are to be found at home, and especially among the editors of certain papers, who have been found to be permanently unfit for military service."

These daring statements indicate that once the German people get the military bureaucrats under, as they must someday, it is just possible they will jump on them hard.

OUR DEMOCRATIC ARMY

Where Clergy and Financiers Eagerly Serve in Ranks

The different walks of life represented by the Canadian soldiers is an evidence that at last the war is gripping all sorts of men, and that Canada is awake to her responsibility in this great world-struggle. In the ranks clergymen are found drilling side by side with farm boys, high school principals with fishermen, and managers of large financial concerns with miners. In two battalions alone there are three Methodist ministers and one Presbyterian, all serving in the ranks. An interesting incident in this connection is that of a private who was manager of a large financial concern in the east, and whose two assistants in the business were at the time lieutenants of his company.

GALLANT DESERTER

Incorrigible Frenchman a Devil to Fight But Deserted Often

Two years' hard labor is not a severe sentence for desertion in war time, but in the case of the French soldier Lepetitcorps the circumstances are unusual. Four times he had deserted and he was noted as "a deplorable soldier." But then each time he ran away it was from barracks. Under fire he was a perfect devil. Wounded at Morhange, he refused to go to the ambulance; again he was wounded, first in the head; then in the leg; at Argonne he had both feet frost bitten. He volunteered for every desperate deed and was mentioned in orders for distinguished conduct. But as soon as he was "caged" he became impossible. His judges have ordered him to the front, allowing him to do his sentence after the war.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS BRAVEST OF THE BRAVE

His Men All Worship Him and He Looks After Them Like a Father

"He is a huge man, certainly 6 feet 4 inches in height, and he impresses one greatly by his absolute lack of affectation and his simplicity. His expression is that of a serious sober man giving his entire thought and effort to his task." It was thus that one of his guests recently described the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolaievitch, who was given supreme command of the Russian armies in the field upon the outbreak of the war. The Grand Duke was born on November 6th, 1856, and is second cousin to the present Emperor.

The Grand Duke's physical strength and endurance are marvelous. He allows but little heed to be paid to his royal rank while he is in the field, and it is no exaggeration to say that he lives almost as simply as his rank and file. He sleeps in his motor car, or in a small bell-tent, even though the temperature has hovered around 40 degrees below zero. For food he invariably eats the thick soup and rye bread that is served out to his soldiers; he takes no alcoholics, drinking only tea or water. Since the war, Nicholas has absolutely put to one side his princely rank; he is—as he has always been—a soldier before all else. His men address him as Little Father, he speaks to them as "my children" or "brother."

Army Contractors Warned

With his habitual thoroughness, and his care for the slightest details ever in mind, the Grand Duke, during one of his frequent visits to some of his soldiers' quarters, tasted their soup. He remarked that there was not enough meat in it, and that there was also a deficiency of oatmeal. That same evening he issued an order to the effect that all army contractors were to attend his headquarters at a certain time a few days later. At the specified hour Nicholas interviewed them. He spoke to them sternly for a few moments on the necessity of the supplies for the troops being up to standard, and concluded by saying: "Gentlemen, he who steals I hang!"

It is this care for their well-being, no less than the strange simplicity of one with so strikingly powerful a personality, that has won for the Generalissimo the admiration of every individual soldier in his armies. Also, they have in their leader a splendid example of fearless bravery under the severest conditions. Often, to the dismay of his staff officers, the Grand Duke will go among the men in the trenches under fierce rifle and shell fire, talking with them and encouraging them without giving a thought to the great risks he himself runs.

Reckless and Able

During the most terrific engagement he has many times driven in his car backwards and forwards just behind the first line trenches, and under heavy shell fire. One day, in the midst of an engagement, he stopped his car in the shell-swept road and addressed his soldiers. On that occasion one shell burst within a few yards of the royal car, killing three men and wounding several others.

Guncotton as Bait

A part of the equipment of some cavalrymen is a fishing rod and several varieties of floats. But there are others who prefer to fish for the pot in more sudden and ruthless manner. Their method is very different. They operate in those parts of the canals where roach and dace are thought to be numerous. The final attack, as in all modern aggressive operations, is opened by the expenditure of explosives. A small wad of guncotton neatly exploded under water is enough to account for all the fish within a considerable radius; and a few moments after the discharge the undersides of the roach and dace appear on the surface. The idea was suggested by the accidental havoc wrought among the fish by a certain Jack Johnson.

Stocky French-Canadians

A curious evidence of type came out during the rush to get uniforms for the French-Canadian Battalions. Recruiting was unexpectedly rapid, but worse still, it was found difficult to fit the men, as most of the uniforms were too long, and not big enough around the chest. This was due to the fact that the average French-Canadian is several inches shorter than the average English Canadian, but proportionately much more heavily built. Thus plenty of recruits who stood only 5 foot 2, had chests good enough for a man of 5 foot 10, and so on. The result was that the supply of uniforms, which was built according to the English average, was picked over and over again, but hundreds of recruits had to go away in mufti, while regimental tailors worked overtime to adjust the clothes to their figures.

KAISER'S "ELOQUENCE"

Some Strange Activities of Germany's Strange "Highest One"

A German prisoner is quoted by the Petrograd correspondent of The Central News as saying that the Kaiser "only goes to those places where it is safe. Our troops do not retreat from the positions where the Emperor is; we should, therefore, like our Emperor to be everywhere at once. Then we should conquer. I saw him go right round our lines. He said that if he had a thousand sons he would send them all to death for the honor of Germany. He spoke a great deal, and at last we were tired of listening to him. Our Kaiser is very severe. He noticed all those who did not listen to him attentively, or who fidgeted while he was speaking. During the night he rose and visited the new fortifications."

The Kaiser always writes his name in the books containing the names of eminent visitors which are kept in the churches, and in a church at Przemysl, beneath an artistic representation of the Virgin Mary and the Infant Christ, he ordered this golden inscription to be made in Polish: "The German Emperor has prayed here to the Mother of God for the happiness of the Polish people in his Empire." And this although he is the head of the Lutheran Church!

Tennis Champion's Spirit

How Capt. Anthony Wilding, the lawn tennis champion, met his death is told in The London Mail, which publishes his last letter. While waiting with the Duke of Westminster's Air Squadron at Dunkirk, he attached himself to the Indian Corps, but before going to the front he had a trailer built to carry a three-pounder gun. The following is his letter: "My dear ——. For really the first time I have a job on hand which is likely to end in gun, I and the whole outfit being blown to ——. However, it is a sporting chance, and if we succeed we will help our infantry no end." Very soon after writing he was "put out of action."

METHODIST CHURCH PLANS TO INCREASE MISSIONARY WORK

Last Year's Splendid Response to be Again Sought This Year, With Slight Increase – Great Work to Be Done Now in Canada and in Foreign Fields.

ANNUAL DISTRICT MEETING

The axiom that man's extremity is God's opportunity has been amply sustained by numerous exemplifications in the religious world during the past year. Not the least of these has been the generous missionary support from the Methodist church in Canada during this period of stress and trial. Facts in support of this statement were brought out at the annual Financial District meeting of the Peterborough district of the Bay of Quinte conference in its session at the George street Methodist church on Wednesday. At the annual meeting of the General Mission Board of the Methodist church held in Toronto last October, it was first believed that $590,000.00 could be counted upon for this year's work. This represented a decrease of ten per cent. from the income, $656,000.00, for the year that was then drawing to a close. However, in view of the effect which it was felt this curtailment would have upon the work in the various missionary fields, it was recommended by a special committee of the General Board to attempt to duplicate the revenue of the previous year. The response to the ensuing appeal returned an income only $4,000.00 less than the objective sum of $656,000.00. And all this, in the face of financial conditions which are fully appreciated.

For the coming year it is planned to raise $675,000.00. To this end Financial District meetings are being held from coast to coast. In Peterborough special services to emphasize the missionary conditions and requirements will be held on Sunday, the 24th and 31st of October and on the 7th of November. On the first Sunday there will be an interchange of pulpits; on the second the pastors will preach special sermons in their respective churches. Visiting ministers will be the feature of the November Sunday and this campaign will be followed by an every member canvass.

Such was the general plan outlined at yesterday's meeting and there is an evident feeling of enthusiasm that the desired results will be achieved.

At last night's meeting in the George street Sunday school, Rev. Benj. Greatrix, who presided, expressed as his opinion that but a tithe of the money now being expended in warfare been used for the inculcating of the principles of Jesus Christ this war would never have been. The world was giving about twenty-five million dollars for missionary work and only fifteen thousand missionaries were engaged in the spreading the gospel. At the present time between thirty-five and fifty million dollars is being spent daily in war that is devastating Europe and slaughtering thousands of men. "We had told God," Rev. Mr. Greatrix said, "that we could not give more men nor money for His work."

Responsibility of Members.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Manning of the General Mission Board, Toronto, spoke at both meetings yesterday. He referred to the individual responsibility to support missions. Every member of the church is, by virtue of that membership a member of the missionary society. The missionaries are the employees of the congregations. In Manitoba where he had recently attended Financial District meetings the districts decided to advance their offerings by increases ranging from twenty-nine to fifty-one per cent. The October and November services will be held simultaneously throughout the Dominion and in the every-member canvass it is hoped that the privilege of giving for the prosecution of God's work will be extended to every member of the congregation, to the working man and woman as well as to the more favourably circumstanced. It is hoped to be able to undertake the extension of work among the foreigners of Canada to proceed with the new buildings which had been proposed for last year. In Alberta there are fourteen districts where there are no Protestant churches. The people there are growing up without the Gospel.

All the Church Work.

At yesterday's meeting not only was missionary work discussed, but also the educational, moral and reform and the various other activities in which the Methodist church is engaged.

Dr. Manning observed that people were contributing to patriotic funds but after all most Canadians have been lightly touched by the war. The farmers stand to profit by it, crops have been most bountiful but quite a number of Canadians have given of their nearest and dearest. There are fewer selfish persons in Canada today than ever before. It is said of Europe that there are no selfish men in those countries today. Dr. Manning mentioned the sacrifices not only of the people engaged in war, but of the neutrals, particularly the Dutch.

Church Prospers in Stress.

Stimulation of missionary enthusiasm and effort during the present war will simply be a repetition of previous experience. History shows that the Church prospers better in times of strain and stress than in prosperity. Dr. Manning mentioned the various missionary movements which were instituted in the period from 1792 to 1803, the trying years of the Napoleonic peril. During the Civil War in the United States the Presbyterian Church greatly increased the amount of its missionary givings in money and men, and a wonderful religious sentiment was enkindled. And now, Dr. Manning urged, the Canadian people must stand by its missionary work, which, when it has borne its fruit, will end all war.

Yesterday's Attendance.

At the afternoon district meeting the following clergymen were present: Reverends R. G. Peever, J. G. Lewis, J. P. Wilson, R. V. Whattam, B. Greatrix, Wm. Higgs, J. R. Butler, W. T. Wickett, Chas. W. Barrett, J. G. McKee, M. L. Hinton, W. S. Smart, R. Benson, and the following laymen: Messrs. H. C. Stabler, J. J. Hartley, C. F. Thompson, Wm. Might, J. M. Greene, T. J. Carr, Chas. Kitchey, Geo. Grain Crop This Year Shows The Greatest Acreage, the Biggest Average and Total on Record

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—In acreage, in average yield per acre, and in total yield this year's grain crop is the highest on record in Canada. That is the official Government estimate of the bountiful harvest reaped in the Dominion this year. A bulletin issued to-day by the Census and Statistics Office says:

"The preliminary estimate of this year's wheat crop in Canada is a total of 308,859,800 bushels from 12,896,-400 acres, representing an average yield per acre of 23.78 bushels. This total is 147,559,800 bushels, or 91 per cent. in excess of last year's inferior yield of 161,300,000 bushels, 77,122,800 bushels, or 33 per cent., in excess of the previous highest yield of 231,737,-000 bushels in 1913, and in 142,814,000 bushels, or 58 per cent., in excess of the annual average yield of 166,026,-000 bushels for the five years 1910 to 1914. In acreage, average yield per acre, and in total yield the present estimate is the highest on record for Canada.

Particulars of Several Crops.

"Of oats the total yield for 1915 is estimated at 488 million bushels from 11,365,000 acres, an average yield per acre of 42.94 bushels, the figures of the yield also constituting records never previously attained for the Canadian oat crop. Barley is placed at 51,655,-000 bushels from 1,509,350 acres, an average per acre of 34.22 bushels. Rye yields 2,385,700 bushels from 112,-300 acres or 21.24 bushels per acre, and flax seed 12,199,000 bushels from 1,000,000 acres or 12.08 bushels per acre.

"The estimated total production of wheat in the three northwest Provinces (Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta) is 275,772,300 bushels, as compared with 140,955,000 bushels last year. In Manitoba the total is 77,514,200 bushels, against 73,494,000 bushels, and in Alberta 43,025,000 bushels against 28,880,000 bushels. Oats yield 301,051,000 bushels in the three Provinces, as compared with 150,843,000 bushels last year. Barley, 33,303,000 bushels, against 10,525,000 bushels, rye, 657,000 bushels, against 514,800, and flax seed 12,118,000 bushels against 7,083,000 bushels."

It should be noted that the foregoing preliminary estimates of yield are compiled from the reports of correspondents, whose judgment, based largely upon the luxuriant appearance of the crops in the field, may possibly not be sustained by the final actual returns from the threshing machine. Revised estimates of yield will be published in October, and final estimates after the completion of threshing at the end of the year.

Britain Will Insure Transports.

Ottawa, Sept. 15. Sir Robert Borden, in formally opening the Central Canada Exhibition here to-day, referred to the agricultural situation, and said that he had been assured while in Britain that everything possible would be done to insure the safe transportation of the products of Canada.

Alice Brady In "As Ye Sow"

At the Empire Theatre Balance of This Week—Realistic Marine Disaster and Thrilling Rescue

The proprietor of the Empire Theatre has secured at considerable extra outlay, the films for the emotional drama, entitled "As Ye Sow," which will be shown for the balance of this week at the Charlotte Street moving-picture playhouse, in which Alice Brady appears as the star. This play was written about ten years ago by the Reverend John Snyder and produced with conspicuous success by Brady and Grismer. The fact that a clergyman had written a successful play attracted considerable attention at the time the thing was certainly uncommon, if not unique.

William A. Brady dramatized the play. He lived among the people and the scenes that formed the background of the story of his morality play, "As Ye Sow." Since he was a spontaneous author, he worked on one theme. That theme was the struggle between good and evil perpetually going on among the people of the little country town to whom it was his duty to minister. Many a time he must have known of young men who left the restricted environment of their native place, went to New York or some other large city, were tempted, fell, recovered, fell again, and either finally conquered, or were beaten by, their evil propensities. This sort of thing is going on all the time. People are sowing, and are reaping as they sow.

Could a minister select a more powerful text for his stage-play sermon? Mr. Snyder's judgment was endorsed by the colossal success which Messrs. Brady and Grismer made of their play. Some Biblical themes are timeless. The Prodigal Son is one, the repentant Magdalene is another, the good Samaritan is yet another.

But in "As Ye Sow" we have something less sentimental than these—we have the terrible fate of the unrepentant profligate giving us an impressive warning. Dora Leland, played by Alice Brady, is a girl of good family, persuaded into an unsuitable marriage by a country scapegrace, having a chance of success by stratagem and means in New York but casting that chance aside. Profligacy converts him into a bad husband and father, and he goes away to sea. Years afterwards he is wrecked, and is rescued by his brother, now a clergyman, and about to marry a widowed girl of whose exact antecedents he is ignorant. The girl is Dora. But the rescue and return of her husband disarranges these plans. The rescued husband resumes his authority over wife and child. But he is unrepentant. Profligacy again claims him, and he goes to quarter with a fellow sot.

The denouement of the drama has been left for the return of Margaret Cameron in "The Girl of Yesterday," to be given to the public the two places of admission.

THE RAKE.

A tall haggard, worried looking man was about to take an examination for life insurance. "You don't dissipate, do you?" asked the physician as he made ready for the tests. "Not a fact," was the reply of that sort. The little man hesitated a moment, looked a bit frightened, and then replied in a small voice, "I sometimes chew a little gum."

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 510 College street, will be answered on Wednesdays questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Perplexed, Peterborough—Is there anything that will prevent white paint from turning yellow? I had my parlour painted white only a few months ago, and it is now showing signs of turning. I think it is a shame, as I paid the highest price in order to get good work and material.

Ans.—There are many kinds of white paint. There are also many causes of discolouration, such as coal gas, sulphur fumes, tobacco fumes, excess of oil, interior vehicle, or perhaps pure vehicle and inferior pigment. It is and always has been, one of the paint problems that the manufacturers and painters have been trying to solve. But thanks to scientific investigation, actual tests and constant observation on the part of interested men, we to-day can make a white paint that will not turn yellow for a long time at least. I could hardly set forth here a formula to make white paint that will stay white, unless I knew the conditions under which it was to be used. White paint suitable for exterior would be unfit for interior and vice versa. Painters use white lead in place of zinc white very often when the latter should be used, and vice versa. The immediate order of exact proportions of ingredients and atmospheric conditions, are all important factors which an up-to-date artisan must be familiar with or become a back number. If you paid for good work and did not get it, then your painter is either ignorant or dishonest. Let me know the exact conditions and enclose a stamped addressed envelope and I will give you a formula to make white paint that will stay white.

C.B., Port Hope, Ont.—Would you kindly tell me through your paper what kind of wall paper you would prefer to put on a square room 12ft. by 12ft. and 9ft. high, with one door and two windows, but is slightly shaded on one side by a verandah which makes it rather dark.

Ans.—What I would prefer might be repugnant to your sense of taste. However, I would suggest for a low, square room (as I room I presume) a white ceiling of little or no pattern, the plainer the better. For the walls use an independent wall paper (by that I mean without border, frieze, cut-out or other embellishment) with a satin finish or silver stripe. If the environs will permit, use a silver and green stripe, as they are soft, harmonious and good reflectors of light, withal dainty and artistic. At the top next the ceiling use a small white enamel picture moulding, of course, your furniture should be as low set as possible. This is important to enhance the height of your room. Above all keep everything white or light as possible.

Housewife, Charlotte street, Peterborough, Ont.—Can you tell me what substance or preparation I can use to stick labels on maple leaves to dry so that they will stay stuck?

Ans.—An adhesive substance for paper labels would be unfit for maple leaves. For sticking on such stock paper labels to dry use a corn starch, the roughly cooked, to which has been added some moist sugar, about one dessert spoonful to a pint of thick paste. As for the maple leaves I would suggest this method. First lay on the glass a thin coat of copal or rosbing varnish, allowing it to stand until it becomes tacky but will not stick to the fingers. Then gently and evenly press the leaf on to the varnish. Let stand for a day or two, then coat over the leaf with some very pale varnish, such as damar, crystal or copal. Varnish coat may be necessary at the start very pale, or the leaf may be discoloured by the varnish. Varnish acts as a preservative.

Enquirer, P.H.—We will be pleased to give instructions on Arts and Crafts [illegible] what will suit [illegible] make effective writing desk.

Ans.—Most substances of a resinous nature or water stains can be removed by simply soaking the spots with cold water until soft. Then wash off with clean water and a soft rag or sponge. Should a white spot remain, wipe the ink spot with a little warm concentrated oil of vitriol. Then wash off the spot.

Mrs. M.D. Cry.—I have enough floor gray paint to do a room, but I don't like the colour. What can I do to make it rather a nice shade.

KEPT BEST GARDEN IN TORONTO AT AGE OF 105

Mr. Joseph Mantell, Formerly of Peterboro', is Winner of Silver Cup—Remains Vigorous and Interested in Current Events.

Mr. Joseph Mantell of Toronto, on Friday receives a silver cup, the prize for the best kept garden in the city of Toronto. He is one hundred and five years of age and is still active. Last week he was the guest of his granddaughter and presented her with a beautiful bouquet of asters from his garden. Mr. Mantell resided in Peterborough several years ago with his daughter, Mrs. Edwards, on Charlotte street, and his friends here will be interested and pleased to learn of his enduring vigour and his horticultural success. Mr. Mantell has lived through a strangely changing epoch. As a boy, he and his companions used to play at war even as the boys of today are doing. At that time the arch-enemy was Napoleon and the young Mantell and his chums used to charge fields of burdocks, which in the imagination of the youths were regiments of French fusileers. The intervening century has closed with the ancient breach in Anglo-French relations, and it is hoped, forever.

MR. JOS. MANTELL
Who at the age of 105 has won the Silver Cup for the Best Flower Garden in Toronto.

THE WEATHER

The heavy downpour of rain during the electrical storm yesterday afternoon totalled almost an inch and one-third (1.31) on the level. It was one of the heaviest of the present season.

UNUSUAL INTEREST AND COINCIDENCE

Peterborough's Close Relation to, and Interest in, Departing Missionaries

A service of unusual interest to Peterborough people is reported by the Toronto papers. On Tuesday evening of this week a large and representative gathering took place at Walmar Road Baptist Church, when Mr. Alexander Haddow, B.A., of Peterborough, who leaves in two weeks for South America, was ordained to the Gospel Ministry. Combined with the ordination a farewell service was held. Four missionaries-elect were on the platform. Dr. Wolverton, B.A., who with his bride, left an hour later for India, and Rev. Mr. Haddow and Mrs. Haddow, who, as stated above, leave shortly for South America.

Mr. Haddow is well and most favourably known here. His bride was Miss Maude Smith of this city. Dr. Wolverton is a nephew of Mr. T. F. Matthews, while his bride was Miss Lulu Ellis, formerly of Peterborough.

The ordination was presided over by Rev. John McNeil, Pastor of Walmar Road Church; the charge to the candidate was given by Rev. H. Stillwell, late of India, while Mr. Haddow was received into the ranks of the Ministry by Rev. J. R. Webb of Peterborough.

Dr. S. S. Bates delivered a farewell address to the out-going missionaries, after which Dr. Wolverton and Rev. Alex. Haddow spoke in appreciative terms of their friends in this land, and of their great desire to be used for the extension of Christ's kingdom on the other continents.

3 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Omemee, Ont. writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

REINFORCEMENTS FOR THE PRINCESS PATS

The Universities of Canada have now for some time been working loyally together to reinforce that gallant regiment, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. Three Companies have already gone overseas, numbering nearly 900 men, and a fourth Company is now under formation at Montreal.

The University Companies are now known throughout the length and breadth of Canada, so that there is a continuous flow of men of the right type to Montreal. Not only do such men find entry to a famous regiment, but they are rapidly equipped and trained and sent without delay overseas to England, where they are comfortably billeted in huts at an excellent camp near the sea on the South Coast of England. Moreover the men secure the great advantage of good comradeship with officers of similar tastes and antecedents.

The first Company, under command of Captain Gregor Barclay, has been declared by regular officers of experience to be second to none compared with any Company of any army in the world.

The second Company was raised exceptionally in seven weeks by Captain G. McDonald and Captain Percy Moore Bell; companies are now in France.

The third Company sailed eight over strength because the newspaper readers of Canada were good enough to make known through them of orders that the Company was being formed. This resulted in such a rush of recruits that it was necessary to apply to the Militia Council of Ottawa for a special authority to increase the strength from 250 to 330 men. Each man, before embarkation, writes to a friend who is a likely recruit, and tells him of the advantages of the Universities Company, so that even before the men have disembarked a fresh Company is assembling on the McGill Campus at Montreal.

Recruits are examined locally by an Army Medical Officer and are attested by a Magistrate in the nearest city, after which an application is made for transportation, which is speedily furnished from Montreal.

This system is effective and rapid, and free from red tape. There are in nearly every city representatives of the various universities who are always ready to help forward the good work, and to give information to men anxious to enlist.

The regulations respecting enlistment, pay and separation allowances are precisely the same as those for other Canadian troops.

At Montreal, the University heads mobilize for barracks at the Canadian Royal Grand Allocations are to the McGill Officers Training Corps, and at Montreal the men are billeted in the Armouries of the 5th Royal Highlanders of Montreal.

There is competent instruction in active musketry, bayonet fighting, outpost and trench making. The Officers Training Corps is also being utilized for signalling, now of extreme importance in the war.

All information can be obtained from Capt. A. S. Eve, 382 Sherbrooke Street West, the headquarters of the successive companies.

The newspapers have proved themselves to be the most efficient means of raising recruits, and every reader who cannot himself go to the front can help in the present struggle by calling the attention of his friends to his opportunity.

Canadian Officer Describes a Battle in Gallipoli Peninsula

TORONTO, Sept. 16—Lieut. E. L. Coutts, the practising physician and Coroner of Agincourt, who enlisted in London, Eng., last July with the Royal Army Medical Corps, and is now with the Mediterranean expeditionary force, has written home giving details of a battle on the Gallipoli Peninsula. Part of the letter was written aboard ship and the rest at Base Hospital 15, Island of Lemnos.

"Last Sunday we sailed into the presence of the Gallipoli Peninsula with the booming of the guns and flashes of light. Our view commanded part of the scene of operations. We could see at times the vivid flash of the explosives even in the face of that bright sunshine. Toward evening the roar of the guns grew louder, and the whole scene was veiled with smoke arising largely from the battle fleet. It was a wonderfully impressive and spectacular scene, the most exciting that it has ever been my lot to view. Then came the aftermath. We were fleeing into the heart of things—into the midst of swarms of wounded with the dying and the dead. All night long and all next day the poor fellows were handed on to our ship until they totalled 2,000. We worked all night and all next day, and surely work was never more needed.

Buoyant Battalions.

"A Captain who led one of the battalions—a mere boy—told me that it was remarkable the way his men flashed along light-hearted and buoyant, although their comrades were falling thick. They really were not afraid, he said. They had lost all sense of fear. It is an undoubted fact that this war will furnish scores of charges as immortal as that of the Light Brigade. All honour to them, it is the only meed they have.

"On the island where I am now planted there are two stationary hospitals, with about 2,000 patients. It is impossible to get any kind of equipment here just now, and hence I sleep on the ground with my wearing apparel for a bed. When I wish to sit down I resort to the mess marquee, for I have no chair in my tent. My tent consists of an aluminum soap dish, which I chanced to buy in London. I have been able to borrow a wash-basin—canvas—and so we get along.

"This one fact is true, that there is the one place in the world that I should be. Considerations that could detach and draw me away are inconceivable. It is the supreme duty of the time for men in my position."

WHAT HAPPENED.

A young man from Cowdenbeath went into a leading hotel for dinner. He could not understand a word of French, but determined not to show his ignorance before the waiter he pointed to an item on the menu and said, "I will have some of that, please." "I'm sorry, sir," he said gently, "but the band is playing that just at present."

To People Who Are Losing Weight

OFFERS SIMPLE MEANS OF WINNING BACK LOST FLESH AND STRENGTH.

Any unnatural loss of flesh and weight even though gradual, should be regarded with alarm. Unless the result of actual well defined illness it is almost certain indication of a defect in the assimilative functions that is permitting a large portion of the strength and flesh making elements of food to pass through the body as waste instead of going to the blood, where they belong.

To correct this unnatural condition and to quickly win back from ten to thirty pounds of healthy flesh try taking a single sargol tablet with every meal for a few weeks, and note results. Let the weight scales be the judge.

Sargol is a splendid combination of assimilative agents whose purpose is to extract every ounce of flesh and fat-making nourishment from the meal with which it is eaten and to prepare it in a form which the blood will eagerly absorb and distribute throughout the body. Remarkable gains in weight are reported from its use in this way. Indeed many leading druggists who sell it say they will guarantee to return the purchase price in any case where it does not produce increased weight when used as directed as stated in the printed guarantee found in each large package.

As Sargol is entirely harmless, is pleasant and easy to take and not at all expensive it would seem therefore that almost any person who is ten pounds or more under normal weight might give it a trial on such a liberal money back guarantee.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner

Dear Sir,—I wish to call the attention of the police to the gang of young boys/girls who congregate on the corner of Monaghan road and Charlotte street insulting ladies, and otherwise making themselves a nuisance.

Yours, etc.,

THE WORLD OF SPORT

CHAMPION OARSMAN OF AMERICA HAS ENLISTED

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—Another of Canada's athletic heroes has joined the colours. "Bob" Dibble, the best amateur oarsman on this continent, winner of the Canadian and American single scull championship the last two years, enlisted yesterday for active overseas' service. Dibble is by long odds the best sculler that Toronto, or for that matter, this country has produced since Ned Hanlan's time. He has had a wonderful career. At Henley four years ago he created a sensation by winning the junior, intermediate and senior championships in one day, beating in the latter event Everard Butler, the then champion, who had just returned from the English Henley. His victory was characterized as a fluke, as Butler rowed in a strange boat, but that he won on his merits he has demonstrated on several occasions since. All Dibble's friends wish him good luck and a safe return.

PHILLIES ARE A TEAM OF CAST-OFFS

If the Philadelphia club comes through with the pennant of the National League the victory will be gained by the oddest collection of cast-offs that ever got together. Most of the Phils have at one time or another been tossed in as "boot" in trades; others have been chased hither and thither, turned down repeatedly and classified as dead ones; some of the most reliable of Pat Moran's men have been shooed away when they wanted jobs and yet this herd of flotsam and jetsam, assembled under one banner can play great ball and win large flocks of games. Here's the way the Philadelphia players have been passed along the line during their careers:

Third Baseman Byrne: Traded by St Louis to Pittsburg; traded by Pittsburg to Philadelphia.

Fired by Joe Tinker.

Outfielder Becker: Has been with Boston, New York and Cincinnati; finally got the hook from Joe Tinker for misjudging a fly ball, yet able to put up nice ball for the leaders and to cuff the pellett effectively. Mr. Becker has made only ten home runs this season.

Outfielder Cravath: Hired and fired, years and years ago, by the Red Sox, White Sox and Washingtons; classified as a hippo for speed and uncertainty at the bat and in the field. Backbone of the Philadelphia club right now and the dread of all hostile pitchers.

Luderus Near Top.

First Baseman Luderus: Considered too green and awkward for the Cubs and chucked in as boot in a deal. Now ranging round the top of the National League batting list and playing a great field game.

Second Baseman Nicholl: Canned by Washington as unable to hit; traded off by the Reds as lacking spirit and agility. Playing class ball for Pat Moran, both on second and at the bat.

Outfielder Whited: Thrown in as boot in a trade between St. Louis and Boston; eagerly chucked away by Boston as part payment for Shetwood Magee; one of the most valuable cogs in the Moran machine today, and playing a spirited game in all departments.

Utility Man Dugey: Thrown in as boot in the Magee trade.

Third Baseman Stock: Chucked in as boot by the Giants in the deal for Lobert.

Pitcher Demaree: Passed over with gladness by New York in a trade; now showing better class than most of McGraw's pitchers.

Chalmers a Winner.

Pitcher Chalmers: Released by this same Philadelphia club as crippled by a lame arm; worked back into shape with the Giants; Giants let him out at the start of the season as excess baggage, and he returned to his old club, where he has pitched as good ball as he ever did.

Some records, these!

When Robby Left McGraw's Pitchers Started Skidding

Has it ever occurred to you that Wilbert Robinson was one of the main reasons for the pennant-winning accomplishment of the Giant machine in 1911, 1912 and 1913?

Here are a few points that you can absorb if you wish.

Somewhere along in 1909 Robby began to coach the Giant twirlers in his odd moments. In 1910 he went to the training camp with the New York outfit but did not do any regular coaching during the season. The Giants played fine ball in 1909, and 1910, but the pitchers did not go strong enough to win a pennant.

In 1911, however, Robinson became the regular coach of the Giant pitchers. He worked day after day with the youngsters. And in 1911 the Giants won a pennant. In 1912 with Robinson holding down the coaching job they won another, and in 1913 they won the third pennant in a row.

The reason for the victorious battling of the Giants was that the pitchers showed up in grand form. It was in 1911 that Marquard once as wild as a cannibal island chieftain, pitched throughout the season with an average of .774. In 1912 Marquard coached by Robinson, won 19 straight.

In 1913 Tesreau joined the Giants. He, too, was wild, but Robinson tamed him, and developed him into one of the greatest pitchers in the league. And Robinson kept Marquard in line for a pitching average around .700.

Al Demaree joined the Giants in 1913 was turned over to Robinson for training, and quickly burst forth as the pitching sensation of the National League, finishing the season with an average of .780.

Robinson quit the Giants in the fall of 1913 and became the manager of the Dodgers when the 1914 season opened. What happened?

The Giant pitching staff in 1914 without Robinson's coaching, went to pieces in mid-season. Marquard, who had pitched for a total average of .774 during the three year that Robinson coached him, cracked in 22 consecutive games, and finished the 1914 season with an average of .333, winning only 12 games out of 34. Demaree won 10 out of 37 games in which he worked, and finally was traded to the Phillies.

The 1915 season finds the Robinsonless Giants pitchers still bewildered and worse than ever. Tesreau is erratic, Marquard is pitching weird brands of ball and none of the Giant youngsters, although they show a lot of natural stuff, have been able to deliver. The Giant's pitching staff problem has been the prime cause of the downfall of the one-time peerless outfit.

And now, on the other mitt:

Robinson took charge of the Dodgers when it had a pitching staff that ranked as one of the punkest in any league. That was in the springtime of 1914. And right now the Dodger pitching staff ranks as one of the best in any league. What's the answer?

"Hassen" Pfeffer was wild and erratic when Robinson took him in tow. He had speed and curves but he didn't know what to do with them. It took Robinson about two months to teach him and then Pfeffer became the pitching wonder of the other circuit.

Appleton was another natural, but erratic pitcher. Robinson, through some uncanny power that is his, developed him into a real pitcher. "Wheezer" Dell joined the Dodgers this year. He wasn't highly touted. He looked like an ordinary pitching bloke. Today he is a world-beater.

HOW LEPROSY THREATENS GERMANY

The possibility that leprosy may spread over their land is the newest danger to threaten the German people as a result of the present war. Leading German scientists are giving serious consideration to the problem of devising ways and means of preventing the disease coming from the east country from Russia by returning troops and prisoners.

The dread disease is endemic, that is, more or less constantly present in the Baltic provinces of Russia where the German armies are now operating. It has existed there since the Middle Ages and although at one time it had nearly died out, it broke out again during the last century. In 1908 it was estimated that there were more than one thousand lepers in one of these Baltic provinces.

Extraordinary precautions have always been taken by the German authorities to prevent the disease being brought across the line which separates Russia and Germany. Travellers and immigrants are subjected to careful medical examination at the frontier and any person showing the slightest indications of leprosy is at once interned.

These precautions are all well enough in time of peace, but they avail little now when more than 300,000 German troops are occupying Russian territory where leprosy is endemic and where there is no system of segregation of those afflicted with the disease.

Leaders [illegible] army surgeons are [illegible] of these expressed concern [illegible] will be a grave matter for after the war these sufferers will be scattered all over Germany.

In their efforts to save soldiers from this danger the army medical officers are constantly examining the troops to keep away from leaves and from houses which they are known to have visited. Tents are also being urged to fight the vermin which are believed to spread the disease by sprinkling their clothes with naphthalin or white cress.

COBB CONFIDENT EVEN IN A SLUMP

Ty Cobb went to bat 19 times without getting a hit, thereby breaking a world's record — for Cobb. His slump brought his batting average down to .375. News-paper writers began to speculate. One said Cobb was worried into a blue funk because his arm had gone back on him and that his distress had ruined his hitting. Another said that Tyrus was bothered over that Federal league offer of $40000 to sign an outlaw contract and couldn't keep his mind on the game.

Grantland Rice happened to be in Detroit — he was reporting the golf tournament — and he asked Cobb all about it. Rice thus tells about it and his story gives an insight into the character of the Georgia Peach.

When subjected to the ordeal of an interview Tyrus the First had been at bat 16 times without striking one safe blow — and most of it was against weak pitching.

"How does it feel," we asked Mr Cobb, "to go 16 times to bat without making a base hit?"

"How do you account for the fact," we continued, "that a man can average two hits to the game for over 95 games can amass an average of .40 and then go 16 times to bat without planting one safe?"

"I haven't tried to account for it," said Ty. "But I'm going out there tomorrow and knock the cover off the ball or break my dogzoned back."

And there, gentle or low-brow reader, you have Ty Cobb. The ordinary athlete who had travelled 16 times to the plate without striking as much as one safe blow would be depressed if not a trifle melancholy, or perhaps moody. But Ty wasn't. He didn't know what the answer was because he wasn't thinking of the hits he missed yesterday. He was thinking of the hits he was going to get to-morrow.

"I used to worry about my batting," said Ty. "But I'm not now. I forget the day I don't hit and look forward to days I'll get 'em."

We put it to you as a fairly simple proposition — is there any philosophy in this brief, uncertain, fluttering existence called Life that could be finer? Is there any philosophy that can beat this of Cobb's? Forget the mistakes of yesterday in thinking of the glory of to-morrow.

That is Ty Cobb's system. He doesn't permit any slump, however extend, to destroy his confidence. He doesn't permit any slip to shatter his nerve. He looks forward to to-morrow, not back to yesterday, and, after all, there is only one way to look, and that way isn't toward the rear.

GOLF

Players will have until Saturday, Sept. 25th to play off the first round. The following is the amended draw: A. H. Stratton vs A. Mowat, W. H. Denham vs W. B. Sloan, H. Deane vs. F. M. Dela Fosse, W. H. Bradburn v. C. H. Pennefather, R. M. Hamilton v. P. Campbell; E. G. Patterson vs. D. D. Brown; J. P. Bond vs. B. B. Gilles pie, S. Ray vs. R. B. Hamilton.

BRITISH INFANTRY BEST

Germans Prisoners Praise England's First Line of Sharpshooters

A superior Russian officer, a prince well known in Paris society, had the duty of questioning German prisoners. He found that, in their opinion, the French were superior in artillery, the Russians in cavalry, and the British in infantry. "Which is the best in fantry?" the Russian asked. "It is that which, in proportion to its number, 'kills' the most; then it is the infantry of the professional English regiments which came forward at the beginning of the campaign. These foot soldiers never fired at random, they aimed as at a target, and have no equals for landing you a ball in the skin. The French troops, carried away by their enthusiasm, seek always the hand-to-hand fighting, where, indeed, they are terrible. But it is a general observation that they often fire too high, and we hear their balls whistle over our heads. The same observation applies to the Russian infantry."

HUNS MADE FASHIONS

Why Recent Modes Have Made Paris Feel Ashamed

A woman who is designer in Paris for several leading houses of modes, says that before the war the most highly paid and most successful designers of new modes in Paris were Germans. It is to them this woman ascribes the extravagant and bizarre fashions of late years, which carried caprice into fantasy, and roused the French people themselves to wonder if after all their old taste was gone or going. The French caricaturist Sem, insisted that the modes of Paris were inspired from Berlin, and poked fierce sarcasm at his women-folk for being such fools as not to see that they were setting ridiculous fashions. These German designers vanished when the war began. This is the reason, she says, that so few models have been launched from Paris since the war began.

Mr Frank Clarke, the Charlotte street jeweller, always to the fore in encouraging athletics, has presented the Peterborough Industrial directors with a handsome silver cup to go to the winner of a half mile foot race at the Exhibition. LOCAL RECRUITS ARE MEASURED

Kingston Standard: Yesterday in camp at Barriefield the 59th Battalion with one thousand men, ten transport waggons and four field kitchens left the camp for a three day's march and bivouac in the direction of Bath. The battalion carried complete camping outfits, including tents in case of rain. The morning was one of the warmest experienced since camp opened, and a few of the men felt the scorching rays of the sun before the head of Princess street was reached. The brass and bugle bands accompanied the 59th on their trek. Perched on top of one of the transport waggons was Teddy, the young bear cub captured back of Madoc some weeks ago and sent to the 59th battalion as a present. Teddy seemed to enjoy the novelty of his situation, and will have many a lively time before he returns to camp.

Kingston Standard: Yesterday the 80th Battalion received nearly 200 recruits. They came from Smith's Falls, Brockville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Gananoque, Ottawa, Belleville and Kingston. The battalion is now about 850 strong.

There are rumours that another squadron of Mounted Rifles is to be raised in this division. Nothing definite has been received here yet, however, in regard to the new corps.

An Acknowledgment.

Major Eastwood has received a letter from Major J. Mills of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Contingent acknowledging the receipt of a supply of tobacco purchased by means of monies raised at the Empire Theatre.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"

The greatest of the season's productions, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" comes to the Grand to-morrow (Friday.) The dramatization of this widely read novel, which as thousands of book readers know, is from the pen of John Fox, Jr., the author of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," is by Eugene Walter, the clever dramatist who has written such successful plays as "Paid in Full," "The Easiest Way" and "Fine Feathers."

The production has a beautiful scenic mounting and it met with capacity greetings in long runs in Boston, New York and Chicago. From all accounts the play is as delightful as the book, for the beauty of the book has been redoubled on the stage.

AERIAL FIGHT VICTORY FOR THE ALLIES

LONDON, September 16. The Press Bureau issues a report from Field Marshal Sir John French, in which the British commander says:

Since my last communication, September 9, there has been no change in the situation on our front. There has been considerable artillery activity on both sides, and more particularly south east of Armentieres and in the neighbourhood of Ypres.

Three hostile aeroplanes were brought down within the past four days. Of these two were hit by our anti-aircraft guns and fell inside the German lines. The third was shot down by our air pilots and fell in our lines. The hostile machine was only slightly damaged but both the pilot and the observer were killed. During the week there have been 21 air fights over the German lines and in 11 cases the hostile aeroplane was driven to the ground.

"On September 10 our artillery, assisted by aeroplane direction, bombarded two German observation balloons located east of Ypres. One balloon burst while the second was defiated and removed.

WAY TO CONSTANTINOPLE TO BE OPENED BY NOVEMBER FIRST

LONDON, September 16.—It is notorious that the Stock Exchange is often better informed on political events than parliamentary circles, so it is interesting to note then on change bets are being freely offered that the Gallipoli Peninsula will be freed of the Turks and the way to Constantinople opened before the end of October.

STOP YER KICKIN'.

Stop yer kickin' 'bout the times,
Get a hustle on you;
Skirmish 'round and grab the dimes
Ef the dollars shun you.
Croakin' never bought a dress,
Growlin' isn't in it;
Fix your propers on success,
Then go in to win it.
Times is gettin' good again
Try to help them all you kin

Don't set 'round with hangin' lip
That is sure to floor you;
Try to get a better grip
On the work before you.
Put some ginger in your words
When you greet a neighbour,
Throw your trouble to the birds.
Get right down to labour.
An' you'll notice every day
Things is comin' right your way.

Stop yer kickin', get a hold
Of the wheel and turn it.
You can never handle gold
Les' yer try to earn it
Brush the cobwebs from yer eyes.
Stop yer durn repinin',
An' you'll notice that yer skies
Allus 'll be shinin',
If you hain't the nerve to try
Sneak away somewhere an' die.

SCOTLAND'S PALLADIUM.

A Famous Piece of Artillery Is Ancient Mons Meg.

In the most honorable location in the Argyll battery of Edinburgh castle is a huge piece of ancient artillery which is known as Mons Meg. This old fashioned piece of ordnance is held in the highest esteem by the Scottish people in fact, it holds a position in their hearts similar to our feelings toward our own Liberty bell.

Mons Meg was made at Mons, Belgium, about the year 1503, by order of James IV., and was named Meg in honor of his wife, Margaret Tudor, the daughter of Henry VII. Its great bulk and weight rendered it almost worthless in those days of hand to hand conflicts. However, it was used on special occasions to help celebrate national events. In the reports of the financial transactions of the times may be found charges for "grease for Meg's mouth" (this was used to increase the loudness of the report), ribbons to deck her carriage and pipes to be played before her when accompanying the Scottish army on an expedition. After the union in 1707 the people feared that the "odious surrender of national independence" would be consummated by the removal of Mons Meg to England. In 1757 the piece was removed to Woolwich, but it was restored to Scotland in 1828, "to quiet the people."

Although only a mere mass of rusty iron, it is revered by the people today and is always decorated with thistle and other flowers on anniversary days. In processions it has always had the place of honor, but recently it was decided that it was dangerous to submit it to the shock of carriage, and now it rides down from its resting place over the great Scot city.—Chicago Herald.

James W. Lusk, receiver in charge of the financial operation of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, was in New York in connection with business of the company.

Bankers interested in the proposed financial readjustment of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway held a conference to consider some of the latest suggestions. Afterward it was stated nothing definite had been done, but the prospects were that the new banking interests soon would take more active interest in the readjustment.

NEW SCHOOL IN BRANTFORD

King George School, Brantford, is being formally opened this afternoon. It is located in the East Ward which has developed very rapidly in recent years.

ROCK ISLAND

Nathan L. Amster, chairman of the Minority Stockholders' Committee of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway, announced that sufficient money had been raised to enable the receivers to pay the July 15 interest on the company's debenture bonds. The company had taken advantage of the 60 days' grace and the money becomes payable to-day.

Mr. Amster said his committee had succeeded in getting subscriptions for $410,000 in six per cent. six months' receiver ship certificates and that through the co-operation of the federal court at Chicago another $90,000 had been made available. The amount of the interest due is $500,000.

It was not from interests in the financial district that the subscriptions were obtained, Mr. Amster said, but from individuals and bankers who believed in the soundness of the Rock Island.

The Court, continued Mr. Amster, will authorize the issuance of the receivers certificates and has been informed as to the institutions in this city and Chicago in which the money has been pledged has been or will be deposited. The company will have plenty of money out of earnings with which to pay the October 1 interest, and I believe the same will be true with respect to the January 1 obligations. We will now have six months within which to work out a readjustment.

Mr. Amster also stated that he would soon be ready to announce a reorganization proposal under which the stockholders would be called upon to raise the money necessary to take the company out of receivership.

Plead For Aid To Resist the Turks

ATHENS, Sept. 17. The American Minister at Athens has received for transmission to Washington a copy of resolutions passed September 5th, at a mass meeting of natives of Asia Minor and Thrace, held at Kavala, European Turkey, protesting against arbitrary dispossessions, cruelties, tortures, shameful indignities, forced conversions to Islamism, even murder, which the Christians in Asia Minor and Thrace are suffering."

Greece is beseeched to intervene because those adopting the resolutions see nowhere else any means of safety.

Copies of the resolutions have been sent to the diplomatic representatives United States, and the Balkan States for communication to their respective governments.

REMOVED BULLET FROM THE HEART OF A SOLDIER

PARIS Sept 16 Means by which was extracted a shrapnel bullet from the right auricle of a French soldier's heart were described to the Academy of Medicine last night by Dr. Charles Lotton. This surgical feat was accomplished by the use of a radiographic compass invented by the surgeon.

The instrument enables Dr. Lotton to locate foreign bodies in the tissues with mathematical precision and permits their extraction without injury to the neighbouring organs, he told his colleagues.

PROLONGED DUEL IN AIR BETWEEN GERMAN AND BRITISH AEROPLANES RESULTS IN VICTORY FOR BRITISH Damaged German Aeroplane Brought Down By Youngest British Aviator, Occasioned Much Joy Among the Canadians.

DETAILS OF A THRILLING DUEL

LONDON, Sept. 17.—There was joy over the whole Canadian line on Monday, and a big assemblage round a damaged German aeroplane brought down by one of the youngest airmen of the British service. The capture of this, one of the latest machines in the enemy service, came after a prolonged duel between German and British airmen with machine guns, watched by the Canadian staff.

The British airmen met the other in a German area, and straightway prepared to follow him. The Britisher lost night of the other for some time, but an hour later came across him and continued plugging after him. The Britisher, fortunately, had a capable companion in handling his machine gun. This opened fire in such a way that a wall of fire was created, which it was impossible for the German to penetrate. In this way the German machine was steadily driven westward.

BROUGHT DOWN.

Machine guns continued firing away from both machines, while thousands of British soldiers, and probably thousands of Germans also, looked on. It became apparent to beholders that the German was winged. The British airman's attack then became still more intense, and not long after the German aeroplane came to the ground, both meh in it being killed by the fire of the British gun, which had also seriously damaged the engine. The British aviator and his companion were unhurt.

The foregoing account came from first hand information, gathered directly after the air battle had taken place, at a time when a big crowd of officers and men were gazing at the latest capture from the clouds.

IN RUINED YPRES.

Amongst the sightseers were the Canadian press agent, who earlier in the day had paid a visit to ruined Ypres. It was a thrilling experience, this walk through the silent streets of this city, where the Canadians a few months ago did such heavy fighting. In the near distance was the booming of guns but, where mounds of bricks and crazy looking walls now stand for what was once Ypres, there was only the sound made by the party itself scrambling amongst the ruins towards Cloth Hall. A few military police told us shells came there every day. Not a single civilian inhabitant remains, and not one house is anything but a mere semblance of what it once stood for. Doors, windows, roofs, all have disappeared. Thus it is grimly true to say that one is welcome to enter the house without knocking.

Later in the day, we saw how one of our own Canadian guns also play the game of havoc. The gun was artfully hidden. The officer in charge told us he did not think the Germans would be able to locate it for some time to come. We held our hands to our ears while the gun delivered its complement towards Germany.

"A direct hit on the house, sir," was the answer from an observation post. Two more rounds were fired for the benefit of us visitors, and for the benefit also of Germany.

BACK IN TRENCHES.

After this, another round of serpentine walking in the trenches, this time among the fellows from the west. We found the brigadier general having a quiet afternoon, smoking and letter-writing in his brigade headquarters. His own especial room consists of a building which so far has escaped the besprinkling German explosive. The general is naturally pleased at his latest decoration of the Legion of Honour, bestowed on him by the French government.

CHAT WITH CANON SCOTT.

In the evening, the writer had the pleasure of a chat with Canon Scott, of Quebec, now chief chaplain of the first division, succeeding Major Stacey, who assumes control of the chaplains of the Canadian corps. Singularly enough, this pleasant encounter with Canon Scott took place under the shadow of an ancient Flemish church. "To-day is the anniversary of the taking of Quebec," so Canon Scott reminded, and he talked with genuine pride of his own work in the field. That morning he held a communion service in the front line trenches, when there were seventy communicants. Later in the day, he held another service, with fifty communicants. Those clergy who believe in daily celebrations will be glad to learn that such is the invariable custom in the Canadian lines.

MAJOR W. B. KING, D.S.O.
Of St. Catharines, Ont., who has been gazetted to command the Canadian Howitzer Brigade, with rank of lieutenant-colonel.

DISPLEASURE OVER DECISION IN PRIZE COURT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Extreme displeasure over the British prize court decision in confiscating fifteen million dollars' worth of American meats pervaded the administration circles to-day. Officials privately admitted that the decison was of great diplomatic importance, as affecting public sentiment in negotiations for modfication of England's order-in-council. Administration stands ready to make vigorous representations at the proper time that the decision increases strained relations with Great Britain in the dispute over her interference with American commerce, was admitted by high officials.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The Situation is quiet on the Western front.

ALLIES VICTORS IN DESPERATE TRENCH WARFARE IN AFRICA

PARIS Sept 17 Fighting continually in Africa since last September along a front of more than 2,000 miles the French Colonial troops aided by the British allies, have obtained remarkable results, said Mr Gaston Doumergue, Minister of the colonies to-day.

"German East Africa," the Minister continued, will soon be the only colony possessed by Germany, with the exception of a small part of the Cameroons. The other German possessions are occupied either by the French or British, or conjointly.

"When one considers the difficulties of transportation in the interior of the Cameroons, not only of food, but of munitions and cannon, of our expeditionary columns, our success appears to be still more evident and meritorious.

"A number of French columns marching from east to west and from south to north already have covered more than 500 kilometers (about 375 miles), and fighting continuously have established junctions and thus surrounded the enemy on three sides, while Anglo-French columns are operating from the coast toward the interior and a blockade of the coast has been effected by British vessels.

"The fighting in the colonies bears a great resemblance to that on the western front. Trenches, backed with entanglements and blockhouse observation posts have been cleverly dispersed and utilized by the Germans, who have shown here as elsewhere the greatest preparations for war. Our enemies have even sent to Africa some aeroplanes, which the Moors fortunately brought down as soon as they appeared.

Garua, with a population of more than 20,000 and an important station, was besieged for several months and only fell when I ordered a gun of large caliber transported there from Morocco. It was brought upon boats along nearly 1,000 kilometers (621 miles) of winding waterways to the outskirts of the city. The effect of the gun's fire was so terrifying that after a short bombardment the population and garrison of Garua requested permission to surrender.

The climate and the nature of the ground opposed great difficulties to the march of our troops, but fortunately they were overcome. I insist in this respect upon the excellent organization of our sanitary service thanks to which our losses due to disease were greatly reduced.

Discussing proposals for raising more native troops for operations next spring, Mr Doumergue said:

"I hope that we will be able to add still more colonial troops to the force of 70,000 Senegalese riflemen who are on the firing line, whether in France, Morocco or the Cameroons and in Western Africa. It is indeed wonderful to see the way in which the natives have responded to the mother country's call and their absolute devotion to the great cause. All the colonies have sent more than their quota of troops and many more are eager to come.

This is due to their childlike faith in their commanders, who have rendered our success in the Cameroons possible. I learn in this connection that many native troops fighting with Germany have crossed over to our side."

Regarding the future of the German colonies, Mr. Doumergue said:

"It is impossible to speak of the future of the German colonies, as after the war their future will depend entirely upon the terms of the peace treaty. All thinking persons have given and will continue to give this matter much thought, but at present it is too premature, in a war which has nearly involved the whole world, to arrive at any definite decision. Now it is our duty to conquer and when this task is accomplished it will be a question of construction.

We will be equal to this new task and put in execution the good which the war has awakened in us, by which history will be certain to point."

Defeat Through Drunkenness (Temperance Lesson.) I Kings 20: 1-21.

Golden Text. Wine and new wine take away the understanding. Hosea 4:11.

1 Verses 1-3. What [illegible]

the most part, have caused the great historic wars of so-called civilized people?

2 When a strong nation wants to put neighbouring nations under tribute and takes years to prepare to conquer them, why is it right or wrong, for the other strong nations of the earth to quietly stand aside and see it done?

3 Verses 4-11. When a weaker nation has made many humiliating concessions to an aggressive and strong nation, and its territory is being invaded, what is the duty of the weaker nation and that of the other strong nations?

4 Verse 12. Benhadad was drunk when he decided to carry out his threat to sack the city of Samaria, what ruler in a nation who has ever declared an unrighteous war has not been under the spell of some evil influence?

5 Why is a king, or a president, or a business man when under the influence of drink, in no fit condition to wisely decide on vital issues?

6 What is the general effect of drinking on kings, princes and presidents?

7 What battles can you mention that have been lost, or wars prejudized through drink?

8 Would this war, which was so disastrous to Benhadad, likely have taken place if he had not been influenced by drink?

9 Verses 13-14. How did this prophet know in advance that Ahab was going to conquer the powerful Benhadad?

10 Which army is more likely to win in a battle and why, one of ten thousand with all others partially drunk or one of five thousand with its officers sober, other things being equal?

11. What part does God, or the laws of God, play in modern warfare?

12 Verses 15-16. What forces were working in favour of Ahab and what force working against Benhadad?

13 What are the chances for a man founding a happy family, conducting a successful business or winning in war, if he "drinks himself drunk" and consorts with men who drink?

14 What proportion of sensuous men attain distinction and hold the love and confidence of the community?

15 Verses 17-18. Wherein were the instructions of Benhadad worthy of a drunken man?

16 If Benhadad had been sober what would have been his probable instructions?

17. How does drink influence the judgment, the motives and the actions of men?

18 Verses 19-21. What would you say was the chief cause of defeat of the Syrians?

19 How are many lives of the whole country and other nations clouded, strife, drunkenness and [illegible] made the most dangerous and why?

20 How many do you know who have been defeated by strong drink and [illegible] have been saved by total abstinence?

Lesson for Sunday, Sept. 26, 1915. Review. Temperance.

Mahomet and the Mountain.

The mountain would not go to him, so Mahomet had to go to the mountain.

Trade is a mountain full of gold and treasure, but it will not come to the merchant who sits and waits for it. He must go to the mountain and when he gets there, he must dig for the treasure and work both to obtain and to hold it.

Advertising, intelligently handled, is the best means to get to the mountain, to unearth the treasure and to hold it, and newspaper advertising is the best and by far the cheapest when results are considered.

Passing of Papyrus.

One of the modern mysteries of Egypt is the disappearance of the papyrus plant that once fringed the lower Nile and made a desirable haunt for water fowl. A botanist, recently from Cairo, declares that in all lower Egypt the only papyri now growing in a natural state are in the Esbekieh Gardens fountain at Cairo, the botanical gardens and at the Barrage. Perhaps Isaiah may have thrown the evil eye on the plant, for among his prophecies is the destruction of the "paper reeds by the brooks." If we did not have ancient illustrations to guide us it would be impossible from the present scanty remains to reconstruct the amazing fields of papyri that indirectly helped to civilize us.—London Tatler.

A Town of Distinction.

"Where can one find a more filthy, hot, sweltering, odorous town than Hodeidah?" asks a recent traveler regarding that Arabian port. A filthier town it would indeed be difficult to discover, even in Asiatic Turkey, and the character of its inhabitants may be judged from the fact that the Akhdam Arabs, who are treated as outcasts by all the other tribes, have been allowed to establish themselves in Hodeidah. Nevertheless the port is the gateway to one of the most beautiful, fertile and populous regions of Arabia and had a flourishing trade in days prior to Turkish misrule.—Pall Mall Gazette.

She shook her head ruefully. "You poor man! You don't know what you are in for, I fear. Wait till I have told you everything. Three weeks ago I laid myself liable to imprisonment and heaven knows what else by abducting my little girl. That is really what it comes to—abduction. The court has ordered my arrest, and all sorts of police persons are searching high and low for me. Now don't you see your peril? If they find me here you will be in a dreadful predicament. You will be charged with criminal complicity, or whatever it is called, and—Oh, it will be frightfully unpleasant for you, Mr. Smart!"

My expression must have convicted me. She couldn't help seeing the dismay in my face. So she went on quite humbly:

"Of course you have but to act at once and all may be well for you. I—I will go if you—if you command me to"—

I struck my knee forcibly. "What do you take me for, madame? Hang the consequences! If you feel that you are safe here—that is, comparatively safe—stay!"

"It will be terrible if you get into trouble with the law," she murmured in distress. "I—I really don't know what might happen to you. Indeed, I do not."

Suddenly a horrible thought struck me with stunning force.

"Don't tell me that your—your husband is the man who owned this castle up to a week ago," I cried. "Count James Hohendahl?"

She shook her head. "No. He is not the man." Seeing that I waited for her to go on, she resumed: "I know Count James quite well, however. He is my husband's closest friend."

"Good heaven," said I, in quick alarm. "That complicates matters, doesn't it? He may come here at any time."

"It isn't likely, Mr. Smart. To be perfectly honest with you, I waited until I heard you had bought the castle before coming here myself. We were in hiding at the house of a friend in Linz up to a week ago."

"May I inquire, madame," said I stiffly, "how you came to select my abode as your hiding place?"

"Oh, I have forgotten to tell you that we lived here one whole summer just after we were married. Count Hohendahl let us have the castle for our—our honeymoon. He was here a great deal of the time. All sorts of horrid, nasty, snobbish people were here to help us enjoy our honeymoon. I shall never forget that dreadful summer. My only friends were the Schmicks. You see they were in the family ages and ages before I was born."

"The family? What family?"

"The Rothhoefen family. Haven't they told you that my great-grandmother was a Rothhoefen? No? Well, she was. I belong to the third generation of American born descendants.

Doesn't it simplify matters, knowing this?"

"Immensely," said I, in something of a daze.

"And so I came here, Mr. Smart, where hundreds of my ancestors spent their honeymoons, most of them perhaps as unhappily as I, and where I knew a fellow countryman was to live for awhile in order to get a plot for a new story. You see, I thought I might be a great help to you in the shape of suggestion."

She smiled very warmly, and I thought it was a very neat way of putting it. Naturally it would be quite impossible to put her out after hearing that she had already put herself out to some extent in order to assist me.

"I can supply the villain for your story if you need one, and I can give you oceans of ideas about noblemen. I am sorry that I can't give you a nice, sweet heroine. People hate heroines after they are married and live unhappily. You"—

"The public taste is changing," I interrupted quickly. "Unhappy marriages are so common nowadays that the women who go into 'em are always heroines. People like to read about suffering and anguish among the rich, too. Besides, you are a countess. That puts you near the first rank among heroines. Don't you think it would be proper at this point to tell me who you are?"

She regarded me steadfastly for a moment, and then shook her head.

"I'd rather not tell you my name, Mr. Smart. It really can't matter, you know. I've thought it all out very carefully, and I've decided that it is not best for you to know. You see if you don't know who it is you are sheltering the courts can't hold you to account. You will be quite innocent of deliberately contriving to defeat the law.

"No. I shall not tell you my name, nor my husband's, nor my father's. If you'd like to know, however, I will tell you my baby's name. She's two years old and I think she'll like you to call her Rosemary."

By this time I was quite hypnotized by this charming, confident trespasser upon my physical—and I was about to say my moral estate. Never have I known a more complacent violator of all the proprieties of law and order as she appeared to be. She was a revelation—more than that, she was an inspiration.

What an exceedingly courageous, independent, fascinating little buccaneer she was!

"Rosemary," I repeated. "And what am I to call you?"

"Even my enemies call me countess," she said coldly.

"Oh," said I, more respectfully. "I see. When am I to have the pleasure of meeting the less particular Rosemary?"

"I didn't mean to be horrid," she said plaintively. "Please overlook it, Mr. Smart. If you are very, very quiet I think you may see her now. She is asleep."

"I may frighten her if she awakes," I said in haste, remembering my antipathy to babies.

Nevertheless I was led through a couple of bare, unfurnished rooms into a sunny, perfectly adorable nursery. A nursemaid—English, at a glance—arose from her seat in the window and held a cautious finger to her lips. In the middle of a bed that would have accommodated an entire family, was the sleeping Rosemary—a tiny, rosy cheeked, yellow haired atom bounded on four sides by yards of mattress.

I stood over her timorously and stared. The countess put one knee upon the mattress and, leaning far over, kissed a little paw. I blinked, like a confounded booby.

Then we stole out of the room.

"Isn't she adorable?" asked the countess when we were at a safe distance.

"They all are," I said grudgingly, "when they're asleep."

"You are horrid!"

"By the way," I said sternly, "how does that bedstead happen to be a yard or so lower than any other bed in this entire castle? All the rest of them are so high one has to get into them from a chair."

"Oh," she said complacently, "it was too high for Blake to manage conveniently, so I had Rudolph saw the legs off short."

One of my very finest antique bedsteads! But I didn't even groan a single groan.

"You will let me stay on, won't you, Mr. Smart?" she said when we were at the fireplace again. "I am really so helpless, you know."

I offered her everything that the castle afforded in the way of loyalty and luxury.

"And we'll have a telephone in the main hall before the end of a week," I concluded beamingly.

Her face clouded. "Oh, I'd much rather have it in my hallway, if you don't mind. You see, I can't very well go downstairs every time I want to use the phone, and it will be a nuisance sending for me when I'm wanted."

This was rather high handed, I thought.

"But if no one knows you're here it seems to me you're not likely to be called."

"You never can tell," she said mysteriously.

I promised to put the instrument in over night and not to have an extension to my rooms for fear of creating suspicion. Also the electric bell system was to be put in just as she wanted it to be and a lot of other things that do not seem to come to mind at this moment.

CHAPTER IX.

I Discuss Matrimony.

AT 12 the next day I climbed the tortuous stairs leading to the countess' apartments. She opened the door herself.

"I neglected to mention yesterday that I am expecting a houseful of guests in a day or two," I said after she had given me a very cordial greeting.

"Guests!" she cried in dismay. "Oh, dear; can't you put them off?"

"I have hopes that they won't be able to stand the workmen banging around all day," I confessed, somewhat guiltily.

"Women in the party?"

"Two I believe. Both married and qualified to express opinions."

"They will be sure to nose me out," she said ruefully. "Women are dreadful nosers."

"Don't worry," I said. "We'll get a lot of new padlocks for the doors downstairs, and you'll be as safe as can be if you'll only keep quiet."

"But I don't see why I should be made to mope here all day and all night like a sick cat, holding my hand over Rosemary's mouth when she wants to cry and muzzling poor Jinko so that he"—

"My dear countess," I interrupted sternly, "you should not forget that these other guests of mine are invited here."

"But I was here first," she argued. "It is most annoying."

"I believe you said yesterday that you are in the habit of having your own way." She nodded her head. "Well, I am afraid you'll have to come down from your high horse—at least temporarily."

"Oh, I see! You—you mean to be very firm and domineering with me."

"You must try to see things from my point of"—

"Please don't say that!" she flared. "I'm so tired of hearing those words. For the last three years I've been commanded to see things from some one else's point of view, and I'm sick of the expression."

"For heaven's sake don't put me in the same boat with your husband!"

She regarded me somewhat frigidly for a moment longer, and then a slow, witching smile crept into her eyes.

"I shan't," she promised and laughed outright. "Do forgive me, Mr. Smart. I'll try to be nice and sensible, and I will be as still as a mouse all the time they're here. But you must promise to come up every day and give me the gossip."

We fell into a discussion of present and future needs; of ways and means for keeping my friends utterly in the dark concerning her presence in the abandoned east wing.

"I've been trying to recall all of the notable marriages we had in New York three years ago," said I, after she had most engagingly reduced me to a state of subjection in the matter of three or four moot questions that came up for settlement. "You don't seem to fit in with any of the international affairs I can bring to mind."

"You promised you wouldn't bother about that, Mr. Smart," she said severely.

"Of course you were married in New York?"

"In a very nice church just off Fifth avenue, if that will help you any," she said. "The usual crowd inside the church and the usual mob outside all fighting for a glimpse of me in my wedding shroud and for a chance to see a real Hungarian nobleman. It really was a very magnificent wedding, Mr. Smart." She seemed to be unduly proud of the spectacular sacrifice.

A knitted brow revealed the obfuscated condition of my brain. I was thinking very intently, not to say remotely.

"Don't you read the newspapers?" she cried impatiently. She actually resented my ignorance.

"Religiously," I said, stung to revolt. "But I make it a point never to read the criminal news."

"Criminal news?" she gasped. "What do you mean?"

HUNS WOO BELGIUM

Eminent Herr Professor Rebuked by Belgian Colleagues For Intrigues

The German diplomats are busily engaged trying to make capital out of the old animosities between the Flemish and the Walloon population of Belgium. Through the voices of her statement, professors and journalists Germany is endeavoring to convince the Flemish people that she recognises them as her blood relations and brethren and that she has no higher desire than to deliver them from the French yoke. A famous Belgian historian received a visit from one of Germany's great luminaries, Professor Lambrecht. The German professor immediately began to speak to his Belgian colleague of the close affinity of race between the Germans and part of the Belgians. He swore that the Kaiser was by no means inspired by the evil intentions attributed to him by wicked people, on the contrary he never for a moment had thought of annexing Belgium, but simply desired to acquire the coast of the country as a bulwark against England and this would really be an advantage also to the Belgians who would thus themselves be protected against the perfidious country across the North Sea, which was their greatest and bitterest enemy. "If Belgium would enter into some form of a union with Germany her people would get full freedom to develop their magnificent gifts, while otherwise such a thing would be quite impossible," he continued. Germany the most noble minded and generous country in the world, would then found a new country, Francouia, and found a number of universities there for the inhabitants of the Latin race."

The Belgian professor with all the courtesy due a scientific celebrity declared that this project had not the slightest chance of success and that not a single Belgian would think of entering such a German university. On the other hand, he declared, far from looking upon England as an enemy Belgium would gratefully try to get into even closer touch with that country. Professor Lamprecht afterwards called on two other Belgian scientists, although warned that each of them had lost a son fighting against the Germans. In each case he was politely but firmly shown the door.

Just Suits My Needs Building Up the System

"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food," writes Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., "and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep but now I sleep soundly at night and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months and found that it just suits my needs and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition and am thankful for it.

"My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles and has been entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

We are constantly receiving letters like this in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Everywhere it is being used because of its great restorative and reconstructive influence on the nervous system. Men and women who are run down in health, tired, nervous and discouraged, find in this great Food Cure the means of nourishing the exhausted system back to health and vigour.

Headaches, indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous irritability, lack of energy and vigour all tell of nervous exhaustion, and indicate the need of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Instead of affording mere temporary relief by stimulating the nerves, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food builds up the system by supplying the ingredients from which Nature forms new rich blood and revitalizes the wasted nervous system. Put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test when you are feeling tired out and discouraged, fill the body with new rich blood and new nerve force and you will realize again the joy of good health. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S WORK APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

Assuredly this apron will offer sufficient protection to the dress during almost any occupation, but it is one which requires a dress beneath.

The front panel of the apron is narrow and has bib and skirt front in its length, with short strap extensions at the shoulders. This joins the side and back pieces which are at each side and the forward edges of which extend upward to the shoulder along the entire length of the front breadth. In the seam which joins front and sides the pockets are stitched, and these are large and serviceable. The side gore slopes away toward the back, where it ends at the waist line, except for the long strap extensions, which meet those of the front at the shoulder and are fastened to them with a button. It is intended that the back straps shall be crossed over, and thus they will hold in the front of the apron close to the figure.

Such aprons as this are usually made of a substantial gingham, but there are also many pretty figured cambrics, calicoes and the like which are equally suitable and sometimes more easy to obtain. The edges of the various breadths or of the outer lines of the apron may be bound with wash braid or with a bias band of the material or plainly finished with a hem.

The apron pattern, No. 7320, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents or 2 for 25c.

BONAR LAW TO CANADIANS

Colonies Have Given Great Example of Moral Force

Canadian troops, including infantry, cavalry, artillery, field ambulances and cyclists, were reviewed in Kent, England, by Mr. Bonar Law, Secretary for the Colonies, who was accompanied by Major-General Hughes, Colonel Max Aitken, M.P., and other officials. Mr. Bonar Law afterwards delivered a short address, saying:

"Nothing has shown more clearly to my mind what we are fighting for than the fact that I have seen to-day men from every part of Canada, from Halifax to Vancouver, animated with the same spirit and all feeling strongly, as the United Kingdom, that we are fighting for everything which freeborn men have always prized. I know what Canadians have suffered and are prepared to suffer. I thought of your high courage and devotion especially as I looked at so many young faces, and it seemed to me that your sacrifice is not so great as that of those you have left behind. The War Minister has told you I was born in Canada, though most of my life has been spent in the Old Country, but I am proud of my Canadian birth and what the soldiers of Canada have done. I am proud of the future which I am sure lies before you."

The Secretary of the Colonies later in the evening addressed more than 1,000 officers of the Second Canadian Division and the Canadian Training Depot, Shorncliffe. He said it was the hope that this war would make it impossible for one man, or one group of men, to plunge the world into war. There was in the world no more striking example of the reality and strength of moral force than the part played to-day by the self-governing dominions of the British Crown.

WHERE SOCIALISM FELL

Germany's Largest Party Denied itself at Kaiser's Word

The war has accomplished what neither the great Bismarck nor his minor successors were able to do. It has broken up the great Social Democratic party in Germany. In the Chamber of Wuertemberg the radical Socialists declared war on the knife against their old party when they formed the new independent party, the Socialist Union, whose actual program is peace. Perhaps the most tragic element in the breaking up of the great socialistic world movement is that its downfall in Germany has been brought about by a question as typically national and imperialistic as this. Whether or not Germany is to profit by the war by extending her frontiers.

Here, at least, one was inclined to think, was a question on which all international Socialists must agree, but later attempts that were made to bring about a reconciliation served only to widen the breach.

The fate that overtook the international Socialists when the war broke out was indeed a tragic one and especial tragic to the German Socialists. Never had that party held a stronger or more proud position—with its four million voters, the greatest party in Reichstag, and numerous representatives in the chambers of the various countries of the German Empire. In one day the gigantic work of generations collapsed. The day when the German Socialists as a whole, like a flock of sheep, deserted their ideals and voted in favor of the war appropriations, they sealed their own doom. In a single moment the powerful party became a nonentity—its ideas and its power were swept aside by a word of the Kaiser and the millions of voters who for generations had been taught to hate and detest war, embraced the guns, shouldered the rifles and went to war with a song on their lips. So much went to pieces that most of the German Socialist leaders seen nothing repulsive in annexing Belgium. So much has gone to pieces that German Socialist leaders calmly discuss "regulations of frontiers" as the result of the war. "How is it possible to get away from these facts?" says Herr Liebknecht, the only German Socialist who from the very first remained loyal to his ideals, which with him had become convictions. "How powerless are not even the most honeyed and clever phrases against these dreadful events, and what a bottomless pit of hypocrisy it is to pretend that they do not exist or that they mean nothing!"

DISLIKE OF GERMANY

The leading Vienna Socialist organ recently discussed the question: "What is at the root of the dislike felt towards Germany by the majority of civilized countries?" The newspaper admits that even in the majority of neutral countries this dislike is felt. To say, as so many North German writers and newspapers are in the habit of saying, that Germans do not mind being hated, so long as they are feared, is neither politically wise nor logical. The sowing of the seeds of fear will never enable one to reap a harvest of love. The seeds of fear grow into the full ear of hate. Despite the writers and newspapers who do not mind being hated, the vast majority of Germans, both in Germany and Austria, desire to be admired and loved and respected, but they are told by the Vienna newspaper that so long as they support a policy of sowing fear they will never gain anything else than hatred. In the opinion of the Arbieter-Zeitung it is high time that the German nation thought out this question. This awful war will not last forever, and German men and women will return to normal thoughts and find it wholly undesirable to be regarded as the scourge and terror of the world. The Vienna newspaper holds that scourging and terrorizing is not Germany's world mission, but the winning of the world's love and respect.

After the revolution the French started a new calendar, beginning with the year 1.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

AN ICEBERG AT SEA.

One of the Most Awe Inspiring Spectacles in Nature.

There is nothing in nature so imposing and awe inspiring as the iceberg, writes Lacey Amy in the Wide World Magazine. It gives an overpowering sense of relentless force, of dignity and of brilliance.

Beneath the sun's vivid rays or the dark clouds of threatening storm, in the moon's cold beams or dimly through the shadows of moonless night, in calm and tempest—every one of them, from the tiny "growler" to the huge mass of spurs, rouses at first glimpse an awe undiminished by a growing appreciation of its beauty.

Always before one is the thought that but an eighth of the iceberg's bulk shows above the water, the remainder stretching down and down into the blue-green depths and out and ont until captains breathe freely only when the horizon is clear of them. Far out in the ocean, with the largest steamers passing swiftly miles inside, they ground upon the bottom in tremendous depths and calmly await the relieving touch of sun and current.

In the wildest seas and strongest gales these frigid mountains float undisturbed. There could be no seasickness on an iceberg, for its foundations are fathoms below the wave disturbance.

Trials of the Great.

Right Honorable Secretary of State—You have long been a leading supporter of mine, Colonel Buffer, and I shall be glad to do what I can for your son, but—er—what can he do?

Fond Parent—My dear sir, if he could do anything I should not think of troubling you!—Passing Show.

Varieties of Finance.

Mrs. Touchley—I hated to do it, but I had to take some money out of my husband's pockets while he was asleep last night to pay for his birthday present.

Mrs. Chargely—Mercy! I wouldn't dare do such a thing! I used the market money and then had things charged to him.

Seeing Ships at Sea.

Ships can be recognized when they are thirty miles out at sea if searchlights are directed upon them, the silhouette of the ship which is thrown up by this light being sufficient guide for naval experts, who by the mere outline of the vessel can tell her name.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE.

Compiled by a Royal Prisoner in His Living Tomb.

In the old prison at the Place of Skulls, Madrid, many, many years ago the learned Prince of Granada, heir to the Spanish throne, was imprisoned by the order of the crown lest he try to usurp the throne. He was kept in solitary confinement for thirty-three years, and when death at last released him from this living tomb the following researches, taken from the Bible and marked with an old nail on the walls of the cell, told how his brain sought employment through the weary years:

"In the Bible the word 'lord' is found 1,853 times, the word 'Jehovah' 4,855 times, and the word 'reverend' but once and that in the ninth verse, One Hundred and Eleventh Psalm. The eighth verse of the One Hundred and Seventeenth Psalm is the middle verse of the Bible. The ninth verse of the eighth chapter of Esther is the longest verse and the thirty-fifth verse of the eleventh chapter of St. John is the shortest. In the One Hundred and Sixth Psalm four verses are alike — the eighth, fifteenth, twenty-first, and thirty-first. Each verse of the One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Psalm ends alike.

"No names or words with more than six syllables are found in the Bible. The thirty-seventh chapter of Isaiah and nineteenth chapter of II. Kings are alike. The word 'girl' occurs but once in the Bible and that in the third verse and third chapter of Joel. There are found in both books of the Bible 3,586,483 letters, 773,693 words, 31,373 verses, 1,139 chapters, and 66 books. The twenty-sixth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles is the finest to read. The most beautiful chapter in the Bible is the Twenty-third Psalm.

"The four most inspiring promises are: John, sixteenth chapter and second verse; John, sixth chapter and thirty-seventh verse; St. Matthew, eleventh chapter and twenty-eighth verse, and the Thirty seventh Psalm, fourth verse. The first verse of the sixtieth chapter of Isaiah is one for the new convert. All should read the sixth chapter of Matthew. All humanity should learn the sixth chapter of St. Luke from the twentieth verse to its ending."

Coming In Through.

"What's the trouble?"

Germans' Desperate Efforts Break Through in the North

Von Hindenburg is Hurling 400,000 Men Against Russian Lines Which Have Had to Give Ground Safely---In Every Other Section, However, the Enemy Have Been Defeated---Czar's Forces Are Still Taking Prisoners.

GREAT ACTIVITY ON THE EASTERN FRONT

PETROGRAD, Sept. 17.—Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is now hurling 400,000 men supported by a great array of artillery against the Russian lines in the north in a determined attempt to capture Vilna, Dvinsk and then Riga. The War Office in an official statement to-day, admitted that the Czar's troops have been compelled to give ground slightly before these fresh assaults. It is also admitted that Russians are falling back in the region of Pinsk, but else where the enemy has been defeated on every sector, the Slavs taking more than 3,100 prisoners in Wednesday's engagements. Southwest of Dvinsk, the Germans have approached the Russian wire defences between the Dvinsk Road and Lawe Samasa. Gen. Von Beulow's cavalry is nearing the Melodetchne-Polotsk railway, northwest of Vilna. The enemy has thrown a force across to the left bonk of the Vilija, after bloody fighting.

In the Derazno region, and in some parts of Galicia the Austro-Germans have attempted to strengthen their positions by weak attacks, all of which have been repulsed. During one of these engagements west of the Village of Pensyka, the Czar's troops captured 410 men and four maxims. The Austrians are now stubbornly resisting Gen. Ivanoff's advance in the Tarnopoli-Trembowla region. They hold strong positions at the fordu of the Strypa and by extravagant use of ammunition have blocked the Russian attempts to make further crossings. The Russian forces that reached the West Bank of the river in Tuesday's engagements are maintaining themselves, despite heavy attacks. The War Office declares, untrue, an official statement issued at Vienna, Sunday, declaring that Russian troops were repulsed toward the bridgehead at Tarnopol, suffering heavy losses.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—(French Officitl)—The French gunners exploded German supply stations in an artillery battle south of Arras which lasted all day yesterday and last night, and in which thousands of shells were fired. The enemy opened attacks and also between Angres and Souchez The French replied with great effectiveness wrecking advanced trenches and silencing the enemy's batteries, the communique announced. Trench fighting occurred last night between the Somme and the Aisne, but without important results. The artillery duel in the Argonne and between the Sapigneul and the Aisne continued without cessation last night.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Germans have lost twenty and British seven submarines since the beginning of the war, a Motor Boat publication asserted to-day.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—A correspondent of the Daily Chronicle in Athens says: "The Germans recognize that time is now against them in this particular zone of the great war area. Am told by a diplomat that the belief in Vienna is that Galipoli Peninsula at least will be in the Allies' hands at an early date.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Commenting editorially on the decision of the British Prize Court affecting cargoes of American ships, the New York Sun this morning says: "Perishable goods were detained unnecessarily to invaluable loss to their owners, whereas prompt action would have saved them. On account of this shippers have legitimate complaint, which cannot be overlooked when our Government presents its long expected communication reciting grievances to the British Government."

The New York World under the caption of "Robbery by Prize Court," says: "Decision could have been determined as easy in ten days as in the longer period of ten months which it took the Prize Court to pass upon. This in itself is an outrage."

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 17.—The War Office this afternoon announced that troops under Field Marshal Von Hindenburg have captured Widay, south of Dvinsk.

BERLIN, via wireless, Sept. 17.—The German Empress has received in audience three superior Russian nurses who came to Germany to inspect Russion Prison camps, it was announced to-day.

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 17.—A most important conference, destined, it is hoped here, to lead to a settlement of all differences between the United States and Germany, began here to-day at the Foreign Office, where Ambassador Bernstorff's report has been received. Leading bankers, statesmen, mercantile marine men, and business men of all descriptions have been summoned to express their views on the matter. The conference is likely to last for a week.

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—Anglicans of Canada will pray without ceasing for success of the Allied arms in the present European conflict. Two resolutions having this object in view were passed without a dissenting voice by the General Synod to-day. It was moved by Archdeacon Mackay, seconded by Rev. Dr. Altlant, that, "Whereas present form of intercession for war now used in our churches is not sufficiently compresensive, the House of Bishops be respectedly requested to issue a reversal form of intercession with petitions for those in captivity, those in peril in air and under water, and for general victory of our cause." This was also carried amidst prolonged applause.

Local Blacklister in Police Court on the Usual Charge

The case of Owen Baker, charged in this morning's police court with being under the influence of liquor while on the blacklist, was adjourned until ten o'clock to-morrow morning in order to give accused an opportunity of producing further evidence. Sergeant Brown gave damaging evidence which tended to show that Baker was in an intoxicated condition on Monday last. The accused tried to shove an electric light pole over, so the officer claimed

Baker swore he had nothing stronger than a patent remedy which he purchased in a local drug store on Saturday night last. On Sunday he purchased another bottle. A part of the concoction will be produced in court, that is if the combined efforts of Baker and a police officer can locate it.

Agreed to Enlist.

By consenting to enlist, Howard Innis averted the possibility of being interned at the Guelph prison farm The charge was one of vagrancy to which the accused pleaded not guilty Judgment was reserved for one week

MAY ADOPT A NEW POLICY

In Housing Troops In Training This Winter, Says Sir Sam Hughes in an Interview at Toronto This Morning

TORONTO, Sept. 17.— Major Gen Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, announced in an interview here this morning that the department may adopt an unexpected policy in housing troops in training this winter instead of concentrating large bodies of troops now in camp t big city training centres during the winter. The department may utilized drill halls, armouries and other buildings in smaller cities and towns, and distribute regiments al labout the country in that way. This announcement was made in reply to Mayor Church's announcement recently that he wouldn't allow soldiers without uniforms to winter in Toronto Exhibition grounds. "The Mayor better keep his esteemed nose clean," said Sir Sam, "or he won't have any soldiers at all We will probably station the soldiers in the many fine drill halls in smaller cities. Why should we go to the expense of fitting up the Exhibition grounds when we have these fine drill hall at our disposition"

Toronto had expected to have from twelve to fourteen thousand troops now at Niagara camp, wintering here If the Minister of Militia's announced plan is carried out, there will be great disappointment here.

U. S. PACKERS WILL APPEAL TO PRIVY COUNCIL

Also Ask That the State Department Protest the Action of the Admiralty Prize Court in Seizing Meat Cargoes

LITTLE HOPE OF SUCCESS

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, Sept 17 An appeal to Great Britain's privy council from decision of Admiralty prize court which has ordered seized over fifteen millions of dollars' worth of meat cargoes will be followed by insisting that the State Department protest action on the ground that it is a blow to the freedom of the seas These were the two steps decided on today by the Chicago packers, who were the hardest hit in the ship seizure case They admitted they were pessimistic regarding the outcome of their appeal to the Privy Council

BIG PERFORMANCE TO-NIGHT

For the first time in its history, the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was graced by the presence of soldiers on active service. Surely this fact was appreciated by the crowds that attended to-day's big opening of the annual event which brings together the farmers and the citizens of this country, at least a large number of them. The men in khaki "did their bit" in contributing to the usual spectacle staged here in the grand stand, but it was also realized that they were preparing to do their bit in the tremendous spectacle now staged in Europe upon the outcome of which the freedom of the foremost democracies in the world depends

These men are potentially heroes and their participation in the Fair programme should not be regarded solely as a performance, but as a reminder of the crisis in spite of which the directors have endeavoured to continue their annual exhibition

Fair is a Success.

Before this afternoon's events were commenced the directors could truly state that the Fair is a genuine success All the stalls for swine, sheep cattle and horses were occupied; the poultry and floral tents were bulging and the other exhibits were more numerous than ever In short the entry list was longer than previous records showed, and after all this is the backbone of the Exhibition Entries were coming up to noon and to such an extent that the directors were discussing the advisability of laying down a rule for the future that all exhibits must be in on the first day.

Attractions Are Good.

The attractions in front of the grand stand were most entertaining, and their variety alone was a special feature. They will be repeated this evening with the addition of a big fireworks display This should particularly appeal to the citizens who will find all the exhibits open and everything presented as in the daytime

Weather Delightful.

The morning broke with doubtful promise, but by noon the sun was brilliant and a cool tempering wind proved decidedly welcome Old Sol had shaken off his fit of "tantrums" and with it disappeared the misgivings with which the Directors regarded daybreak Daybreak, of course, is used in a broad sense and may be anywhere from five until 7.45 according to the personal habits of the directors

The Afternoon Parade.

At 2.30 this afternoon the 57th and 80th Battalion bands paraded from the Armouries down George St presenting a fine appearance as they marched down town Behind them came the Fire Department from the Chief's wagon to the engine, with harness brass and silver parts polished to perfection and flashing in the brilliant sunshine The uniforms were neat and new and not the least conspicuous was Capt McElhinney, chaplain of the brigade who rode beside the driver of the first truck The combined bands played "Tipperary," which may be trayed to frequent repetitions and which certainly is not classical But with its associations and its military swing its repetitional effects are magnified rather than diminished

Horses a Feature

The horse events filled a section, promised keen contests in the judging Especially was this felt in the heavy horse events In these division should bring out fine specimens of drivers The cattle exhibits are a little lighter than usual the same might apply to sheep Exhibitors state that some of the breeders who have been regular entrants at Peterborough, are at Ottawa However all the other classes are specially represented

WORTH THE PRICE.

We can hardly conceive the significance of a million dollars. A calculation made shows that if a man sat down to count a million, dollar by dollar, and counted a dollar every second, it would take him working day and night, Sundays included, 278 hours, nearly two weeks to complete the count of a million. This will give us some faint idea of the immense and impossibly conceivable amount of money Great Britain has spent in thirteen months of war. The total of Great Britain's expenditure upon the war, to date, is 6,310 pounds sterling, or 30,550 million dollars. And this expenditure is still going on at the rate of 21 million dollars per day, and will continue at even a greater rate, 25 millions per day. And to think Great Britain has voluntarily assumed this enormous expenditure—just for the sake of a principle, the principle of honesty—of keeping faith—to protect the integrity of a weaker nation whose territory had been outraged, and its existence as a nation imperilled. Great Britain is fighting for the foundation principle of civilization, honour and respect for human right, state and individual. We are highly privileged to be a part of an empire that is founded upon such a rock, and should be, and are, proud to tender our little contribution of service and sacrifice; not altogether unselfishly, for the integrity of Canada, our freedom, our happiness, our progress, are involved in helping Britain and her allies to the triumph that can alone assure our national existence as a free country, and assure the freedom of the smaller and greater nations of the world and protects all the interests of civilization. The price will be great, but the victory will be worth the price.

CANADA, THE STAKE.

> The Manitoba Free Press says that certain "Tory" newspapers, taking their inspiration from Hon. Robert Rogers, are hinting that in the event of a general election an attack will be made upon the loyalty of the Liberals. That indeed would be a dangerous game to play—dangerous for those who played it.

At this time nothing could be more mischievous than that what is suggested should be done. Even the necessary reference to such things is bad, much more the thing itself. This is no time for any loyal Canadian to "take stock" of his neighbour's loyalty. Every loyal citizen of Canada is now cooperating—working shoulder to shoulder — with every other loyal citizen; and he is disloyal, an enemy of his country's best interests—constructively and destructively, a potential ally of our enemies—who by word or action introduces among our citizenship, as a dividing instrument, the wicked, pettiness of party politics or exploitation of party interests.

In this time of crisis we should not even think of Grit or Tory; we should strive to be as most of us are doing, to be only Canadians working unitedly for the interests of Canada as inevitably involved in the tremendous issue of the war. The introduction of party politics, the suggested proposal to divide our people on the lines of their respective loyalty, is not only viciously wrong in the abstract, but it is transparently inconsistent, if, as is asserted, Hon. Mr. Rogers is the father of the idea. It would be colossal impudence as well as inconsistency for Mr. Rogers of all men to head a propaganda of slander; to assail the loyalty of one-half of our population. It would be both impudent and inconsistent for Hon Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, to question the loyalty of his opponents. He sits cheek by jowl in the Borden cabinet alongside cabinet ministers who have explicitly declared their disloyalty to Canada in their attitude of hostility to British institutions. He sits alongside of, for one, the Hon. Mr. Blondin, who declared that we "owe nothing to England"—"we have no use for England and the English." But after all he is less disloyal than the one of His Majesty's advisers, who can contemplate a deliberately planned propaganda to impeach the loyalty of better men, of one-half of the people of Canada.

It is not a pleasant thing, but a humiliating necessity, to refer to these things. They are only referred to to show the illogicality of any public man in a position of responsibility proposing to inject not only party politics, but party tactics of the basest character, into the arena of united national striving for the promotion, by a solid front of unity, of the interests of Canada and the Empire.

We have only one thing to do now; and that is so great a thing, that we can only do it by unitedly throwing into the common action, every effort of which, we as a people, are capable. We can admit no distraction from the impulse and energy of our work, that will represent the least interference with its force and efficiency. When we do and have done all that we can do by united cooperation of all classes and political parties, we shall perhaps come far short of what, the situation demands. We shall not do this if we turn aside to play at politics, and especially if this diversion of national attention is accompanied by a cry, by a crusade against one section of our people; a crusade that represents not only death to unity of effort, but active hostility and disloyalty to the cause, in which all our hearts are centred.

"The Chief Press Censor for Canada" has issued a confidential memorandum for newspaper editors. It will be no breach of confidence to say that this circular urges the importance of avoiding the printing of matter "that will be likely to encourage the spirit of resistance in enemy countries." What could more encourage the resistance of enemy countries than the publication of the declaration of a general election in war time. This would be tantamount to saying that the heart of Canada was so little in the fight, that it can turn aside from the tremendous responsibility of helping as one man in this war; and the inference will be easily drawn that Canada cannot be regarded as a serious factor in opposition to the plans of our enemies. This deduction would be greatly strengthened if the main issue in such an election should be the disloyalty of half the population. For heaven's sake let us be serious; let us be in earnest; let us be united; let us be unhampered in solidly working together to the end of helping Canada do her duty. Let us not think of politics; let us think only of doing our best, which can only be done by united action, without reference to any minor matter. Governments are not at stake in this great struggle, but the country and the Empire.

THE PRICE OF WHEAT.

The truth is that the men standing between the farmer and the consumer of bread get a far greater share of the ultimate cost of the wheat than does the farmer. As an economic proposition it would be quite possible by scaling down the profits of the grain dealer, the miller, and the bread manufacturer, all of whom are doing very well, to give the farmer more for his wheat, yet lessen the price of bread to the consumer.—Globe.

WHAT IS RUSSIA'S POLICY?

The policy that dictates the removal of the Grand Duke Nicholas is less clear, but if it leads to an aggressive Russian campaign against Turkey on the southern front it will be directed against the weakest point in the armour of the Teutonic allies. Military critics more and more agree that, while the lines on the western front may suffer no vital charge, the collapse of Turkey is like'y to prove the decading factor in the war.—New York World.

TWELVE MONTHS OF WAR.

The twelve months of savage and devastating war have ruined the peaceful industries of mankind, sacrificed hetacombs of young lives, altered the whole complexion of Western civilization. There has been nothing like it before and we fervently hope that there will be nothing like it again in the years to come. And yet we are proud, because in that wonderful mixture of good and evil which represents the onward course of humanity we have gained as much profit as disaster out of a catastrophe which at first sight seems unrelieved in its blackness.—London Daily Telegraph.

GETS 50c HE LENT WOOLWORTH IN 1875

WATERTOWN, N.Y. Sept. 16—Frank D. Woolworth, owner of millions, is worth at least 50 cents less than he was when he arrived in this city recently and met "Huckleberry Charlie" Sherman.

Forty years ago, when the big syndicate man and "Huckleberry Charlie" played as boys near Great Bend, the future millionaire needed 50 cents to go to a road circus. Charlie furnished the money.

As Mr. Woolworth alighted from his automobile in front of the Woodruff House here, Charlie was on hand to press his claim. Mr. Wolworth paid the debt.

ONLY FINAL, CONCLUSIVE VICTORY, THE PRICE OF PEACE

David Marshall Mason, Liberal, regarded the utter crushing of Germany as a military impossibility. He expressed disappointment that the Premier's speech did not give some hope of an honourable and early termination of the war. On motion for adjournment, Mr. Mason raised the question concerning a report that Germany had made overtures for peace. London cable.

Who is this David Marshall Mason, member of the British Parliament who doubts the ability of his country to fight the war to a successful conclusion, to the only conclusion that will give it protection for its existence and confirmation of its honour? Who is he that would leave his country cry quits when the enemy is yet unbeaten, when the wrongs he has committed against it and against humanity are unavenged?

David Marshall Mason calls himself a Liberal. There is a word of equal strength but with two t's instead of two l's in it that describes him better. But whatever he is, he is not a Liberal. The Liberal party stands for freedom of the person and of the nation and the backbone of its policy has never been more thoroughly upheld and vindicated than in this war. David Marshall Mason would sell the freedom of his countrymen and of his country, together with the freedom of the men of other countries, for the sake of early "peace," because to accept peace now on the terms of the enemy would be to submit civilization to the plea-ure of Germany.

Mason wants a more definite declaration of the British government's policy. Premier Asquith enunciated that policy as clearly and definitely as it could be enunciated when he said that the war must be carried on to a final and conclusive victory. This was the policy of Britain thirteen and a half months ago and it is the policy yet. There has been nothing to warrant any departure from it. Even chicken-hearted David Marshall Masons must see that such a conclusion is as much and more within our reach now as it was a year ago. It is true that the price has been greater than some of us thought it would be, but if the price is greater, the need has been multiplied through the savagery committed by Germany.

The British nation gave its word to Belgium that it would fulfill the terms of its treaty guaranteeing the sovereignty of that country. Mason would have that solemn pledge broken now, after tens of thousands of British soldiers have lain down their lives in support of it and after the enemy has shown that the wrongs he committed against Belgium and which we took up arms to avenge he is prepared to commit against every other nation within his reach.

Lord Robert Cecil replied to Mason that the enemy had made no peace overtures to Britain, and the reason why Germany has not made them is because she realizes the truth of the under secretary's further statement—that he could not imagine any being made at the present time which would be acceptable to the allies. Germany knows that there are no peace proposals she could make which would be acceptable except those which would mean for her as complete a defeat as she would meet in continuing the war. And she is not going to weaken her case by foolish overtures.

The British Empire has no room for men like David Marshall Mason, who express before the world doubt as to the ability of their country to succeed in the struggle she has undertaken, who think that she must submit to the terms of barbarian Prussia. Mr. Mason is not only not a Liberal. He is not a Britisher.—Ottawa Free Press.

CZAR'S MOTHER HATES FOE.

Tells Red Cross President She Always Distrusted Germans.

PARIS, Sept. 16—The Stampa of Turin gives an interesting account of a conversation which the lady President of the Polish Red Cross Society had with the Empress Dowager of Russia. The Empress said:

"Oh! How I hate those Germans! I am a Dane, and from the day they took Schleswig-Holstein I have hated them, and for fifty years I had to wear a mask at court.

"Russia has been too confident in all those Prussian emigrants to whom the Empire has accorded favours and high positions. A German even, though every kindness be shown to him, remains always German. I often said so when Czar Alexander was alive, but he would not believe me. One man only foresaw this terrible Germanic aggression. It was the late King Edward VII., who was a great monarch.

"Do you know that when I was taken by surprise by the outbreak of the war as I was crossing Germany, the Berlin people made specially hostile manifestations, when my train passed, by calling out 'Russian pigs. They are a British people.'

Here are the impressions of the same lady about the Czar's mother.

"The Empress's look is far away, profound, sad, and mystical. It is some time before she speaks. She expresses herself in French with a strong English accent. She says:

"You come from Warsaw, Warsaw which is now German. Mon dieu, what a war. What a deluge of blood. That is all. The audience is finished. The Lady-in-Waiting gives me a sign and as I leave I notice that the eyes of the Czarina are full of tears."

A CEY CLEVER YIN.

A Fife coast tradesman retired recently and invested a portion of his savings in the acquisition of a small inland estate. Within the privacy of his grounds he revelled in being early astir on the fine summer mornings. Attired in a coat and hat which had seen better days, it was not an uncommon practice for him, hoe in hand, to work industriously on a turnip patch shortly after daybreak.

The other evening he made his first visit to a village osterly, to the patrons of which he was obviously unknown, for there was no attempt to "stage-whisper." The following conversation he overheard in the bar between "mine host" and a customer:

Patron: "That man, wha's taen, (mentioning the name of the former tradesman's estate) maun be a gey clever yin."

Mine Host: "Hoo dae ye mak' that out?"

Patron: "Did ye no' hear? He's got a 'tattie bogle' that he's trained tae thin neeps."

The London Caledonians, and Association football generally, have sustained a great loss by the death of Mr. T. G. Gibbons, which occurred in Scotland recently. "Tommy," as he was familiarly known to all football associates, had been in ill-health for some time past, and went to Scotland in the home of effecting a recovery.

The right time to reach the members of the family is when they are at home, and the right way to reach them is through the advertising columns of the paper that goes into the homes. There are other methods of advertising that enjoy a certain transitory popularity, because they are new or novel, but the oldest, wisest and most successful advertisers tie their faith to the home newspaper. When people are away from their homes, there are a thousand things to divert their attention, but an advertisement read in the quiet of the family circle will be read and remembered.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WAS IT A DREAM?

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

I am a commercial traveler. I did not in my youth receive much education and am lamentably ignorant of American history. These things I mention because they bear upon the experience I am about to relate. Never having heard or read of the characters I shall mention, it is impossible that I should have conjured them up from memory.

One autumn I left my home for a tour in the middle west. Reaching Pittsburgh, I made it a starting point for visiting Ohio river towns between it and Cincinnati. The Ohio, which the early French settlers named La Belle Riviere (Beautiful river), afforded such attractive scenery that at Marietta I left regular modes of travel, hired a rowboat and, putting my baggage in it, principally a trunk full of samples, drifted—there was no need of pulling—down the river, intending to take in the principal towns by the way.

Shortly before nightfall I came to an island so beautiful that I was tempted to land and inspect it. Tying my boat to the point that formed its upper end, I made my way through underbrush and clearings. There was no one on this part of the island, and I was oppressed by a feeling of loneliness. Returning to my boat, I supped from the contents of a lunch basket I had bought for myself on the shore, wrapped myself in my blankets and turned in.

The night was chilly, and I failed to keep warm. Rising to walk about for a few minutes, looking southward I saw a large dwelling house, most of the windows of which were illuminated. I thought it strange that I had not seen it during my walk at nightfall. Hoping to secure a warm bed, I went to the house, which was perhaps a quarter of a mile distant. As I approached I saw that it was of colonial build, with a pair of wings. Before it was a lawn and behind it were trees.

Knocking, I was admitted by an old darky, and on my asking if I could get a lodging for the night he called his mistress, who came out into the spacious hall. She was a pleasant looking lady about thirty years old and of courtly manners. When I asked her if I could be accommodated for the night she replied with the accent of an Irish lady of high degree that I would be welcome to the best her home afforded and invited me into the living room.

I was struck at once with the furniture, which had either been there for a hundred years or had been purchased from some dealer in curios. There was a large fireplace in the room, in which burned a cheerful blaze to take off the chill autumn air. The lady left me to order some refreshment, and, all being still, I could hear voices in an adjoining room separated by a thin partition. One was the voice of the lady who had left me, the other that of a man with the same inflection—an Irish gentleman.

"I fear," he said, "that the colonel is about to lead us all into a wild scheme."

"It can be no more visionary than our coming across an ocean to build a home on this desolate island. For my part I have great confidence in the man and his scheme. I believe he will be able to carry it through successfully, and we shall be very rich."

"It is you, my dear," replied the man, "who have been infatuated by this man who they say can win any woman. I am engaged in a scheme with one whom I have never seen, but who has won you to it and through you me. Suppose some of the persons he has taken into his confidence"—

I heard no more then. Whether I dozed in the interim I don't know, but presently I heard voices again, one the Irishman, the other a man who spoke in melodious tones.

"We must give out that the land speculation is our real purpose," said the latter, "and offer a hundred acres to each and all of our adherents."

"But suppose there is no war with Spain?" suggested the Irishman.

"We must bring on a war. The general"—

Again there was an interim or a slumber from which I was awakened by a crash. Starting up, I went into the hall in time to see that men with muskets, having broken down the front door, were pushing into the house. Some children at the head of the main staircase were looking down in terror. Then followed a scene of destruction that I shall never forget. The soldiers—for such they seemed to be—were roaring about the house, most of them drunk and all helping themselves to what they wanted. Then suddenly the Irish lady appeared and was protesting, when suddenly I found myself lying on the ground shivering. It was coming dawn, and I saw that I was amid a ruin, the only surviving thing being a well house.

Returning to my boat, I dropped down the river and at the first landing place told my strange experience to a man to whom I sold a bill of goods.

"Great heavens!" he exclaimed. "You must have slept on Blennerhassett's island."

"What's Blennerhassett's island?"

"The place where Aaron Burr's conspiracy of 1806 was hatched. You have experienced or dreamed scenes that were enacted more than a hundred years ago. You have seen "Blanny," as they called him in those days, his wife and children, and Aaron Burr himself."

THE BRITISH LION

Oh, the British Lion is a noble scion,
And proud in his conscious might,
The terror of those he has made his foes
For he ever defends the right.
And yet so mild that a timid child
May approach him and need not quail,
May pat him on the crown and stroke him down,
But beware how you tread on his tail.
Oh, beware, beware, beware,
Oh, beware how you tread on his tail.

'Twill much require to rouse his ire,
For he's fond of a quiet snooze;
No idle vaunt or threat or taunt
Will provoke him his strength to use.
No bliss he thinks like forty winks,
Yet his vigilance ne'er doth fail.
For he sleeps with only one eyelid shut,
So beware how you treadon his tail.

His foes at best are knaves confessed
Whose malice from envy springs,
And it oft betides his giant sides
They pierce with wasp-gnat-like stings.
But he merely yawns, for the thought ne'er dawns
Such pigmies to assail;
Till, grown more bold his sloth to behold,
They venture to tread on his tail.

Till, grown more bold such sloth to behold,
They venture to tread on his tail.
Then up he bounds and his roar resounds
As he lashes each foaming side;
His warlike breath hurls fire and death
And scatters them far and wide.
And great and small down, down they fall
'Neath the storm of his iron hail;
And repent to their cost when all is lost
That they trod on the Lion's tail.
And repent to their cost when all is lost
That they trod on the Lion's tail.

NO PRO-GERMANS THERE

Universities of United States Decided For the Allies

John M. Dent, the famous publisher of educational and classical works, has visited fourteen or fifteen of the leading State and other universities of the United States. He found that the professors of literature and history were much more ready to talk about the latest aspect of the great war than they were to discuss futures in books. One professor in a leading eastern university wrote him on arrival: "You'll find it difficult to make us talk about books. We are all absorbed in the war. You will find us more pro-British than the British themselves." The publisher continued. "Again, in Wisconsin I found the sentiment overwhelmingly toward a firm stand against the attempt at domination by Germany. The same thing obtained in California. Everywhere I found German militarism condemned. All believed in ideals Great Britain is fighting for. Personally, I do not think we have ever done full justice to the attitude of the Republic, seeing her delicate position in this war. The universities are with England and the allies almost without exception. Only in one case did I meet with a university man who called himself 'pro-German.' What pleased me most was that all this conglomeration of opinion was deliberately thought out after counting the cost and considering all the various questions. Another interesting point is that quite the majority of professors go to Germany to get their Ph.D., and become more or less imbued with German life and influenced by friendly treatment and the sympathy they receive in so many parts of Germany."

Inspection of Factories and Shops.

The twenty-seventh annual report of the Factories Inspection Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture has been issued. It shows that 10,059 inspections of factories and shops were made during the year in 410 cities, towns, and villages. The number of accidents reported are 1,370, of which 52 were fatal.

Regulations regarding specifications for fire escapes are given, well illustrated, together with a most practical article on how to lessen the dangers. There are also helpful suggestions regarding ventilation and general sanitation, guarding of machinery, child labor, seats for females in shops, and wearing of girls' hair in mills and factories. Results are also given of the inspection of bake shops, canning factories, and evaporators. Special emphasis is placed upon eye protection in certain occupations. In fact, "safety first" is urged upon every possible occasion. A most suggestive feature of the report is a series of danger signs in which warnings are given in nearly every foreign language.

Enchanted Valparaiso.

The night view of Valparaiso from the balconies of the cliff dwellers is one of the great sights of the world. The vast sickle of the shore lit for nearly 300,000 people, the scores of ocean vessels lying at anchor, the harbor lights, the glowing avenues below, from which rises mellowed the roar of nocturnal traffic; the rippling water under the moonlight, and the far horizon of the illimitable Pacific produce an effect of enchantment.

Ages of Birds.

The average ages of some of the best known birds are: Blackbird, 12 years; blackcap, 15; canary, 24; crane, 24; crow, 100; eagle, 100; fowl, common, 10; goldfinch, 15; goose, 50; heron, 59; lark, 13; linnet, 23; nightingale, 18; parrot, 60; partridge, 15; peacock, 24; pelican, 50; pheasant, 15; pigeon, 20; raven, 100; robin, 12; skylark, 30; sparrow hawk, 40; swan, 100; thrush, 10; wren, 3.—London Globe.

HISTORIC HALL PASSES

TORONTO TO SELL LANDMARK OF OLD YORKVILLE.

St. Paul's Hall Has a Remarkable Coat of Arms to Perpetuate the Memory of the First Council—Beaver Surmounts Five Panels, Each Symbolizing the Occupation of One of the Councillors.

It is now probable that the City of Toronto will sell the property on Yonge street, a short distance north of Bloor street, known as St. Paul's Hall.

St. Paul's Hall came into the possession of the city on the annexation of the old village of Yorkville in 1883. It was erected in 1860 by the Yorkville Council, incorporated six or seven years before. Two smaller buildings, one to the north, occupied for years as a hotel, and one to the south, used ever since its erection as a post-office, were originally wings to the town hall. The lock-up and police station occupied apartments on the ground floor, the municipal offices and Council chamber were on the floor above, while a large assembly room took up the greater part of the building, and was designed for use for public meetings and functions of a general character.

Upon the absorption of Yorkville by the city the use of the building for municipal purposes was no longer required.

From 1884 until 1907 the Public Library used the old Council chamber for the Yorkville branch, and the ground floor was for some years used as a stable for horses and car barns by the old Toronto Street Railway Company previous to the acquisition of the franchise by the present company in 1891, and the installation of the trolley system. In recent years a portion of the building has been occupied as No. 5 Police Station, and apart from its use for a few days in each year by a sub-collector of taxes, the hall has been of little value to the citizens other than for an occasional public meeting or party convention which might be held in the big, cheerless assembly here during a municipal or political campaign. During the past few months the 12th York Rangers have been using the hall as regimental headquarters.

An Interesting Relic.

But the most interesting thing about the building, which is not altogether devoid of architectural pretensions, is the singular coat-of-arms which surmounts the large circular window high up in the gable of the front elevation. This unique armorial shield, made of durable stone, and of a size to be easily distinguished from the street, was designed to perpetuate the memory and work of the first Council of the village of Yorkville. The device consists of a shield of arms divided into five panels and crowned by a Canadian beaver. On each of the five panels are symbols representing the name and occupation of each of the five municipal councillors of the day. A beer barrell above the letter S keeps fresh the memory of John Severn, the brewer, whose place of business was just across the street from the town hall; a brick mould with the letter A stands for Thomas Atkinson, a brickmaker; an anvil with a W recalls James Wallis, the blacksmith; a jack-plane with D below was for James Dobson, the carpenter, who for many years was postmaster in the south wing of the building, and whose daughter is the present postmistress; while the centre panel of honor contained a representation of a sheep's head, with the letter H, in memory of Peter Hutty, a butcher, and first reeve of Yorkville 60 years ago.

With the prospective sale of the property it is likely that the old building will soon give place to a modern structure of greater commercial value to a busy thoroughfare; but some of those who are interested in the marking of places of interest in the city's history venture to hope that the purchasers will see that in the new building that will take its place, some position may be found in the front wall to preserve this unusual and interesting memorial of historic significance and personal vanity. An explanatory tablet might also be attached to it, recalling its origin and its significance.

In Quebec a stone emblem, known as Le Chien d'Or, of local historic interest, has been preserved in the wall of the post-office building, which stands on the site of the original place of business, where the Golden Dog for so long occupied an ominous place over the doorway of a French merchant. In like manner the old stone arms of Yorkville should be preserved as an object of historic interest.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT ST. JOHN'S

Preacher for the Occasion Was Rev. C. F. Clark, of Bobcaygeon —Church Suitably Decorated

The Rev. C. F. Clark of Bobcaygeon was the preacher at the harvest festival service that was held last evening at St. John's Church. Rev. Canon Davidson, Rector of St. John's Church, Rev. R. B. Gunne, Rector of All Saints' Church and the Rev. Mr. Price, Rector of St. George's Church assisted in the service which was most fitting, and found many acquiescence in the hearts of all members of the congregation. The Church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with flowers and fruits of the field. The music by the Choir was of a special nature and added much to the appropriateness of the service.

Spirit of Self-Sacrifice.

St. Mark, 6:31. And He said unto them, come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while, for there were many coming and going and they had no leisure so much as to eat. These were the words upon which the Rev. Mr. Clark based his remarks.

At the outset the speaker announced his intention of delivering a practical talk in lieu of a sermon. He exhorted his hearers to open their hearts to the teachings of the Gospel and commended to them the spirit exemplified by Christ, when He took compassion on the multitude. He commented upon the spirit of self-sacrifice manifest in the actions of Christ and His disciples. The great aim of many people in life is happiness, and while the thoughtless sought for it in every avenue of human activity, they failed to achieve any appreciable or satisfying result until they first sought and established in their own hearts, the Kingdom of God. This was one of the first great qualifications to happiness.

NORWOOD MAN SERIOUSLY INJURED

Ribs Were Dislocated--Was Trampled on by a Couple of Steers

NORWOOD, Sept. 17.—Mr. Wm. Rogers, Belmont road, was seriously hurt by being trampled on by a couple of steers which he was feeding. Dr. Sutton was hastily summoned to attend to Mr. Rogers and found his chest much injured. Examination showed the ribs to be shoved away from the breast.

Mr. Rogers has been particularly unfortunate, having suffered a serious attack of typhoid fever in the spring. He had recovered nicely and some time ago was able to resume his work in his butcher shop and as caretaker of the Methodist church.

Drainage System, With Wooden Gratings Has Been Installed

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A tour of the Canadian trenches just concluded by a newspaper correspondent, convinced him that the officers are much more solicitous for the safety of their men than are the men themselves. The Brigadier General who was conducting the visiting pressmen around his lines several times found occasion to rebuke his men for showing their heads above the parapets, telling them not to expose themselves needlessly.

Leaving British headquarters at an early hour on Sunday morning the pressmen motored to the Canadian headquarters, where they were cordially received by General Alderson, after which the party divided up to explore different lines of trenches.

Departing from their frequent habit of Sunday bombardments, the enemy remained quiet, and the soldiers encountered in the trenches all declared that it was the quietest day which they had experienced for some time. The snipers were keeping up the game, however, and the visitors had to be on guard against their attentions.

Drainage System Installed.

The trenches occupied by the Canadians were in good condition, many improvements having been effected, such as the installation of a drainage system and the use of wooden gratings, which will do much to obviate water logged feet and rheumatic troubles in the coming winter. It was also noted that the men received good food, the trenches having facilities for cooking. The men were in splendid spirits.

The party were the guests at dinner of the Brigadier General. Under the starlit sky a visit was made to a neighbouring hill, on which the buildings have been shelled by the Germans until the walls only are left. In a churchyard not far off is the grave of Sergt. Major Collins, of Strathcona's Horse, who was killed by a high explosive when he ran back to get his glasses.

Colonel J. Lessard is sick in the hospital.

RURAL SCHOOL FAIR AT WESTWOOD

Was a Success in Every Way--The Assitant Deputy Minister of Agriculture Present

NORWOOD, Sept. 17.—The first rural school fair in Peterborough County this year was held at Westwood, and proved a splendid success. Fine weather, good exhibits, and an interesting programme left nothing to be desired in the way of enjoyment for the six hundred adults and children in attendance.

The scholars were honoured by having at their fair the Asst. Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Province, Mr. C. C. Bailey, who heartily entered into the afternoon's proceedings. The local member, Mr. James Thompson, of Havelock, showed his interest in the welfare of the younger generation of his constituency by taking in the fair. A number of the clergy and other prominent men of the district were also in attendance.

Eight schools were included in the district covered by the fair, viz: No. 1 Asphodel, Westwood; No. 4 Separate; No. 5, Ennis; No. 6 Duckworth; No. 12, Birdsalls; No. 6, Dummer, South; Dummer, No. 1, Otonabee; Villiers; No. 6, O'Grady.

In addition to the large number of prizes was Westwest, which will receive the silver cup donated by Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P. The teacher in charge of Westwood school is Miss Mason.

WAR TAKES HUSBAND, HOME AND THEN SON

Bereaved Widow Comes to America to Pass Declining Days to Find Her Boy Insane.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Sept. 16.—When the war started in Europe Mrs. Nancy Brooks, seventy-two years old, lost her husband and her home in the British army Zeppelin attacks subsequently destroyed her home in England. She then travelled across the ocean and a continent to pass her declining days with her son, who was last heard of on a ranch here.

She found him recently in a cell in the Patton State Hospital. The shock of his father's death and the refusal of the recruiting officers at Vancouver, B.C., to permit him to join the colours with the Canadian contingent had unbalanced his mind.

Politicians Oppose French Liquor Reform, But Public Acquiesces

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Absinthe is dying hard in France. Artificial drinks resemble it in colour and flavour are obtainable in spite of the vigilance of the authorities, and it is even asserted that stocks of the real beverage on hand at the date of the prohibition and paid for by the government are finding their way to the consumer. Numerous new decoctions have also been put on the market to replace it. The traffic is encouraged by an unlooked for resistance to anti-alcoholic legislation in Parliament.

The wine shop plays in French politics a role similar to that of the American saloon, hence the reluctance of the deputies to follow the military authorities in the radical measures they have taken.

Pressure was brought to bear upon the press and upon Parliament by the National Union of Wholesale and Retail Wine and Liquor Dealers, who threatened to withdraw advertisements from the newspapers and political support from the deputies unless the anti-liquor campaign was stopped.

Mr. Joseph Reinach, one of the leading temperance advocates, declares that it will be impossible to abrogate the abolition of absinthe. On the other hand some radicals and radical socialists show a disposition to oppose the government in the reforms proposed. The proposition to terminate the regime of martial law in the rear of the field operations originated with them.

INTERNED GERMAN SAILORS FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE IN NORWAY

The Swedish newspapers describe an attempted wholesale escape from the German auxiliary cruiser Berlin, which has been interned at Trondhjem, Norway, since last November. The Berlin, a North German Lloyd steamship, was requisitioned by the German government in the early days of the war and it is supposed was detailed to mine laying service in the North Sea. The vessel made Trondhjem her base and was finally compelled to intern when the British patrols made further expeditions in the North Sea too risky.

Between three and four o'clock on the morning of August 12 twenty-five men of the Berlin's crew jumped overboard and tried to swim ashore. They were discovered by the harbour guards and boats were sent out, which picked up a few of the men, while others swam back to their vessel. The Norwegian authorities started an investigation and found that eight of the number concerned in the plot to escape had not been accounted for. At the hearing it also was learned that the harbour guards had fired on the escaping men and it was considered likely that some of the latter had been struck by bullets and had perished. It is not certain, however, that all of the missing met this fate. For which reason a thorough search of the city and its surroundings was instituted. The fleeing men were rude wherries, boats to the water. Underneath each of them had a bundle of clothes strapped to his back. Some were also provided with money, a few having several hundreds of dollars in their possession. It is suspected that sympathizers on shore had a hand in the attempt and that some of the missing men now are being kept in hiding until an opportunity for their complete escape may offer itself.

JOHNSTON MUST GIVE UP SINGLES, SAY PHYSICIAN

He will be permitted to take part in the less strenuous doubles.

YOUNG FRENCH RECRUITS CALLED TO THE COLOURS

PARIS, Sept. 17.—Parliament on reassembling yesterday will have to consider, among various important measures, one calling to the colours a contingent of 40,000 young men who in time of peace would begin military service in 1917. They are eighteen and nineteen years old.

The bill will be presented in the name of President Poincare. A message written by Minister of War Millerand and read [illegible] says the necessity for the measure arises from the [illegible] of Poland [illegible] Turkey [illegible] Germany [illegible] Italy [illegible] to be sent to Tripoli to reinforce the armies [illegible] of the autumn. It appears [illegible] to be necessary to [illegible] part in the event of the need of [illegible] 1917 for next autumn [illegible] time for the necessary [illegible] to be called to the colors in November.

[illegible] also announces the Government's intention to propose at the next session [illegible] which under the [illegible] would be automatically [illegible] from obligation to serve. These are men of 48 years of age. They have not yet been called out.

Mr. F. Wise donated the first prize of $4.00 for this last collection of cut flowers.

A Grand Display.

The success of the Flower Show may be attributed to the attention it has received during recent years. Only after patient efforts have the directors been able to focus the interest of flower lovers, and particularly producers, upon this pleasing feature. The flower tent is located just inside the east entrance and every visitor to the Fair should see this year's display. Naturally, the professional florists have contributed the most elaborate exhibits, and the judge must have had considerable difficulty in deciding the winners. Jordan Bros., the Peterborough Floral Co. and Mr. F. Wise of the Little Lake Cemetery Co. contributed the main group arrangements of greenhouse plants. They occupy the central section of the tent and the fact that they are build up on the green sward lends a natural touch, the effect of which enhances the triple display. Plants excellent was the comment of Mr. Collins in regard to the Jordan Bros.' exhibit, which was awarded first prize of these groups.

A delightfully arranged exhibit is the Peterborough Floral Company's prize winners for the best arranged table. Mr. Frank Wise has a splendid showing of fuchias, he also led easily in geraniums and begonias. J. H. Callander had the gladioli, cactus and coxcombs all to himself.

It was remarked that the amateur exhibitors should have been more numerous. T. O. Arnott had a fine exhibit of asters, and Mrs. Hounsell's horticultural hobby was illustrated in her displays. Mrs. Brock of Millbrook and Miss Finnemore of Stewart's Hall, were other exhibitors.

TORONTO WALL PAPER STOCK PURCHASED BY C. B. ROUTLEY.

The large wall paper stock of The V. F. Ashdown Co. Ltd., 744 Yonge street, Toronto, which recently went into liquidation, has been bought by C. B. Routley, head of the well-known Queen street west wall paper store. Omens Foretold The Conflict

Of course the greater part of mankind has long since outgrown the superstitious belief that wars, epidemics and calamities are always overshadowed by heavenly omens, such as comets, eclipses and so forth. It is, however, interesting to note that the present war was preceded by a number of phenomena which in past ages would have made everybody sure that some great catastrophe was at hand.

The total eclipse of the sun of August 21, 1914, which was visible in Europe and Asia.

Delevan's "Naked Eye" comet, known as the war comet, discovered at the close of 1913, and destined to remain visible for five years. This might be taken by the superstitious to augur seven years of war.

A transit of Mercury on November 7, 1914.

The seeing of what was believed to be a tri-coloured star, but which astronomers declared was only an optical illusion, much exaggerated by popular imagination.

Hindenburg's Army Stopped

LONDON, Sept. 16—Field Marshal von Hindenburg's drive towards the Dvinsk-Vilna railway is not progressing as fast as his previous enterprises of a similar kind have done, and except at one or two points about midway between these towns, where his cavalry have cut the railway, he is still being stubbornly opposed by the Russians, who are making vigorous counter-attacks.

Von Hindenburg, however, has reached a point west of the bridgehead across from the town of Dvinsk, and is preparing to attack that fortified area.

Along the rest of the line the German advance has also slowed up, while in Galicia the Russians are still attacking, and, according to unofficial reports from Bucharest and other points, the Austro-German armies are falling back across the Dniester River.

Just north of the Galician border the Russians are on the offensive, and are making an attempt to recapture the fortress of Lubno, which the Austrians took last week.

This offensive in the south, it is believed, will have an effect on the rest of the front, as reinforcements must soon be sent there, or the Teutonic allies will run the danger of being outflanked.

THE RETORT CUTTING.—Jones was recently sent by his employer to collect an account from Smith, notorious for his slackness in making payments. After several vain attempts to obtain a settlement Jones remarked, "Well, at least let me know on what date I may expect payment, Smith replied. "Do you take me for a prophet?" No responded John. "Up to the present I have always regarded you as a loss."

'ROTTEN TO BE A PRINCE" IN WAR, SAYS HEIR TO THE BRITISH THRONE

Refusal of Sir John French to Permit Him to Expose Himself in First Line Trenches Brings Lament From the Prince of Wales—Has Long Chat With Michael O'Leary, V.C.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—One of the many stories told about the Prince of Wales at the front is being related in London. It seems that the Prince continually is imploring Sir John French to permit him to go into the first line of trenches, but the wise Field Marshal, knowing how much depends on the preservation of the life of the heir to the throne, has refused all requests.

During the height of the fighting of Festubert the Prince again pleaded with the Field Marshal to permit him to join the fighters, and when the answer was a courteous "No sir," the heir apparent retired with gloomy face to the society of his comrades on the staff and said, when they chaffed him over his failure:

"Oh, it's all right for you fellows to have your joke, but I tell you it is rotten to be a prince."

Although the Prince is not permitted to expose himself needlessly, it must not be thought that he has not been under fire. As a matter of fact he has heard the "Jack Johnsons" whistling close at hand and has been near enough to exploding shells to make those who keep an eye on him rather nervous. In addition, he has been engaged on some rather hadardous missions, acquitting himself so well that silent Sir John referred to him as a gallant soldier. There is no doubt that the Prince is a glutton for work, and he lets no opportunity escape to "do his bit" for king and country.

When he first was attached to the Grenadier Guards his comrades didn't enthuse him very much, as there was a feeling that his association with the regimefit would keep it out of the danger zone, and when he finally induced "K. of K." to permit him to join the expeditionary force, "somewhere in France," he speedily burst into the officers' quarters with the joyful news, whereupon a young Marquis, intimate friend and school fellow, shouted:

"Bully for you, Eddie; now we'll all get a chance to smash the Germans!"

After the redoubtable Michael O'Leary accomplished the remarkable feat which made him a "V. C." he was presented to the Prince, "Mike" and the Prince had a long chat which the Prince seemed thoroughly to enjoy and when "Mike" rejoined his comrades he said:

"Sure and it's a great little boy he is, and, Prince, or no Prince, there isn't a finer gentleman in all Ireland."

Speaking of O'Leary reminds me of a witty retort to a fellow countryman who came to cheer him off to the front after he had been feted and honized in London until the trenches appealed to him as a haven of rest.

"Sure, even when I went to mass this morning," said Michael, "they wouldn't let me alone, and I'm taking back enough rosaries to keep a whole company praying when they aren't killing Germans."

"Begorra, then, 'Mike' it's a proud man ye should be," interjected a young fellow, who loudly announced that he came from Macroom, "and I'd threasure one of your buttons as a keepsake."

"Is it one button only you're wanting, and you from Cork?" 'Mike' replied. "Sure, if ye'll just cross the road a bit there's a fine looking Irish sergeant there who'll give you a coatful of buttons for the asking, and you'd look mighty fine in khaki, my lad."

During the cheers that followed this smart answer the button hunter disappeared. Michael stepped into his compartment in the train and a moment later was being whirled toward the fighting lines.

A SERMON TO HIS HEIRS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 17.—A sermon to his heirs is a part of the will of James H. Allen, which was filed here and disposes of a $3,000,000 estate. The estate goes to the widow and five children.

The will contains these sentences:

"I had intended to make some special bequests, but will not do so as I have a promise from each one of my children to use one-half of the property received from my estate for charitable and Christian work, and that with the remaining one-half they promise to try to make or earn other property to be used for good Christian purposes.

"All that we have belongs to the Lord. It is the Lord's property and he will hold us to a strict account for the way we use it.

"The devil is smarter than all mankind put together, and will always lead us astray if left to our weak selves, so our only hope is in the Lord."

KIEV IN NO DANGER.

Authorities Give Assurance—Crops to be Sown as Usual.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 17 — Russian military successes in the southwest are exerting a reassuring effect in Kiev. General Ivanoff has ordered land owners and peasants to sow grain as usual. The duma deputies from Kiev have received assurance from Minister of War Polivanoff that Kiev and the surrounding districts are in no danger and that there is no reason for their evacuation.

General Beliueff, Assistant Minister of War, is quoted as declaring that the factories at Kiev must continue to work at full speed. The Ministry of Finance has taken measures to secure the financial position of the southwestern territory.

The Canadian Government estimate of the wheat crop is from 270,000,000 to 280,000,000 bushels. That is almost double the short yield of last year, which amounted to about 146,000,000 bushels. Other crops are in proportion.

Great Display Of Horses And Some Splendid Attractions At The Fair

ber that the directors are handicapped by the lack of facilities on the local grounds. This is an added difficulty in times such as these. Hence, they deserve every credit for whatever success is achieved, and certainly this year's fair is a success in every department. The financial side of the "Ex" will be in doubt until the last admission has been paid to-morrow. After that Mr. Felix Brownscombe will begin to total the receipts.

PROMINENT EXHIBITS

Particularly conspicuous this year was the large number of special exhibits made by our enterprising manufacturers and merchants. It was one of the gratifying features of "Patriotic Year." Every available space in the Main Building was taken up, and throughout the grounds varied exhibits were to be found with attractive and instructive displays. The spirit evinced by our local merchants and manufacturers was not only a source of encouragement to the Directors, but an evidence that war times had not discouraged business men, and that they were alive to the advertising advantages of the Fair.

JORDAN BROS.' FLORAL PRIZES.

"The flower show at the Fair is alone well worth the price of admission," is the expression of nearly every visitor to the Peterborough Industrial. It is equally true that the floral contributions of Jordan Bros., the old established city florists, are entitled to sharing in the encomiums of praise and their well earned honours from the judges.

Perhaps in no other single department of the Fair does there appear so striking an advance in the displays as in the Horticultural Section this year. Inside a mammoth new tent, lovers of flowers were crowded, feasting their eyes on the banks and bowers of blooming beauty, filled with the richest floral specimens of the season. "Where there's a will, there's a way" was true of the floral effects produced by the generous accommodation provided, and the skill of the professional gardeners by the artistic effects produced.

Jordan Bros.' greenhouses were strongly represented, and the wealth of plant and bloom of their own home-grown specimens won for them a conspicuous string of red and blue prize tickets.

FROM THE GREENHOUSES OF PETERBOROUGH FLORAL CO.

Among the many blooms and blossoms shown in the floral tent, many of the best specimens were from the greenhouses of The Peterborough Floral Co., 436-438 Water Street. The quality and productiveness and the floral loveliness of their exhibits, as well as the arrangement and grouping of these were excellent. The profusion of colour, blending with the foliage and fern displays, was a rare treat for the admiring visitors. It was evident that the skill of the professional gardener had been busy for many months in bringing these floral gems to the condition which so well repaid the trouble. The judge commended the firm highly for their work.

This firm took 2nd prize for the handsome circle group of greenhouse plants; 2nd prize for collection of geraniums; 1st prize for best floral design, a standing wreath; 2nd prize for floral basket; and 1st prize for best decorated supper table, laid out with bouquets and boutonnieres.

Special credit is due to Mr. Cable, the firm's gardener, for the fine display of plants and floral decorations, and to Miss A. Dean for her artistic handiwork of the floral wreath and supper table decorations.

THE FORD CAR "ON THE JOB."

Motorists have only to visit the exhibit on the Fair grounds, at the western entrance, made by Mr. Jos. J. Duffus, the local representative of the Ford Motor Co., to see the most up-to-date models of Ford cars. The local dealer had secured a splendid location in the front row leading into the grounds for his display, where he was seldom without a crowd of interested enquirers.

It cannot be denied that the Ford car has long held claims to be recognized as holding the first place among low-priced cars in both the Canadian and American markets. The Ford factories in Canada and Amer a have been taxed to the limit to keep up the steady demand for their cars. And yet, notwithstanding this demand, one of the striking features in this year's policy of the company, is that the prices of Ford cars in Canada have actually been further reduced by $60. The Runabout is now only $440; the Touring Car $540. It is evident the company is striving to make the sturdy Ford the motor car of Canada. That they are succeeding is attested by the fact that when this announcement was made more than 45,000 Fords had been sold in the Dominion. Surely this is convincing as to the merit of the car.

For, commercial or professional use, or for pleasure alone, the Canadian Ford is a winner. The number of Ford cars seen in every nook and corner of Canada is evidence that this is no idle statement, but a fact proved beyond chance of argument. During the spring months this year, the demand for Ford cars was much greater than could be supplied. So if you would be sure of getting your car, get it now. Dont wait for the spring rush.

One Ford owner gives his testimonial in these words: "I have two Fords because they seem perfectly adapted to their purpose and suited to my needs. The Runabout I use, largely for business. The Touring car my wife uses. There is never a time when either of us has to 'give up to the other. If I had bought a big heavy car I would get neither as much nor as good service as I get from my Fords. And I would probably have saddled myself, like Sinbad, with an 'old man of the sea,' possessed of an insatiable appetite for gasoline and oil and tires. The only insatiable appetite I want in a motor car is an appetite for mileage, and my Fords have that."

The Duffus garage, 195 Simcoe street, is a busy centre for motorists day-in-and-day-out all the year round, and from "Joe" down everyone is "on the job."

NEW MACHINES SHOWN BY THE PETER HAMILTON CO.

The well-known and long established Peterborough firm of agricultural machinery makers, the Peter Hamilton Co., made an exhibit of their two latest introductions in farm implements which was the centre of an interested crowd of farmers who were in this way given an opportunity to inspect the machines in operation.

One of them was their new Stiff-tooth Cultivator, which is equipped with four different widths of teeth, from 2 to 10 inches each, and adapted for use at different stages of soil conditions and weediness. One ever operates the whole of the teeth and a second levels the machine so that whether dry or wet the machine can handle the land properly.

The second machine is the firm's Silo Cutter and Blower. This machine has a capacity of ten to twelve tons an hour, and the blower elevates the silo as high as fifty feet. The feed carriers are reversible and can be stopped and run backwards, if desired. The whole is mounted on trucks to facilitate its being moved quickly and easily. That the farmers appreciated the Peter Hamilton exhibit was easily seen by the interest they showed in it.

HANDSOME FURNISHINGS FROM RICHARD HALL & SON

One-fourth of the entire space in the centre aisles of the main building is occupied with a fine showing of home furnishings from the departments in Richard Hall and Son's, as well as attractive samples of pattern hats, fashionable Coats and Suits.

Their exhibit was admirably arranged and, of course, was the cynosure of all feminine eyes. Old furniture was also shown, which had been in use for 40 years, covered in the modern way by one of their expert upholsterers. An old kitchen chair saved from the furnace room, was renovated and recovered in a pretty chintz for a handy bed-room chair.

There were three fine Anglo-Persian rugs shown, exact reproductions of very old designs. Also some French velvets with chintz to match when used in carrying out certain desired styles of home decorations. Three casement windows were filled up and decorated with Autumn foliage, and in which were displayed samples of a handsome Gainsborough hat and a Wm. Penn sailor; also a ladies' highly fashionable military suit, which was much admired.

The featuring of something different and exclusive is one of the "ruling passions" of the Richard Hall and Son store. Especially is this to be seen in the home furnishing department, where the ingenuity of the Manager is strongly accentuated.

A staff writer on the "Dry Goods Review" made a special visit to Peterborough recently in order to interview Richard Hall and Son regarding the special featuring of their home furnishing department. The following are some of the impressions which he took away with him and which appear in the September issue of the Review:

A Department That is Growing.

"One of the stores in Canada which is succeeding and succeeding well along this line is that of Richard Hall & Son, Ltd., of Peterborough. The manager of this department has learned the secret of sales of drapery, and is developing it along lines that are resulting in a steady increase month by month and season by season in the turnover of this department.

"Just what can this department offer to its customers? The photograph shown here indicates something of the matching up and combination work that is being carried out. There are six windows in the department and on every one there is cretonne, or chintz, or some other drapery in connection with the curtain. Each one is carried out in a different design and in addition to these six several others are made up usually on a smaller scale in different parts of the room.

"Just as a sample of what is being done, take an old-fashioned mahogany couch which was picked up by the department a short time ago. It was re-covered and set up in the department and a card set up on it reading, "We do all kinds of upholstering." Draperies were thrown over it from time to time and the whole suggestion was carried out of a harmonizing combination that would adorn any room. This single piece of furniture brought forth a number of orders for upholstery work to the department.

A number of orders have been taken for this in various styles of drapery, and the sales were made simply because the customers saw the drapery used in a way that suggested a use to which it could be put in their own homes. This indeed is the main idea behind the success of the Drapery Department, that of suggesting some use that the customer can make of it in adorning her own home.

"When a lady comes in and says she wants to do up a certain room or do up a whole house, a member of the staff, usually the manager, visits her home in order to see what the surroundings are, the furniture, the paper, the lighting of the rooms, and so forth. He will then draw up a plan for her showing the style and colours she should use for this room and that one; will suggest a carpet to tone in with the wall-paper or her new drapery, or wall-paper to match the carpet which she does not intend to renew. If she has a corner she wishes fitted up he will make a sketch, or the same way with a window. He will then take her through the department in the store and show her various patterns and styles and shades and suggest those that would fit the various rooms. They would then go over with the drapery to the rug section, and match up a rug suitable for the drapery. If the store does not carry wall-paper, but this is attended to by the department by dealing with a local store.

More than that, the manager of the department is able to supply the lady with an estimate of the actual cost of everything that will go to make up the new decoration of the room, and in this way when she knows exactly what the room will look like and the cost, contracts are usually made without delay. It takes experience and considerable artistic ability to do this, but without possession of this the real development of a drapery department is very uphill work."

RUSSIA'S GREATEST ARSENAL HAS NOT BEEN DESTROYED

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Daily Chronicle says:

A London evening paper, followed haltingly by some other journals, has published a sensational Russian "revelation, the blowing up of the whole of the great works at Okhta, near Petrograd. Enormous headlines proclaimed that this deed committed by the Germans, was the "blow that crippled Russia," and that as the result of the destruction of Russia's "only arsenal," the Russian Woolwich, Russia was quite crippled."

The facts as ascertained by the Daily Chronicle are:

First—Okhta is not the only munition factory in Russia. It is one of the latest powder mills but there are seven or eight other works as big as that of Okhta.

Second—The explosion did not take place at Okhta but merely at a small factory devoted to the manufacture of mannite and T.N.T. at a village some miles from Okhta.

Third—It was a minor matter. Only a small quantity of explosive was destroyed. The damage was slight and easily repaired within a few weeks. The main factory and magazine was untouched.

Fourth—There is nothing to lead the authorities to believe the explosion anything more than one of the accidents that occasionally occur in powder works.

ST. VITUS' DANCE.

Hamilton, Ont.—"While I have not had occasion to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I have observed its good effects. My brother used it for St. Vitus' Dance. A neighbor recommended it and brother began taking it at the age of ten. He had tried different remedies but they did not help him permanently. We used 'Golden Medical Discovery' for about three months and he had no return of his trouble. He is nineteen and has been well since."—Miss Margaret Harrow, 227 Murray St., Hamilton, Ont.

A HUMAN MATCH FACTORY

The body contains phosphorous sufficient to make 485,000 matches. Phosphorous is one of fourteen elements composing the body—divided among bone, flesh, nervous system and other organs. The perfect health of body requires a perfect balance of the elements. These elements come from the food we eat—the stomach extracts and distributes them.

But if the stomach is deranged—the balance of health is destroyed and the blood does not carry the proper elements to the different organs, and there is blood trouble—nerve trouble—rheumatism—gout—heart trouble. Pain is the hungry cry of starved organs. Put the liver, stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition into condition of health. That is just what is done by Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has been so favorably known for nearly 50 years. It is now put up in tablet form, as well as liquid, and can be obtained of medicine dealers everywhere or by mail by sending 50 cents in 1c. stamps for trial box—address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills first put up nearly 50 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Much imitated but never equaled. Sugar-coated and easy to take as candy.

CZAR'S SECRET SERVICE MAN A GERMAN SPY

LONDON, September 17.—A prominent Russian who is here in connection with war contracts for his government revealed to-day the astounding fact that the man at the head of the Russian special investigation service entrusted with the work of discovering German spies in Russia was himself a German spy. This man had been known to the Russian court for years and only proof of the most indisputable nature led to his exposure. Then prompt action was taken. He was tried by court-martial and convicted of having betrayed the weak points of the Russian war preparations to the very Germans he was expected to arrest. His execution followed immediately.

The story according to the correspondent's informant, created a great scandal and further revelations are now expected.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

PHILLIES HAVE RESERVE STRENGTH FOR HARD FINISH

NEW YORK, Sept 15. It's a pretty good bet that the Phillies will represent the National League in the playing of the next world's series. With a lead of four games over Boston and five games over Brooklyn, and with the season ending in three weeks, it is not likely that Moran's men will be headed. One week ago the Phillies were only one game ahead of the Dodgers. There were cries the team was going to crack. But the dope was wrong. Since then Moran's men have won seven straight games, have increased their advantage and are playing stronger ball to-day than they did a month ago.

Stallings says the Braves will repeat. Robinson says the Dodgers will come through. But these two teams will have to do some fall playing if they want to land the bunting. Of the two, the Braves have an outside chance. They have been through the grind, play as good abroad as they do at home, while the Dodgers' big weakness this year has been the poor playing of the team while on the road.

The only way the Dodgers and the Braves can gain on the Phillies will be through the western teams. If the latter can down the Phillies, the other eastern members of the league may have a chance. But it must not be forgotten that both contentions are playing the same teams that the Phillies must clash with.

Still Has Alexander.

And Moran still has an "ace in the hole." He has not worked his one best bet, Grover Alexander, to death. He has pitched him in turn. Should the race tighten up again, Moran could shoot the "king" in every third game and it's a safe bet that his star would win more games than he lost if Moran is forced to use him so often.

Should the race tighten up a little before the team again returns east, then the series that the Phillies have to play with Boston and Brooklyn may have a bearing on the pennant result.

The Phillies have twenty-one more games to play, eighteen abroad and three at home; the Braves' schedule calls for twenty-one games — twelve abroad and nine at home; while the Dodgers have only nineteen to play, and all but one of them will be away from home.

A MILITARY CROSS FOR SOCCER PLAYER

Removed a Ton and a Half of Explosive From a German Mine

DUNKIRK, France, Sept. 17. Lieut. W. A. Cooper, a famous English football star, has been decorated at the front with the English military cross for his coolness in uncovering and removing a ton and a half of explosive from a German mine, which threatened to destroy an important salient on the British front.

Cooper, who had some experience as a miner, joined the Royal Engineers at the beginning of the war. His station for the past three months has been in the trenches at the foot of Hill 60. He was driving a mine 200 yards long under the German position when he broke into a German mine crammed with high explosive. For a moment he thought his party was doomed, but, acting quickly, he cut the wires leading to the German trenches, and then proceeded to carry away the explosive matter piecemeal.

As the tunnel was very low he and his men lay head to feet and passed the stuff back from hand to hand. The task occupied twelve hours, and the explosive handled showed a total weight of over 3,000 pounds. Five of the men were rendered unconscious by fumes.

WEILMAN DETROIT'S JINX.

Cobb, Crawford and Veach Have Slim Averages Against Him.

The management of the Detroit Tigers would gladly hand Carl E. Weilman of the St. Louis Browns a bonus with a pension for life if he would quit pitching baseball as a means of livelihood, his tall athlete has had wonderful success against the Detroit batsmen. This is the fourth season in the American league for Weilman, and he has worked in twenty-one games against the Jennings team, losing only four games. Thus the percentage of wins credited to Weilman for his entire labours against the Tigers would stand .777.

The lengthy lad from Hamilton, O., has held the combination of Cobb, Crawford, and Veach as an open book. For instance, these three in fifty-five times at the bat have succeeded in making seven base hits, giving them an average for the season of 1915 against Weilman of .127.

"Bobby" Veach has had the best success against the curves and benders that Weilman hands down from his remarkable height of six feet six inches. Veach in eighteen times at bat made four hits, an average of .222. Cobb faced long Carls slants sixteen times this season and garnered two base hits, giving the world's greatest batsmen a batting average of .125. Then comes Sam Crawford. In twenty-one times Crawford has faced Weilman he managed to get one base hit, giving him the inglorious average of .04c.

SOX OR TIGERS WOULD BEAT ANY NATIONAL TEAM

The impression is general that there is not a team in the National league capable of giving either Boston or Detroit a battle in the world's series. The reason given in the majority of cases is that right-handed pitchers have little chance of defeating either team. Hence, it is generally believed that the Phillies, with Alexander the Great, would be by far the best team for a World's series. Good left-handed pitchers are scarce in the National league at the present time, and there are few of the so-called star portsiders who do not have to have their opponents picked for them.

It is doubtful if any southpaw in the Tener league would have much of a chance against the Tigers or Red Sox, barring Sherrod Smith of the Dodgers, and Eppo Rixey of the Phillies. The latter has yet to prove that he can stand the gaff, but is placed on this list because of his remarkable low fast ball, and this delivery has always been the downfall of Detroit and Boston.

Two Stars Enough.

Almost every world's series since 1903 has been won with two star pitchers, and, all things considered, no team in the National league has two twirlers who could compare with Alexander and Rixey for a series against either Boston or Detroit. From the outlook at the present time, it is possible that both Alexander and Rixey will be worked to death trying to win the pennant, and neither may be at top form if the Phils do finally get into the baseball classic.

The greatest disadvantage the Phillies would have in a world's series would be in their games at home. Both Detroit and Boston have many long distance hitters, and, playing in the small Philly park, each would have an edge on the Phillies because of their superior batting. Cobb, Crawford, Burns and Veach of Detroit, and Speaker, Hooper, Lewis, Gardner and Hoblitzel of Boston, would be dangerous in a small field.

It would not matter who won the American league pennant, the Phillies would depend on Alexander in every other game in a world's series. In the past Alexander has shown that he is just as strong against left-handed batsmen as against the right-handers, mainly through his wonderful curve ball, and there is no reason to believe that any American league team would bother him. Of course, the Phillies' chances in a world's series with either team are based here entirely on pitching as this department is the most important of all in a short series. In other departments the Red Sox and Tigers far outclass any team in the National league.

DOING SPLENDID WORK

(From C. P. R. Press Bureau.)

The excellent patriotic work of the File Indians at Balcarres, Sask., continues, and the Canadian Pacific through Mr. W. R. Baker, the Secretary of the Company has received another encouraging report. It was in October last year that thirty-three of those colonists subscribed $502.10 to the Patriotic Fund, each farmer giving a certain number of bushels of grain, which when sold amounted to the above sum. During the winter that followed, the now famous File Indian Brass Band gave concerts there by raising another $212.00 which went to the Belgian Relief Fund, and since last March, the Red Cross Branch of this Colony has raised $500.00 and endowed a bed in Clivedon Hospital. The young Indian women have done a great deal of knitting and sewing. The branch has a membership of 36, while there are only one hundred and sixty souls — thirty-eight men, twenty-six women and ninety-six children — in the Colony. The patriotism of these Indians does not stop here. Two young men went to the front with the second contingent and six more are going with the next. The File Indians lay claim to having the oldest Red Cross Society member in the British Empire in the person of Pointed Cap. This celebrated character says that he is the ripe old age of 107 and on Nov. 12th next will attain his 108th year. He is now an "associate member" of the Red Cross and proudly wears on his heart the little red cross, the emblem of the society. It is quite possible that in addition to the six latest recruits for the front, older members of the colony will go, as one man who is the father of nine children has expressed his intention of so doing, and his wife says, "I will not stop him." Despite the fact that a hail-storm last month destroyed all the crops in the colony, the File Indians are not downhearted, and have made arrangements to continue their good work during the coming winter months to aid the boys across the sea, thus showing a patriotism worthy of a king.

LAWN BOWLING

The last round of the Fox series are now being rapidly completed.

Last night the contest was between the Brightman and Verden rinks. The score was as follows:

Brightman	1020402200—16

POSITION OF THE RUSSIANS IS IMPROVING

LONDON, Sept. 17. — Coincident with Earl Kitchener's optimistic remarks in the House of Lords concerning the position of the Russian armies, they are showing an increasing disposition to re-assume the offensive at many points on the eastern front. They are not only pressing their attacks against the Austrians in Galicia, but for the most part are holding up the German rush in mid-Poland.

The Russians also assert they have thrown back the invaders near Svientsyany, where the German cavalry cut the Petrograd railroad between Dvinsk and Vilna. The German battery still holds out at the bridgehead near Dvinsk, although the Russians are apparently holding their opponents in check in this region. Counting their captures in Galicia, the Russians lately have been taking more prisoners than they have been losing. It is said here that Von Hindenburg's drive is losing its vigour, while Von Mackensen is striving to overcome the difficulties of the marsh country and the Austrians appear to be unable to regain the upper hand in Galicia.

HEAKD AND NORTHEY'S AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

The agricultural warehouse of Messrs. Heard and Northey, 383 Water street, sent a large display of up-to-date farm machinery and implements which attracted crowds of farmers. This enterprising firm are the local representatives for the International Harvester Company, and exhibited on the grounds a number of their most important machines, among which were a double gang plough, a single sulky plough, a stiff tooth cultivator, and a Deering Coon binder. Their other exhibits were Loudan's litter carrier, cow stalls and stanchions, an ensilage cutter, a gasoline engine, a Primrose cream separator, and a Standard cream separator. This exhibit had many enquiries regarding these machines, and it was learned that the firm received some good prospects and sales. Hundreds of pretty I H C stick pins were given away to visitors during the day.

The Heard and Northey Co. are also the local sales agents for the Maxwell Motor Car Co., the makers of the much talked of "Wonder Car" for 1916.

The Maxwell Touring Car is an improved car, and now selling at a lower price $925, fully equipped including electric starter and electric lights, demountable rims, high tension magneto and other features of cars selling at twice its price. It is a light car, and built stronger than any previous model. It is strikingly handsome, easy on tires and gasoline, and claims to have the lowest repair bills. Mr. Jas. H. Northey assisted in explaining the merits of the Maxwell and other machines to the numerous callers interested in the display. Mr. Ford, the district sales agent for the Maxwell, was also on the ground, and assisted in demonstrating the claims of his car.

Stock Markets

James J. Hill has attracted much attention in his life, but it is doubtful whether he ever drew as large a crowd as quickly as he Wednesday at the entrance to the J. P. Morgan & Co. offices, New York. As Mr. Hill was walking up the Morgan steps he was stopped by a Trinity Church lay preacher and congratulated in gesticulatory manner on his seventy-seventh birthday anniversary. The sight of a preacher apparently in forceful argument with "the Sage of the Northwest," as the financial district knows Mr. Hill, was extremely interesting to the curious. Mr. Hill was rescued from the mob by the prompt action of a tactful Morgan usher, who emerged from the office and escorted him inside.

Gold to the amount of $800,000 was transferred from San Francisco to the Sub-Treasury in New York. It was said to be a portion of the late consignment received at the Pacific coast port from Australia for British account.

The Metropolitan Trust Company declared a regular quarterly dividend of 6 per cent.

The New York Trust Company declared its regularly quarterly dividend of 8 per cent.

Orders have been placed by the Erie Railroad for thirty-three locomotives, of which the American Locomotive Company will build eighteen, the Baldwin Works ten and the Lima Locomotive Corporation five.

Directors of the Sloss Sheffield Steel and Iron Company declared a dividend of 1 3-4 per cent. on the preferred stock, payable in six per cent. scrip maturing October 1, 1916. The company, after continuing dividends at the rate of seven per cent. on the preferred stock since 1901, deferred the payment due last April.

Announcement was made by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company that more than five thousand of its employees had applied for insurance under the scheme of group insurance announced last July. The insurance became effective at noon yesterday.

Daniel Willard president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, said that the company's August traffic was about ten per cent. ahead of that of August, 1914. The gain was spread over a wide range of commodities, he added.

Receivers for the International Steam Pump Company filed in the federal court a statement of operations for the eleven months ended July 31. Net operating profit was $11[illegible],496 on a volume of business aggregating $2,[illegible]37,607. Total income, including interest from subsidiaries, was $624,977.

Brokers say the tenacity with which odd-lot investors in Bethlehem, who purchased shares under par, are holding their shares is surprising in view of the large paper profits. A broker declared that one woman who bought one share of the stock at $35 refuses to take her profit of $300, having apparently heard the rumours that it is going to $500.

Some large investors are reported unwilling that the stock market should be placed in a vulnerable position pending a settlement of current international problems.

Journal of Commerce: The drift of speculation is in the direction of the war issues.

Transfer of Securities.

London estimates that between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000 worth of British owned American securities have gone to America since the end of June.

New French Loan.

Paris: Alexandre Ribot, the French Minister of Finance, announced to the Appropriation committee of the Chamber of Deputies to-day that the Government would soon issue a large loan.

More War Orders For U. S.

The Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. has taken important war orders direct from foreign governments in addition to the contracts for machining shells for the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Officials of the company will not discuss war orders for fear of labour troubles.

U. S. Steel Estimates.

In the steel trade estimates of the United States Steel earnings for third quarter of this year range between $38,000,000 and $42,000,000. In June the mills were operating close to 90 per cent. of capacity compared with an average of approximately 83 per cent. from July 1 to the present. It can be assumed that the average for the third quarter will be 93 per cent.

Railway Purchase.

Morgan G. Bogue of New York, representing the bondholders, bought the Buffalo & Susquehanna Railway, running from Buffalo to Wellsville, N.Y., at a receiver's sale, for $300,000. This was the only bid made.

It has not been determined whether the road will be continued or abandoned, but, by court order, the property, sold in separate parcels, must operate to October 1.

Railways Ask for Time.

Washington: Attorneys for all western railroads to-day filed a petition with the Interstate Commerce Commission asking that the effective date of its recent decision in the advance rate case be postponed for ninety days. The decision was to have become effective September 30. The railroads want time to prepare an exception to the ruling.

In its decision handed down July 30, last, the commission rejected proposals of the roads to increase the rates on most of the principle commodities, such as grain and grain products, cattle, live stock, fresh meats and packing house products. Increases were allowed on bituminous coal and coke, except as to South Dakota points; brewers rice, fruits and vegetables in carloads.

WEDDING BELLS

WARNOCK—REVELL.

The marriage took place on Wednesday morning, September 15, at St. Matthew's church, Quebec, of Miss Abigail Mary Revell, youngest daughter of Mr. Richard McArthur Revell, of Woodstock, Ont., to Mr. James Warnock, of Galt. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white crepe de chine, with tulle veil and orange blossoms her only attendant being her little nephew, Master Jack Lemoine. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Frederick J. Sawers, rector of St. Peter's church, Cobourg. Only the relatives of the bridal pair were present. After the service the wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Gaspard Lemoine. Mr. and Mrs. Warnock then left for the Adirondacks, by way of Montreal. Toronto Star.

KING—ALLEN.

The Millbrook Mirror contains the report of a wedding of large local interest

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Thomas' church, precisely at 3 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 15, when Miss Jessie McClellan Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, Millbrook, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Dr. J. W. de Courcy King, son of the late Dr. King of Peterborough, Rev. Canon Allen, B.A., officiating. The church was beautifully decorated and was filled to the doors with a host of the friends of the bride and groom. Mrs. Wm. Cartwright Allen played the wedding march, and Mrs. A. Howard Pine, of Montreal, sister of the bride's mother sang "The Aria" from Samson and Delilah, in French.

The bride was attired in a suit of navy blue serge, and wore a large black hat with ospreys, and a corsage bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her only jewelry adornment was the 5 diamond platinum bar pin, the gift of the groom.

The church choir rendered suitable music for the occasion.

Among the out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. Norman Allen, Mr. Norman Allen, Jr., Miss Cynthia Allen, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Hirchselder and Miss Grace Davidson of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McDonald, Peterborough, and Mrs. H. Pirie of Montreal.

A reception for the relatives was held at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple are popular, as evidenced by the host of costly and handsome presents.

Dr. and Mrs. King left on the evening train for a trip to Detroit and other American cities, followed by the best wishes of a host of friends, in which the Mirror joins heartily

BEDFORD—ARGUE.

The Hamilton (North Dakota) Independent of Friday Sept. 10th, has the following which will be of interest to many Peterborough and Millbrook friends

On Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock Miss Lilian Marie Argue and Clayton D. Bedford were united in marriage by Rev. W. L. Clough. The ceremony took place in the Methodist Church, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with Gladiolas, Ferns and Woodbine. The ushers were Misses Grace Clough, Elsie Page, Viva Warner and Jean Kerr.

Promptly at the hour set for the service Miss Laura Campbell sweetly sang "Because I Love You Dear," being accompanied on the piano by Miss Pearl Connell. During the playing of the wedding march by the latter, the bridal party marched down either aisle, the bride, supported by her brother-in-law, F. A. Argue, and preceded by Miss Marie Argue, as ring bearer, down the left aisle, and the groom, with the officiating clergyman, down the right aisle. The principals took places on the main floor in front of the platform, upon the centre of which stood Mr. Clough who pronounced the words uniting them, Marie Argue being at his right. The ceremony was very beautiful and impressive, and was conducted without use of the ritual. At its conclusion the party left the Church to the accompaniment of a march, played by Miss Connell, and Mrs. S. N. Erwin then beautifully rendered two solos: "I Love You" and "Perfect Day." The invited guests then repaired to the Argue home, where an appetizing luncheon was served. The young couple left on the south-bound train for Duluth, where they will pass their honeymoon.

The bride is a sister of Mrs. F. A. Argue and she is one of Hamilton's most beautiful and accomplished young women. Last spring she graduated from a Minneapolis hospital as a professional nurse, and it was while thus employed that she met her future husband. Her host of friends here wish her all happiness in her new station in life.

The groom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Bedford of Rushmore, Minn., is a young man whose integrity is above reproach.

The bride, who is a native of Millbrook, attended the Peterborough Collegiate some years ago and is a sister of Mrs. G. B. Richardson, Aylmer Street, this city.

Mr. Thomas Armitage,—We would like you to accept this little gift from us as a token of respect in which you are held amongst us. 400,000 Horses Exported For War

More Than $130,000,000 Expended Here for Horses, Equipment and Provender Since War Began

NEW YORK Sept 16—Records of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce show that exports of American horses and mules since the breaking out of the war in Europe have reached the enormous total of 400,000 head, worth approximately $88,000,000. Shipments of horses for the eleven months ending June 30 were 288,413 head, worth, in round number, $64,000,000. In the last two months they have been going over at the rate of 60,000 a month, which would make the present total upward of 328,000 head, worth about $72,000,000.

This count does not include the thousands of mules which have gone over and which both the French and the British are buying in ever increasing numbers, as their superiority over horses for the severe ordeal of the army transport service is demonstrated in the field. At the Long Branch Horse Show a young English horseman who is here in connection with the purchase of army horses and mules said to a reporter of the Herald that mules were giving better satisfaction than horses at the front through their ability to stand hard knocks and thrive on scanty fare, and that British commanders were calling for all they could get of them.

Up to July 1 the number of mules exported since the war began was 65,544, and their value was officially estimated at $12,700,000. The present totals are upward of 80,000 head, worth approximately $16,800,000.

Exports of harness and saddles are running into huge figures since the war began. For the eleven month ended July 1 the value of such equipment sent to Europe was $17,950,000. This is at the rate of $1,600,000 a month, so that the present total is doubtless well above $20,000,000.

Waggons and carriages make up another substantial item, 9,058 horse drawn vehicles, valued at $1,190,939, having been exported between August 1, 1914, and July 1, 1915. Assuming that shipments continued at the same rate in July and August, the totals are now about 12,000 vehicles, worth more than $1,300,000.

More than 30,000,000 horseshoes, valued at more than $2,500,030, have been purchased here to equip the millions of horses in the armies of the Allies. The totals for the first eleven months of the war were 29,157,243 shoes, worth $2,01,258.

Counting the mountains of baled hay and the shiploads of oats which are going over each month to feed the equine armies of the Allies, the expenditures of France, England and Italy for American horses, equipment and provender have reached truly enormous figures during the first year of the war.

That these countries are feeding American oats and hay to practically all the horses they are using in the war is indicated by the sensational jump in exports since the great war machines went into action. While everybody has been talking about wheat, the greatest single advance in grain exports has been made by oats, according to the government records. These records show that in the year ended June 30, 1914 the value of oats exported was $757,527, while in the twelve months ending June 30, 1915, the total reached $57,479,864. Shipments during last June alone were worth eight times as much as the entire exports of the year before the war. Their value is officially estimated at $5,769,068.

Exports of hay amounted to 84,653 tons in the twelve months ending June 30, 1915. For this the foreign governments paid $1,880,227, according to the official records. The total is now well above 100,000 tons, worth upward of $2,000,000.

It is needless to say these exports of horses, equipment and provender are far and away ahead of anything on record. The total is well above $150,000,000.

SUPREME EFFORT ON PART OF THE TEUTONIC ALLIES

ROME, Sept. 17.—A general Austrian offensive against the Italians is now looked for as the result of the arrival of considerable German reinforcements. The object of the expected attack will be to check the Italian advance which the Austrian troops, unaided, failed to halt.

The Mail and Empire correspondent has reliable information to the effect that Germany is prepared to aid the Austrians, so that a combined supreme effort on the part of the Teutonic allies is expected on the Italian front. Such an effort, it is believed is aimed by the central powers at favorably influencing the Balkans.

It is an open secret that the Italian general staff since the outbreak of hostilities with Austria has expected German aid to the Austrians, hence the Italian military chiefs are prepared for such an event, and it is confidently asserted in military circles here that even if the reinforcements to the Austrians are stronger than reported they will not alter the situation on the Italian front, now so favourable to Italy.

Fast of Alpines.

Italian Mountaineer detachments on September 14 made rapid against the Austrian positions 10,000 feet high at Villa Corna and other peaks in the upper Genova valley. Climbing the most difficult grounds and glaciers, the Alpines reached the enemy's entrenchments and partly destroyed them. They returned to their own positions without being seriously assailed. Analysis of the explosive bombs being used by the Austrians has revealed the presence of large quantities of prussic acid.

SINBAD THE SAILOR'S HOME THE SCENE OF THE TURK DISASTER

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The official press bureau issued the following statement today telling of a patrol engagement in Mesopotamia, east of Basra.

On Tuesday a strong enemy patrol was surprised eight miles south of Maktua by 40 British and 100 Indian infantry. After a sharp fight the enemy fled leaving one white man and 61 natives dead on the field, besides the wounded. Our casualties were three killed and eight wounded. A number of rifles and ammunition kits were captured by us.

Basra, more generally known as Bassarah, is the seaport of Bagdad, and although its population has been reduced by war and pestilence from 150,000 several centuries ago to less than 6,000 at the present time, it is still an important marine and commercial station. The locality is the country of the Arabian Nights, in fact Bassarah is famed as the birthplace of Sinbad the Sailor.

Violent Battle For Vilna Has Begun--Enemy in Great Force is Attacking

East of the City--Several Enemy Detachments Have Reached Novovileisk-Molodechno Railway and Are Attempting to Pierce Russian Lines.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 18.—A violent battle for Vilna has begun. The Germans are attacking in a great force, east of the city. Several enemy detachments have reached the Novovileisk-Molodechno railway and are attempting to pierce the Russian lines. The official statement from the War Office early to-day emphasized the fact that the fighting around Vilna is the greatest struggle now going on along the Baltic-Galician battle line. It is not improbable that the Czar will order the evacuation of the city, within a few days if the enemy's attacks threaten the envelopment movement of the armies in this district.

German successes in this fighting and in the region southeast of Orany are offset by Russian victories in the southeast on the front extending from the region of Durazno to Trembowla. The troops of Gen. Ivanoff have captured about 3,500 prisoners, and have occupied three villages, the Austro-Germans at some points fleeing in disorder.

PREPARE FOR NEW RAID ON OSTEND.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18.—The Germans are preparing to meet a new raid on Ostend by the British fleet. New long range guns are being placed along the dunes sweeping the coast.

Despatches to the Telegraaf to-day say that many marines and military workmen were killed in the last bombardment of Ostend and that the city's defences were seriously damaged.

CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS OF LOAN.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Representatives of the big London banking houses declared to-day they were confident of the success of the Allies' billion-dollar loan in America, regardless of John D. Rockefeller's statement that he would not give it his support.

They displayed the greatest interest in the Rockefeller statement. Several morning papers printed a Rockefeller interview to-day, cabled from New York.

They gave it a prominent display but refrained from editorial comment.

French Shelled Provision Trains

French Artillery Violently Engaged Between Somme and the Aisne

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Yesterday's communique says:

"In the Artois district, between Angres and Souchez, and to the south of Arras, our batteries, responding to the fire of the enemy, bombarded violently the German positions and German provision trains.

"Between the Somme and the Aisne there has taken place firing from trench to trench, as well as a certain activity on the part of the German heavy artillery, to which we replied with energy.

"In the region of Sapigneul and between the Aisne River and the Argonne district the fighting with artillery and with bombs was continued during a part of last night.

"There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front."

Summary of Work Done By Stoney Lake Red Cross

Early in the season a local branch of the Red Cross Society was formed at Stoney Lake with Mrs. Wilton C. Eddis, President; Mrs. Robert Neill, Vice-President; Miss N. E. Knox, Secretary, and Miss Evelyn L. Robertson, Treasurer.

Regular work sessions were held at Jummer Island and Kawartha Park, for the purpose of preparing supplies to be used by the Society at the front.

This association, with a membership of one hundred and thirty-six, held seven all-day meetings during July and August. Between sessions work was prepared by the officers and committee of management, while several ladies took some home to finish.

In all thirteen dozen surgical night-shirts, two thousand mouth-wipes, six hundred and twenty-nine bandages, and twenty-four pairs of pajamas were made. The larger portion of these with a gross of safety pins were sent to the Red Cross Society, acknowledgement of which has been received, and the remainder to the University Base Hospital.

Membership fees, proceeds of cake-sales, concerts, a lecture, together with donations from friends of members at Stoney Lake and Clear Lake, brought the receipts to $270.90; disbursements were $61.48, leaving a balance of $209.42, ten dollars of which were given, according to promise, to the University Base Hospital, which loaned four bandage rolling machines for the summer. The remainder was sent direct to the Red Cross Society.

Such was the excellent work done by the ladies of Stoney Lake during the season nineteen-fifteen, summarized by their Treasurer, Miss Evelyn L. Robertson.

Tornado of Shells For Two Hours In Order to Allow Troops to Land

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Some interesting pointe in the strong feint attack in the south of Gallipoli to hide the landing of the men at Suvla Bay are contained in a Reuter Special correspondents narrative. He says:

The Turkish army is stretched out along the hills and valleys of the peninsula from Bulair (at the neck near Gallipoli town) to Achi Baba like a monstrous serpent, with its armed head facing us on the slopes of Achi Baba. Our duty was to keep the armed head occupied in front. It was believed the enemy had meant to attack himself, a belief confirmed by his perfect state of readiness and the vigor and doggedness which the Turks, obviously the enemy's freshest and best troops, displayed.

At 2 (on August 6) our batteries began a bombardment surpassing anything I have seen in the peninsula. Every gun spouted shells without pause for two hours. The din was terrific. The enemy was replying to the best of his power, but unless his shells passed very close it was impossible to distinguish them from our own tornado overhead, which filled the air with such a cacophony of hisses, shrieks, and whistles that the Turks seemed hardly to be firing at all.

HEART-QUAKING ROARS.

Of the enemy's trenches nothing could be seen for the veil of smoke which showed where the shells were bursting. Every ten minutes or so a particularly heart-quaking roar overhead indicated the passage of a heavy shell, which would alight with a terrific burst on the right-hand corner of Achi Baba, making the hill look like a volcano in eruption.

It seemed impossible that anything human could be capable of fight after such pulverising.

But the enemy was quite ready for us. Our men crossed the open space between the two lines under both machine-gun and rifle fire. The regiments attacking rushed the enemy's first trench and disappeared from view under the curtain of smoke which still hung over the battlefield.

The Territorials also took part in the assault, capturing a trench in from of them. The object of the attack was merely to hold the Turk. The main object was considered to be attained, and the captured trench was evacuated the same evening.

THE BROWN WAVES.

Next morning the French opened proceedings with a dozen rounds of heavy artillery soon after dawn. At the same hour our troops were being rushed ashore in Suvla Bay. It was more than ever important that we should keep the enemy engaged to-day. Our guns took up the tale about eight. A hurricane of shell fire burst over the Turkish trenches.

Our infantry attack was launched about 9:30. I had a fine view of the men going forward, line after line of brown figures, magnified by the smoke through which they ran.

Germany Can't Aid the Turks Russian Resistance In South Too Strong

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The correspondent of the Chronicle at Athens telegraphs:

"Interesting information has reached me from thoroughly reliable sources with regard to the position facing Germany in the matter of furnishing fresh help for the hard-pressed Turks. A Turkish mission lately has been in Berlin in order to point out to the military authorities there the circumstances of the Ottoman empire, which make resistance after the end of September an extremely difficult matter in the absence of effective assistance from Germany.

"I learn in Austrian circles that this news created something like consternation in Berlin, the intensity of pessimistic feeling being increased by the recognition of the practical impossibility of further propping up the Turkish army.

Schemed To Take Odessa.

"When the campaign against Russia brought its early successes the German general staff's plan was to penetrate to Odessa and furnish assistance for the Turks across the Black Sea. The powerful resistance met with from the Russians on the southern portion of the tremendous battle line has shown the Germans any hopes they have of carrying through such ambitions would have to be abandoned.

"The plan to pushing through the Timok region of north-east Serbia from Orsova over the Danube, and so to the Vidin district, and through Bulgaria to Constantinople, was examined. Despite its success against Russia, however, the Austro-German army found itself so heavily employed that it was impossible to withdraw men in sufficient numbers to undertake an attack on Serbia at the place where an offensive would have to encounter serious natural obstacles as well as formidable fortifications.

SOLDIER SWEARS HE SAW VISION OF ANGELS AT BATTLE OF MONS

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Enclosing the affidavit of a Private Cleaver, who swore he saw the Vision of Angels, a justice of the peace writes the London Daily Mail:

Sir,—Private Cleaver, of the 1st Cheshire Regiment, was frequently in Birkenhead some months ago, but I did not hear of him until near the end of the war, and failed to meet him. I thought he had left England. He frequently spoke to his friends of the earliest of what he had seen at Mons.

To my great joy I learnt last week that he was only forty miles away, and the next day went to see him. He gave me the following words in writing. I myself was at Mons and saw the Vision of Angels. He also expresses his willingness to sign an affidavit to that effect. Well content, I returned home and the following day procured an affidavit, and again travelling forty miles to see him, got it duly executed.

GEO. S. HAZLEHURST

Boscombe, Deceased to Privy Bill enlisted.

Affidavit

I, Robert Cleaver, No. 9615, a private in the 1st Cheshire Regiment of his Majesty's army, [illegible] make oath as follows:

That I personally was at Mons and saw the Vision of Angels with my own eyes.

Robert Cleaver

Sworn at Kirton Park, Counties of Flint and [illegible] this [illegible] day of [illegible] 1915, before me,

Geo. S. Hazlehurst

An Interview

In an interview at Birkenhead, England, Mr. Hazlehurst said:

When I saw Private Cleaver, who struck me as being a very sound, intelligent man, he at once volunteered his statement and had no objection to signing an affidavit before me that he had seen the Angels at Mons.

He said that things were at the blackest with our troops, and if it had not been for this supernatural intervention they would have been annihilated. The men were in retreat and lying down behind small tufts of grass for cover. Suddenly the vision came between them and the German cavalry.

"He described it as a flash. I asked him if the Angels were mounted or armed. He could say no more than that it appeared as a flash. The cavalry horses reared in all directions and were disorganized, the charge frittered away."

MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—Mrs. THOMSON, 649 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Discovery of Mahogany.

In the year 1597 one of Sir Walter Raleigh's ships in an expedition against the Azores put in at Trinidad for repairs. The workmen used the first wood that came to hand, and it happened to be the now famous mahogany. By this accident it was first introduced into England, where it was much admired, but it did not become an article of commerce until a century later.

Fresh Prunes.

The prune in its fresh state is a beautiful bluish plum, either lusciously sweet or tartly sweet, according to the variety. The very sweet are the French and the tart the Italian and German. While any variety of plum having the requisite amount of sugar and solids will make a prune, the great mass of production is confined to the varieties above named.

Economical.

Whyte—Browne is very economical, isn't he?

Black—Browne? Well, I'll tell you. Browne is the sort of man who, when he wants an awl and hasn't any, instead of buying one will go to work to make one by straightening out a corkscrew.

"It is merely my way of saying that I put marriages of that character in the category of crime."

"Oh!" she cried, staring at me with unbelieving eyes.

"Every time a sweet, lovely American girl is delivered into the hands of a foreign bounder who happens to possess a title, that needs fixing I call the transaction a crime. You did not love this pusillanimous count, nor did he care a hang for you. You were too young in the ways of the world to have any feeling for him, and he was too old to have any for you. The whole hateful business therefore resolved itself into a case of give and take—and he took everything. He took you and your father's millions and now you are both back where you began. Some one deliberately committed a crime, and as it wasn't you or the count—who levied his legitimate toll—it must have been the person who planned the conspiracy. I take it, of course, that the whole affair was arranged behind your back, so to speak."

Her face was quite pale. Her eyes did not leave mine during the long and crazy diatribe, of which I was already beginning to feel heartily ashamed, and there was a dark, ominous fire in them that should have warned me.

She arose from her chair. It seemed to me she was taller than before.

"If nothing else came to me out of this transaction," she said levelly, "at least a certain amount of dignity was acquired. Pray remember that I am no longer the unsophisticated girl you so graciously describe. I am a woman, Mr. Smart."

"True," said I, senselessly dogged, "a woman with the power to think for yourself. That is my point. If the same situation arose at your present age I fancy you'd be able to select a husband without assistance, and I venture to say you wouldn't pick up the first dissolute nobleman that came your way. No, my dear countess, you were not to blame. You thought, as your parents did, that marriage with a count would make a real countess of you. What rot! You are a simple, lovable American girl, and that's all there ever can be to it. To the end of your days you will be an American."

We were both standing now. She was still measuring me with somewhat incredulous eyes, rather more tolerant than resentful.

"Do you expect me to agree with you, Mr. Smart?" she asked.

"I do," said I promptly. "You of all people should be able to testify that my views are absolutely right."

"They are right," she said simply. "Still you are pretty much of a brute to insult me with them."

"I most sincerely crave your pardon if it isn't too late!" I cried, abject once more. (I don't know what gets into me once in awhile.)

"Please, please don't say anything more about it. I daresay you've done me a lot of good. Perhaps I shall see things a little more clearly. To be perfectly honest with you, I went into this marriage with my eyes wide open, but I was only one fool among many. Dozens of other girls in my set were crazy to marry him. I haven't told you that he is extremely good looking. And he was—was adorable in those days."

"Stranger things have happened than that you should patch up your difficulties and go back to live with your husband."

She uttered a little cry of revulsion.

"How dare you suggest such a thing! How dare you speak to me in that way! You—I ought to order you out of this room and never—never"—

My luminous smile checked the outburst.

"Splendid!" I cried. "You convince me that it can never happen."

"You spoke of him as my husband," she said, going back to my remark. "He is not my husband. Please be good enough to remember that."

"It will be easy, I assure you. May I therefore venture the hope that if you ever decide to marry again you'll give some deserving American a chance to make you his queen?"

"I shall never marry, Mr. Smart," she said with decision. "Never, never again will I get into a mess that is so hard to get out of. I can say this to you because I've heard you are a bachelor. You can't take offense."

"I fondly hope to die a bachelor," said I with humility.

"God bless you!" she cried, bursting into a merry laugh, and I knew that a truce had been declared for the time being at least. "And now let us talk sense. Have you carefully considered the consequences if you are found out, Mr. Smart?"

"Found out?"

"If you are caught shielding a fugitive from justice. It occurred to me last night that the safest thing for you to do, Mr. Smart, is to—to get out of it would be heartless, even unmannerly, to leave her without letting her know that I was heartily ashamed of myself and completely in sympathy with her. Wisely, however, I resolved to let her have her cry out. Some one a great deal more farseeing than I let the world into a most important secret when he advised man to take that course when in doubt.

For a long while I waited for her to regain control of herself, rather dreading the apology she would feel called upon to make for her abrupt reversion to the first principles of her sex. The sobs ceased entirely. I experienced the sharp joy of relaxation. Her dainty lace handkerchief found employment. First she would dab it cautiously in one eye, then the other, after which she would scrutinize its crumpled surface with most extraordinary interest. At least a dozen times she repeated this puzzling operation. What in the world was she looking for? To this day that strange, sly peeking on her part remains a mystery to me.

She turned swiftly upon me and beckoned with her little forefinger. Greatly concerned, I sprang toward her. Was she preparing to swoon? What in heaven's name was I to do if she took it into her pretty head to do such a thing as that?

"Look!" she cried, pointing upward through the window. "Isn't she lovely?"

I stopped short in my tracks and stared at her in blank amazement. What a stupefying creature she was!

She beckoned again impatiently. I obeyed with alacrity. Obtaining a rather clear view of her eyes, I was considerably surprised to find no trace of departed tears. Her cheek was as smooth and creamy white as it had been before the deluge. Her eyelids were dry and orderly, and her nose had not been blown once to my recollection. Truly, it was a marvelous recovery. I still wonder.

The cause of her excitement was visible at a glance. A trim nursemaid stood in the small gallery which circled the top of the turret, just above and to the right of us. She held in her arms the pink hooded, pink coated Rosemary, made snug against the chill winds of her lofty parade ground.

Catching the nurse's eye, she signaled for her to bring the child down to us. Rosemary took to me at once. A most embarrassing thing happened. On seeing me she held out her chubby arms and shouted "da-da!" at the top of her infantile lungs.

I flushed, and the countess shrieked with laughter. It wouldn't have been so bad if the nurse had known her place. If there is one thing in this world that I hate with fervor it is an ill mannered, poorly trained servant. A grinning nursemaid is the worst of all.

"Ha, ha!" I laughed bravely. "She—she evidently thinks I look like the count. He is very handsome, you say."

"Oh, that isn't it!" cried the countess, taking Rosemary in her arms and directing me to a spot on her rosy cheek. "Kiss right there, Mr. Smart. There! Wasn't it a nice kiss, honey bunch? If you are a very, very nice little girl the kind gentleman will kiss you on the other cheek some day. She calls every man she meets da-da," explained the radiant young mother.

"Oh," said I, rather crestfallen.

"Would you like to hold her, Mr. Smart? She's such a darling to hold."

"No—no, thank you," I cried, backing off.

"Oh, you will come to it, never fear," she said gayly as she restored Rosemary to the nurse's arms. "Won't he, Blake?"

"He will, my lady," said Blake with conviction. I noticed this time that Blake's smile wasn't half bad.

"How dare you suggest such a thing!"

take this occasion to repeat that I've never seen any one in all my life so pretty as she!) Her moist red lip trembled slightly, like a censured child's.

With an abrupt change of manner she began to pace the floor, distractedly beating her clinched hands against her bosom. Twice I heard her murmur, "Oh, God!"

This startling exposition of feeling gave me a most uncanny shock.

And now I was witness to the pain she suffered; now I heard her cry out against the husband that had hurt her so pitilessly. I turned my head away, vastly moved. Presently she moved over to the window. A covert glance revealed her standing there, looking not down at the Danube that seemed so far away, but up at the blue sky that seemed so near.

The sound of dry, suppressed sobs came to my ears. It was too much for me. I stealthily quit my position by the mantelpiece and tiptoed toward the door, bent on leaving her alone. Halfway there I hesitated, stopped and then deliberately returned to the fireplace, where I nobly shuffled a fresh supply of coals into the grate.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MY ODD UNCLE

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

My uncle's life had been blighted by an ill assorted marriage. In every other respect he was to be envied or would have been had it not been for his marriage. He was prosperous in business affairs and accumulated a fortune. But no children were born to him during the brief period of his marriage, and after his separation from his wife he never entered upon a second matrimonial adventure.

I was his only male relative, and after hesitating for some time between leaving his property in trust for a philanthropic work and leaving it to me he finally came to the conclusion to allow it to accumulate through my lifetime, I to establish the foundation that he intended. But this plan was contingent on my agreeing not to marry.

His proposition to me, if accepted, would give me every comfort and luxury so long as I lived, but would deprive me of wife and children. I did not agree with my uncle on the subject of matrimony because I knew that, though a splendid man, he must be a very hard man to get on with. He seemed to be fond of me, and if I wanted anything I had only to ask him for it. Yet I dared not oppose him in any of his prejudices. The difference between me and the wife from whom he separated was that I understood him and had the tact to manage him, while she failed in both these respects.

My aunt was much younger than my uncle—she was but little my senior—and, being conscious of her inability to get on with him, came to rely on me to help her manage him when a deadlock came between them. I was born old and never given to acting upon impulse, while she was sensitive and had no faculty for going around a stone wall instead of over it.

My uncle's proposition—which ignored my aunt—placed me in the position of taking what belonged rightfully to her. In making my decision I was influenced far more by what was my duty to her than to carry out my uncle's intentions.

I accepted the condition, and my uncle made his will, leaving his property in trust to me, I to have so much of the income as I chose to appropriate to myself, but in consideration of this I gave my word to him that I would never marry, and the will stipulated that in case I did marry the property was to pass out of my hands and the foundation was to be established. Under this condition it would be practically impossible for me to marry, one of the reasons being that I would be obliged to drop from affluence to poverty, a very unpleasant fall.

Before acceding to my uncle's wishes I asked my aunt if she would disapprove of my doing so, and she told me that since she could not benefit by her husband's property she preferred that I should do so. However, before accepting the proposition I made bold to tell him plainly that his separation from his wife was principally his own fault and that he was doing her a great injustice to leave her property, or, rather, its income, to me instead of to her. I expected that this would alter his determination, but was surprised that it had no effect whatever to deter him from his purpose. Indeed, it seemed to confirm him in it.

I did not promise not to turn over a part of the income from his estate to his wife. My privilege to do so would have satisfied me with the position I assumed had it not been that I was pledged to celibacy. Moreover, there was a woman whom I wished to marry. When the papers had been signed I informed my uncle of this fact, though I did not tell him who that woman was. He merely said, "You should thank me, my boy, for saving you from a life of misery."

Upon the completion of the agreement my uncle gave me the position of his right hand man that I might be prepared to manage his estate after his death. He was certainly a very queer man, and no one could tell what he would do. Two years after our compact he was taken suddenly ill. He called for me and said:

"I have been told by my doctor that I have but a few days at most to live. The approach of death has made a change in my feelings. It is a part of a new plan I have made that you should marry."

I looked at him in astonishment. When I had recovered from my surprise I said to him:

"If I marry there is but one woman in the world I will make my wife."

"You will marry the woman I intend you shall marry or I will make a new will, leaving you out in the cold."

He was very weak, and I knew there was no time to waste.

"Whom do you require that I shall marry?" I asked.

"The woman whose life I have made miserable."

My heart came up into my throat, but I controlled any expression of my emotion.

"Have you obtained her consent?"

"Yes."

"Very well, I will not stand in the way of your doing this last act of justice."

I have always been balanced between two opinions as to the prime motive of my uncle's act. Either he was so perverse that he wished to marry me to a woman I did not love, thus separating me from one I did love, or he had observed the love that had sprung up between me and the woman he had put away. But to do him justice I believe he was repentant toward her.

DREAMS THAT COME TRUE.

And Those That Don't and the Workings of the Sleep Mind.

Of course, some dreams come true. The most hardheaded business man will have to admit it. But the proportion of them? That's where people differ.

Few people, if any, sleep without dreaming, and even on the basis of only one dream a night this would mean over seventeen thousand dreams for each person fifty years old. Yet few of us can recall even seventeen occasions in which a coming event has been forecasted in a dream. The prophecy that comes true is remembered because the actual occurrence brings to memory the concepts in the dream, the others are forgotten.

Since our dreams are woven from the fabric of our lives, and our lives, after all, run along in fairly narrow grooves, it would be astounding if some of them did not juggle our impressions in such wise as to seem to forecast something new. The mathematical doctrine of chances alone suffices to justify the dreams that strike right. After all, one in a thousand isn't so many.

The dreams that give right answers to problems, too, are evidences not only of prophecy, but also of the existence of a sleep mind which works differently from the waking mind.

The sleep mind, which works by intuition, gains, as well as loses, by its freedom from the shackles of logic and reason. Conclusions based on reason are often utterly unsound, because we do not know all the reasons, whereas an intuitive conclusion, which is the outcome of emotion, may be inherently right.

Wherefore when a serious question awaits decision it is not a sign of indeterminateness, but an evidence of wisdom, to say, "I want to sleep on that."

Quite unconsciously we do this sometimes, believing the answer to be merely a ruse to gain time. Truly our intent is to take a change of venue, to have the point settled by the sleep mind, which is free from the shackles of prejudice and custom.—New York American.

Had Learned One Lesson.

At one school the pupils were requested to bring 5 cents each for the piano. Donations were slow in coming and the teacher was obliged to remind the class frequently before the total was collected.

A few days later, at the physiology lesson, the teacher asked, "What are the five senses?"

To which an earnest foreigner replied, "Five centses is for de piano."—New York Tribune.

A Pertinent Query.

She was leaving the city for home and by way of making her departure pleasant for those who had served her, gave a nickel — a chambermaid, saying, "Mary, you take a nice long car ride."

The maid replied, "Yes, ma'am; thank you, ma'am, but how will I get back?"—Argonaut.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

Manxland's Sad Plight

The utter failure of the Isle of Man holiday season has disastrously affected the majority of the islanders since the great war began to drag its weary length. They depend upon holiday makers for their livelihood. There is a strong feeling in the towns and villages that the Manx Government proposal to grant $250,000 to be advanced in loans to distressed boarding house keepers, will be altogether insufficient to cope with the situation. Aid from the Imperial Government has been suggested.

The Other Party.

"I want you to put in your 'Lost and Found' column an advertisement like this: 'Wallet containing a considerable sum of money and papers. Finder will keep money; return papers.'"

"Don't you think," suggested the clerk, "you had better add 'no questions asked?'"

"No. But you may say 'no questions answered.' I'm the finder."

Hugo and His Critic.

Victor Hugo once made a queer mistake in "Travailleurs de la Mer" when he mentioned the Firth of Forth as the "Premier de Quatre." He had confused the word "firth" with "first." The English translator of the book was at the pains to point this out to the great man in a letter, but Victor Hugo was indignant at the impertinence and absolutely declined to have the mistake corrected.

A Soulless System.

WE SHOULD EAT MORE RYE BREAD

Rye bread has the reputation of being indigestible. Wheat bread has fallen in to bad repute because the fine milling process through which wheat goes robs it of most of its mineral salts and leaves it with an unwholesome preponderance of starch, as compared to the nutritive values which grain ought to contain.

Rye flour is not milled as finely as wheat flour, and for this as well as other reasons, it is much more nutritious than wheat flour. A good deal of the outer shell of the grain remains in rye flour, and as the digestive juices of the stomach are almost powerless to attack them, they pass as waste into the large intestine.

Yet these indigestible portions of the rye flour are not the cause of the indigestion which so frequently follows the eating of rye bread. On the contrary, through stimulating the contractions which take place within the intestines and which further digestion, they increase the secretions, and aid digestion.

Indigestion follows rye bread only because of the yeast in it. The temperature of the intestines is the most favourable possible for producing a renewed 'rising' of the yeast, and through this chemical process the intestines are poisoned, and other foods notably the acids from fruits and some vegetables, add to the trouble.

The healthiest of all breads is Graham bread, so named for the American physician who invented it. It is made of wheat and corn, both grains being so coarsely milled that they contain almost all of the outer husk of grain. No yeast is used in baking it. The dough is softened and made porous by a process of steaming, the water remaining in the dough through this process being evaporated while baking. Graham bread can be taken by the weakest stomach without injury.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S KIMONO.

By Anabel Worthington.

The kimono cut is used in the bodice of the gown herewith illustrated, but only to the extent of having a seamless shoulder, with the short sleeve and the very short wafsted body section in one piece. The width of most materials will require a seam down the centre of the back, and frequently even when the fabric is wide the way in which the pattern runs makes a seam desirable.

The lower portion of this garment has the skirts shaped so that there is practically no fulness at the top, where they are joined to the bodice. The flare at the lower edge, bringing the garment to a width of 2½ yards in the medium size, is ample for ease of movement. The skirts are sloped upward into a point in the centre of front and back, and a pretty effect is obtained by piping the seam which joins the upper and lower portions of the garment.

All the free edges of the robe, the neck, the front closing and the edges of the sleeves are trimmed with a band of ribbon in contrast with the main color of the material.

Crepe fabrics are liked for these negligees, both the pretty printed cotton crepes and the more elegant crepe de Chine. Wash silk is always dainty, and challie, cashmere and similar woollen fabrics are appropriate.

The kimono pattern, No. 7311, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4½ yards of 36 inch material, with 5 yards of ribbon.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

POLITENESS PAYS.

Perhaps we are too apt to regard politeness as a mere veneer. The pleasant smiles, the spirit of helpfulness, the ready sacrifice are not of the exterior alone.

A good manner, like the good nature that is a part of it, is not a thing to be thrown off and on with a dress coat. It is of the man as the aroma is of the rose, says the Quincy Journal.

The polite man is at a tremendous advantage. He can win favour and fortune under circumstances where the loose-mannered and slovenly-spirited is left to grumble in failure. It is not altogether because of his politeness. It is chiefly because of the sterling character that lies back of it and gives it birth.

Politeness is a good capital in any business. A Cleveland street car conductor has proved it so and so has every other man who ever made good manners a part of his equipment.

This conductor gave a little better service than he was supposed to be paid for. He was careful of the comfort and safety of the children, the ladies, the old men and the cripples who rode on his car. He met querulous complaints with pleasant smiles and kindly words.

He collected no more fares for the company than any other conductor. He was no more efficient and faithful in other respects than perhaps hundreds of his fellows.

But, somehow, that one advantage was sufficient. In his kindness to his passengers he was unconsciously kind to himself. He came to be selected for special runs where courtesy was of special importance. And now he has been made a despatcher.

He has won his way to a good place by his politeness, just as millions of other men have done in other lines before him and as millions more will do in time to come.

Politeness pays.

It attracts friends and good fortune.

It is a well-spring of well wishes.

It creates about a man an atmosphere in which "luck" loves to linger.

Most of us seem to think the world owes us much and that we owe the world nothing. We seem to be on our guard against giving any more in service than we are actually paid for. Even our smiles we reserve unless we see chance to coin them into ready cash. We go through life grabbing and grumbling, giving nothing to employer or public, but what is specifically called for in the contract.

And there is where we make a serious mistake. Only as we give do we grow. Only as we lift others do we lift ourselves. Only as we bring joy into life do we really live.

* * *

There is no true woman but will repay her husband over and over again for kind, thoughtful treatment. He is ready to call her childish, and she may seem so to him, but one thing is sure, a woman never forgets. All little deeds of love or thoughtfulness sown by his hand yield a certain and abundant harvest. She may love her home better than any other spot on earth, yet she sometimes gets so weary of the daily routine of never-ending duties that fall to her lot that she cannot help an occasional feeling of envy for those who have more time for recreation, for going abroad, for of every woman, but which the stern all the little things dear to the heart of every woman, but which the stern hand of duty debars her from enjoying. Still, for all that, she would not for the whole world exchange places even if she could, with any woman, leaving home and John—dear old John—as the price of her freedom from care. If your wife has been a faithful and true wife to you tell her so.

* * *

Appreciate your mother while you have her. It is the almost universal testimony of young women who have lost mother that they did not realize what she was to them until after her exit from this life. Indeed, mother is in the appreciation of many a young lady a hindrance. The maternal inspection is often considered an obstacle. Mother has so many notions about that which is proper and that which is improper. It is astounding how much more many girls know at eighteen than their mothers at forty-five.

* * *

As we passed along the street on a recent Sunday we counted twenty-seven young men, most of them in their teens, just budding into manhood, loitering their time away. As we looked into their faces, many of them lighted up by the beacon rays of a poor cigar or the pernicious cigarette, we recognize them as young men blessed with comfortable homes, indulgent parents and loving sisters. We ask ourselves, why is it? Why do these young men prefer the unclean resorts, comfortless streets and mixed society to the upholstered chair, the pleasant and comfortable surroundings of the family circle at home?

* * *

For the best and deepest enjoyments that come to us, little we realize how much is due to smiles. Savages do not smile; coarse, brutal, cruel men may laugh, but they seldom smile. The affluence, the benediction, the radiance, which "Fills the silence like a speech" is the smile of a full appreciative heart.

* * *

Push! It is just the word for the grand, clear morning of life; it is just the word for strong arms and young hearts; it is just the word for a world that is full of work as this is. If anybody is in trouble, and you see it, don't stand back, push!

THE SENSIBLE IN DRESS

Fashion Favours it to the Last Letter

THE NEW PLAID BLOUSE

NEW YORK, September 18.—With an amiableness as surprising as it is sudden, Dame Fashion has introduced the sensible in dress—she has done it more thoroughly, too, going into every detail, than the most rigid dress reformer could ever have hoped for. The war, with its sobering influence, has done more at one stroke than could have been accomplished by years and years of arguments. The short, full skirt, the trim, dark tailored suit, sparsely and smartly trimmed hats, good, sensible, rather high, walking boots with straight heels, washable gloves—and so on, down to the last detail. All this has been brought about with no sacrifice of becomingness or chic.

The Popularity of "Sport Clothes"

Time was, not very long ago, when "sport clothes" were left, without a moment of hesitation, to the wardrobes of the leisure class, who had time for sports; nowadays, we find "sport cloth" or in other words, comfortable, sensible clothes, in every wardrobe. It is quite as exhilarating as the walk itself to come down the Avenue any of these crisp, refreshing morning behind a maid or matron dressed for walking. All Paris walks in the Bois these days, you know, and so we might say all New York walks on the Avenue, unless we except those who select the Drive because of its brisk river breeze.

The smart suit of tweed cut Norfolk fashion, with short, pleated or circular skirt, plenty of pockets both for use and for chic, a small hat, heavy gloves, and heavy shoes, in tan or black, is a favoured costume. Then there is the girl with sport skirt of corduroy, coat of vividly coloured velours with hat of the velours, and low heeled shoes of tan. Their stride has all the grace of movement of the athlete, not hampered by tight skirts, unsteady heels, or discomfort of any kind.

A Frock of Taffeta and Crepe Georgette

The Separate Skirt.

Since the introduction of the shirt waist, ever so long ago, the separate skirt has had its own special niche in the well-dressed woman's wardrobe; this season it promises to be even more useful than ever before. It is made moderately short, flares in the approved fashion, and is finished with a belt at the normal waistline or slightly above the normal. It is as conservative or as much trimmed as fancy dictates. Perfectly plain, depending upon material and cut alone for effect, it is smart; trimmed with line after line of stitching and quantities of buttons, it is also smart in a different way.

The New Plaid Blouse.

Chief among the pleasing novelties in the blouse line, we must place the blouse of plaided taffeta. The plaids or checks are not pronounced, colourings are soft, almost invisible, harmonizing well with the suit of dark blue serge or gabardine. The green and blue combinations are most popular although one sees also some attractive dull reds combined with blue or green. These blouses are especially suited to the tailored suit. The crepe de Chine blouse still holds its own for suit wear, too, in soft pastel pink, yellow and lavender.

Incidents of the Zeppelin Raids Upon Old London

Only One Soldier Among the Victims---Thirty-eight Were Killed and One Hundred and Twenty-four Injured in the Weeks Air Activity--Bomb Which Dropped in Street Killed Nine People on a Passing Motor Bus.

NO MILITARY DAMAGE DONE.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Here are a few pictures of the effects accomplished by the officers and crew of the last airship which visited the London district, according to an official statement issued by the Home Secretary to-night:

"Somewhere in London there is a little street with a public-house at the corner. Outside it Wednesday evening, after the place was closed, a man and woman stood talking. While the woman went away to buy supper the man waited for her, and there fell at his feet the first explosive bombs. They killed the man outright, and blew pieces of the paving stones on to surrounding roofs. They blew in the front of the public-house, reducing the stock to a mass of broken glass, over which still floats the indefinable odor of assorted forms of alcohol. They took off the top of a grand piano on the floor above, twisted an iron bedstead, injuring a woman who was sleeping there, and reduced what had been the carefully kept living rooms of a small family to a mass of soot, dust, plaster and broken glass. In what conceivable respect did this contribute to the progress of the war?

HOW TWO BABIES ESCAPED.

"In another part of the area over which the airship passed there is a big block of workmen's dwellings which are crowded day and night with children. A bomb dropped on the roof. Directly under the roof was a little flat in which four children were asleep. After being put to bed two of them got up secretly to make tea in an adjoining room. The bed they left now is a mass of charred and blackened sheets, with the mattress torn to pieces. They escaped by a miracle, but in a small bedroom next door the other two children were killed instantly.

"These buildings are strong and the bomb did not penetrate far. You hardly can notice the damage to the roof if you pass in the street. That was all that was happening when the captain of the German aircraft professed to think he was visiting docks and vitally damaging the port of London.

"At another place an incendiary bomb dropped through the roof of a stable and fired a motor car into which it fell. The stableman and his wife, in spite of the fire which immediately became serious, set about rescuing eleven horses which were in the stable. They were carefully taken out and turned loose in the street. A dog which kept watch over the premises also was rescued, as was a caged bird kept on the first floor above the fire, although while bringing it downstairs the stableman's wife was blown off her feet by the explosion of a bomb which fell in a neighbouring courtyard. The only casualty in this case was a bantam rooster. In such a case as the last the futility of the enemy's attacks was merely ridiculous; in other cases it was tragic.

MANY VICTIMS IN ONE HOUSE.

"Somewhere in London's suburbs there is a little block of houses almost by itself, divided into small flats. On the ground floor there were sleeping a widow, her 18-year-old daughter and a young man lodger. On the first floor there was a family of three children, two of them girls, and on the second floor a workingman, his wife, four girls and one boy. A bomb dropped squarely on the roof. As the labourer and his wife, who were on the second floor, described it, the whole partition wall beside their bed gave way and disappeared. The man shoved his wife into the centre of the room and went to find the children. Two of them who slept in a room under the spot where the bomb fell vanished with the room and everything in it. Their bodies were found two days later under the debris. Of the others, a boy of eight ran for safety to a staircase which had been blown away, and in the dark fell into the hole where his sisters' bodies were buried in the ruins.

"The bodies of two of the occupants of the first floor subsequently were recovered, but the worst effects of the bomb were felt on the ground floor. Part of the body of a man who occupied it was found 150 yards away.

NINE KILLED ON MOTOR 'BUS.

"A bomb which dropped in a street blew in the front of a shop, but spent its main force on a passing motor 'bus on which twenty persons were riding, including the driver and conductor. Nine of them were killed and eleven injured. The driver had both legs blown off and died in a hospital.

"These incidents alone, which account for nearly half the deaths, will suffice to show what was the nature of the success attending the attack upon London. The net results of the week's raids upon the London district were 38 killed or died of wounds and 124 injured. Two policemen and one Army Service Corps man were among the victims, but no other person in uniform was killed or injured."

PARIS, Sept. 18.—(French Official).—The Allied forces have captured another important position on the Gallipoli Peninsula. After being assisted by warships, the land forces advanced and stormed the earthworks, capturing a large number of Turks and several guns. On the Western front in Flanders, North France and Alsace, there were fierce artillery engagements, continued with grenade fighting at some points, but no changes of importance.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The German submarines to-day got their first victim for several days, when the British tank steamer San Zeferino was sunk. Three of a crew are missing.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Indications that the Austrians, after weeks of preparations, are about to attempt the invasion of Serbia, were contained in Nish despatches to-day. The Serbian War Office reported the repulse of all Austrian attempts to cross the river. Serbian artillery has wrecked several Austrian defensive works along the border.

UNIFORMS DID NOT ARRIVE FOR THE INSPECTION

80th Battalion Men Were Their Straw Hats and Fatigue Uniforms Before Major-General Sir Sam Hughes This Afternoon

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Contrary to expectations the uniforms for the local detachment of the 80th Battalion did not arrive this morning and the men had to parade for inspection at the Exhibition grounds by Major General Sir Sam Hughes in their straw hats and fatigue uniforms. They paraded at the armouries at 1 o'clock sharp and marched to the Exhibition grounds.

The detachment will attend divine service at George street Methodist church to-morrow evening, falling in at the armouries at 6:30 p.m.

A big squad of Peterborough men from Barrie field camp are home on leave to-day. They include men from the 50th Battalion, 9th C.M.R. and 33rd Battery, and the result was a distinctly khaki tinge to the crowds on the streets this morning.

To Billet Soldiers.

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—Following the statement yesterday to the effect that it was likely that troops in training would be distributed in smaller cities and towns during the winter, Sir Sam Hughes to-day intimated he was much in favour of a system of billeting soldiers on private households. What men needed, he said, were home influences rather than the inevitable temptations of big cities. He said the whole question of quartering was being taken up by officers at Ottawa and the decision was coming shortly.

A number of Exhibition visitors who came to see the attraction of the Exhibition, have decided to join the 80th Battalion. It is expected that to-day will see a goodly addition to the ranks of the 80th.

Breach of the Traffic By-law

Cost R. A. Charlton of Young's Point Five Dollars—To-day's Police Court

A breach of the traffic by-law cost R. A. Charlton of Young's Point, five dollars in this morning's police court.

Owen Baker was fined ten dollars for being under the influence of liquor while on the prohibited list. Baker professed a partiality for a preparation known as beef, iron and wine. "What you want is a little spirits of truthfulness," was Magistrate Dumble's parting injunction. In default of payment Baker will go to gaol for thirty days.

Frederick Eastland was another visitor to the sun parlour. He was fined two dollars and costs for being drunk in a public place.

CONSCRIPTION NOT LIKELY

Many Leaders Regard the Plan as Not Necessary or Workable Says T. P. O'Connor

REVIEW OF SITUATION

Copyright ,1915, Central News.
By T. P. O'Connor.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Newspaper anticipation that this session of Parliament would be quite different from its predecessors since the beginning of the war have already been more than fulfilled.

Lord Northcliffe's fierce campaign against the conduct of the war had produced a feeling among a few obscure pessimists who now form the only opposition in the House of Commons that their hour had come. To this disturbing factor Northcliffe added his conscription campaign, one of those issues which divide parties and classes as clearly and as fiercely as any political issue of our time.

Thus it was an electric and emotional session instead of the easy going House which has hitherto, with few exceptions, given steady and undivided support to my decision by the government and studiously avoided any question which might produce a difference of opinion. Nevertheless the overwhelming majority of the House of Commons remained cool and sane.

Liberals Against It.

The majority of the Liberals are still dead against compulsory military service, as are also the Labourites and the Irish. Even the Tories, of whom many are conscriptionists by principle, took the attitude that the time for a discussion of the issue would not come until the Ministry, having examined all facts, comes to the House of Commons with a definite judgment, either proposing or rejecting the policy of conscription.

The conscriptionist hotheads, however, were unwilling to be balked of their chance of airing the proposals. Major Guest, an officer and also a member of Parliament, with other officers published a manifesto in favour of conscription. Their manifesto, however, received severe douches of cold water from Asquith and Dillon.

Asquith emphasized the fact that England has already loaned to her allies £200,000,000 that; she promised 150,000 men and has already raised three million. He added, amid universal cheers, that these figures answer those who belittle England's contribution.

John Dillon rushed to the encounter with the conscriptionists. In two powerful speeches, which were wildly cheered by Liberals and Labourites, he denounced the whole agitation.

It was evident from Premier Asquith's and Lord Kitchener's speeches that the cabinet has not yet formed a decision because it does not possess all the facts, esp cially those evolving from the national register, the inauguration of which was hailed at the time as the forerunner of conscription.

A Question of Weeks.

This means that weeks, if not months, must elapse before the cabinet can be in a position to pronounce judgment. If it is shown that conscription is the only way to win the war the patriotism of the country is so fierce and the determination so intense that the adoption of the conscription of sane onlookers is that the plan is neither necessary nor workable.

The voluntary recruiting system which has brought forth three million men may be trusted to bring any additional number necessary. The House like the whole country, is determine to go ahead without swerving to the successful conclusion, and is resolved to permit no issue to divide the united forces of the British Empire.

The position of the Irish Party may be compared to that of the French Republic, especially to the French Republic before the war.

Just as the republic represents the overwhelming majority of all the sane people of France, and was to that extent stronger than any other possible form of government, so the Irish Party represents the views of ninety-nine per cent. of the Nationalists of Ireland, and to that extent is quite as strong as the French Republic.

Splendid Crowds Attend the Peterboro' Industrial Exhibition

CIVIC RECEPTION IS TENDERED TO SIR SAM HUGHES

The Distinguished Visitor Arrived in the City at Noon To-day and was Given a Hearty Ovation—Illuminated Address Presented by the City, Also Addresses From the Board of Trade and the Liberal Conservative Association—Inspected the 80th Battalion at the Exhibition Grounds.

Major-General Sir Sam. Hughes, K.C.B., Minister of Militia and Defence, reached the city to-day upon the arrival of the 11.27 C.P.R. train from Toronto. He was accompanied by Captain Harold Daly, a staff officer. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was the first to greet Canada's premier soldier as he stepped from the rear platform of his private car. By this time the Civic Reception Committee arrived on the scene, and a few felicitous exchanges were accounted for. The combined bands of the 57th Regiment and the 80th Battalion played "O Canada" as the party proceeded down the platform to where a number of automobiles were parked.

Sir Sam. Hughes, His Worship Mayor Buller, and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., entered the first car. Headed by the bands the party proceeded up George Street to the Empress Hotel, where a civic luncheon was tendered the visitor. Arriving at the hotel, Sir Sam. Hughes personally thanked the band and also addressed a few remarks to Sergt.-Major T. Miller, whom he recognized as a veteran of the South African war. The streets were crowded as the procession passed through.

Informal Reception.

Following the banquet an informal reception was held, and for upwards of an hour, Sir Sam. Hughes was "at the mercy of the public," to use the words of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P. Deputations representing the Women's Council, the County Temperance Association, the Liberal Conservative Association, the Speaker's Patriotic League, the Board of Trade and sundry other organizations waited upon Sir Sam. Hughes, and each in turn was accorded a warm welcome. In replying to the remarks of His Honour Judge Huycke, who spoke on behalf of the Speakers Patriotic League, Major-General Sir Sam. Hughes said he was pleased to hear of the good work accomplished by the organization. He reviewed the work that had been achieved by the department over which he presided, and amused his hearers by recalling some of the incidents connected with the attempts of some, to seek favours of a military character. He did not fear criticism; in fact, he invited it, when he knew he was in the right. He administered the affairs of the department without fear or favour, and would not hesitate to dispose of an officer whom be found to be inefficient.

The Late Major Bennett

Among those who received an introduction to Sir Sam. Hughes was Mr. John J. Bennett, 191 Perry Street, brother of the late Major Bennett, who lost his life at the celebrated battle of Langemarck. "He fell in a most glorious fight, and his name is a household word throughout the line," remarked Sir Sam. Hughes.

Both the Women's Council and representatives of the County Temperance Association declared their advocacy for more stringent regulations in respect to the liquor traffic, especially where soldiers are concentrated. In reply, Sir Sam. Hughes reminded his hearers that the regulation and control of the liquor traffic rested with the Provincial authorities. At the same time he would be pleased to give the matter serious consideration. He had been instrumental in establishing the dry canteen and would take any steps as might be necessary to subscribe to the well-being of the troops. He appreciated the work accomplished by the women of the nation and extolled them for the self-sacrifice they had shown in the present conflict.

Jewellery Thieves Make a Haul

Special to The Examiner:

CHATHAM, Sept. 18.—Professional crooks visited the city last night and took $2,500 worth of diamonds and other jewellery from Thomas Lailey's establishment on King Street. The thieves cut a large hole in the plate glass window and got away while the police were patrolling another part of the street.

Attendance in Afternoon About the Same as the Same Day Last Year While Last Night's Crowd Was the Largest Ever Present at a Night Performance at Exhibition

EXHIBITS WERE SPLENDID

Favoured by perfect September weather the first public day of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, yesterday scored a great success. In spite of war conditions the crowd in the afternoon was a trifle better than last year, while in the evening the attendance was the largest on record for a night performance at the Exhibition, this being partially accounted for by the fact that many people remained on the grounds after the afternoon programme. With General Sir Sam Hughes as the guest of honour this afternoon the attendance will undoubtedly be larger than on the the closing day this year, and altogether the official figures should show a noteworthy increase.

As for the exhibition, itself, it surpasses other years in many respects. The exhibits are larger than ever before and in many classes the showing is a grand one. This is especially true of the light harness horses, in every class of which was the keenest competition. As for the horticultural exhibit shown in a 50 ft. by 100 ft. tent, the display is twice as large as ever before, and of the finest quality.

Along the midway are numerous attractions, all of which seemed to be doing good business yesterday afternoon and evening, while dining tents and refreshments booths, a number conducted by ladies from the different churches, all did well.

That Canada is at war was brought to the attention of the crowd not only by the khaki-clad soldiers, but by the Recruiting Tent on the grounds. During the afternoon His Honour Judge Huycke and Mr. R. R. Hall made vigorous recruiting speeches in front of the tent and a number of recruits responded, being taken to the Armouries for medical examination.

There was only one accident during the afternoon and fortunately only of a minor nature, although it might easily have been a serious one. A little daughter of Mr. Dick Evans started to cross the race track during one of the heats of the 2.35 class. The leading horses had gone by, but "Prince," owned by Mr. T. Hetherington, was well in the rear, and the little girl ran squarely in front of the horse, being knocked down. She was picked up by P. C. McArthur, and Dr. McGrath rendered first aid. The tot escaped with a shaking up, and a cut on the cheek, but was not seriously hurt.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., "pressed the button" shortly after two o'clock announcing the Exhibition formally open. In doing so Mr. Gillespie referred to the presence of the men of the 80th Battalion and complimented them on their appearance and bearing. Headed by their own band the detachment made a very imposing appearance as they swung past the grandstand, and they were received with loud applause. They were followed by the Fire Brigade whose smartly dressed men, splendid horses, and shining vehicles made an impressive showing.

Early in the programme a squad of men from the 80th in charge of Sergt. Oxley, gave an exhibition of physical exercises without and with arms, followed by a bayonet exercise. The first two were carried out to music supplied by the 80th Band, and were performed with precision that was remarkable in view of the brief opportunity the squad has had to practice the exercises. The exhibition which was repeated later on in the programme made a most favourable impression upon the crowd, and the lads in the straw hats and khaki fatigue uniforms were given a hearty round of applause as they finished.

The Vaudeville Features.

The two vaudeville acts in front of the grandstand by the Acosta Troupe and the Four Victors, were undoubtedly superior in quality to anything of the kind ever shown at the local exhibition. The aerial act in which the lady member of the cast was tossed around in mid-air like a ball from one man to another, was a feature that thoroughly entertained the crowd and the performers were enthusiastically applauded as they finished. The other acts on the rings were also decidedly clever, and the offering as a whole was high class.

The Horse Racing.

As usual the harness horse racing was one of the big events of the afternoon, and the crowd saw two well

SATURDAY, SEPT. 18, 1915

NEGLECTING THE WEIGHTIER MATTERS.

A day or two ago a venerable citizen, a citizen of substance and repute, addressed a complaint to a member of the School Board.

This citizen owns a row of tenement residences on Murray street, north side, between Water street and George street. He has in front of this row a terrace about ten feet wide, slightly elevated and enclosed with a concrete curbing, which though on the street, and intended to beautify it, was put up at his own expense. This little terrace is neatly grassed, neatly kept, and beautified with flowers. This year he planted a row of trees, which under the favourable conditions of weather, are growing nicely. Altogether the terrace is a beauty spot on the street and, one would think, entitled to public protection.

This gentleman complained to the School Board member that that day he had caught a school boy climbing one of these trees—nearly at the top—with danger of destroying it. "I think," he interpolated, we have the most ill-bred boys in the country." "The trees are growing nicely, and I wouldn't take five dollars apiece for them."

Now what do you think was the answer of the member of the School Board to a reputable, respected and public-spirited citizen?—"send for the police" — the German method by which a policeman dogs the steps and regulates the actions of every German citizen, or the stranger within the gates.

"Send for the police" for a child, well within the spanking age. "Send for the police" and start him on the road to being a criminal. Invoke the law when our schools should teach the principles of good behaviour; the principles of good citizenship!

The curt, contemptuous, and culpable answer of the School Board member, showed a strange lack of sense of responsibility, and a cynical indifference, to the demands of the citizens who maintain our schools.

The incident though in itself a trifling one, is a mighty important one, in its bearing upon our educational interests.

As schools, good schools of their kind, our schools are well managed in the mechanical and administrative sense. We have splendid buildings, and a fine staff of teachers, and the people meet willingly—more or less—the great cost involved.

We teach our children all the things that seem necessary to help them get on in life—to make money. We develop the selfish side of character; teach them to make their way and equip them for getting all they can, by legitimate means, of course, from somebody else for their own benefit.

In a word, in our schools we teach almost everything, and no one will say that they do not do it well. We teach the three Rs; we teach cooking; we give physical culture; we look after the children's teeth; we teach and inculcate everything almost but the most important thing.

We have no provision for adequate or effective religious instruction in our schools, and we miss the best, the highest, the most important thing—the moral and aesthetic development of character.

Our schools teach practical things, the things to make the child successful in after life; in a word to look out for number one—himself. This is all very well as it goes, but apart from the higher gifts; apart from saturating the child with the altruistic spirit, our school culture is of the German brand—force and efficiency. We educate the mind and leave the soul—the real man — in ignorance and blindness.

The same spirit of German "culture" that overan, overode, outraged and devastated Belgium—the disregard of the rights of nations, of the rights of others—this same spirit was manifested by the school boys in the trespass and outrage on the rights of the Murray street citizen.

In face of the barbaric manifestations of the German spirit of culture, the whole world has to stand to arms, to defend its rights. In the same way the citizen referred to has to be on the alert.

Though he is in the octogenarian class, and entitled to the rest and leisure his successful industry has earned him a title to, he says he has to "turn out the guard" when school closes, in order to protect his trees and flowers. He says that they climb over and break down to get at his flowers, the disfiguring "barbwire entanglements," that the Hun spirit in Peterborough compels citizens to guard their property with.

This matter is referred to because it is a type of a general condition; because it reveals the lack of the right kind, the most important kind, of education in our schools.

The German ideal of national education—force and efficiency—are admirable things; but they are evil things unless regulated by the higher principle of respect for the rights of others.

The efficiency for life work of the material kind, imparted by our public school training is admirable in itself, but it is only a sort of power for evil if it is not attended with the beautiful virtue of character—the divine altruism—respect for the rights and feelings of others.

Though our school curriculum is perhaps overloaded with subjects, we could well add a department of ethics and aesthetics; adopt a course of teaching and training which will teach the pupil the whole gospel of good citizenship, regard for the rights of others. In no other way can we bring on a generation of citizens that will permit us to enjoy the minimum of outrage upon the property of the public; in no other way can be realize the ambition and aim of the few, of the city beautiful.

"Send for the police" won't do it. By-laws won't do it. We have a by-law on the statute books forbidding trespass upon boulevards. Yet we have seen boulevards tramped out of shape an hour after being laid down.

No: law won't do it; we must have the spirit of fair play; of decency of conduct, of respect for others' right, ingrained, in-bred, in our characters. If we had our people saturated with this spirit we should not only have the realization of the most outwardly beautiful city in the country, but all the relations of citizenship, would be sweetened, and community life would have a splendid beauty.

Can we not do something to better things? Can we not add to our strivings for the education of our citizens to be successful in a business way, to make good in life, the weightier matters that make for high character and good citizenship?

LANGEMARCKE MAPLES.

It is a beautiful idea of the Overseas' Club to plant Canadian maples as over the graves of the fallen Canadians at Langemarcke, where so many gave their lives for the King, the colours and Canada. It is proposed to plant a long avenue of maples at Langemarcke, to hedge the way by which the Canadians undauntedly marched to their death. They rest in nameless graves; they rest in foreign soil. They will rest the better, if they can know that above their heroic dust, the emblem of the country they loved, the country they fought for, "waves above them its green leaves," and "grieves if aught inanimate can grieve," over the eternal resting places of "the unreturning brave." In the words of the Buffalo News:

To us of the western world it takes some of the sting out of it all to think that each year when the Langemarck maples burst into young leaf, and each autumn as they redden to the fall, they will bear testimony to the undying glory and courageous self-sacrifice of men whose brotherhood with us was not diminished by the circumstances of nativity, or the man-made boundary lines.

LORD ROBERTS' BATTLE PRAYER

Lord Roberts gave the following prayer to the soldiers during the South African war:

Almighty Father, I have often sinned against Thee; O wash me in the precious blood of the Lamb of God.

Fill me with Thy Hold Spirit that I may lead a new life. Spare me to see again those whom I love at home, or fit me for Thy presence in peace.

Strengthen us to quit ourselves like men in our right and just cause. Keep us faithful unto death, calm in danger, patient in suffering, merciful as well as brave—true to our Queen, our country and our colours.

If it be Thy will, enable us to win victory for England, but above all, grant us a better victory over temptation and sin, over life and death, that we may be more than conquerors, through Him who loved us and laid down His life for us, Jesus our Saviour, the Captain of the army of God. Amen.

A PROFESSIONAL PREDICTION OF THE NEAR FUTURE COURSE OF THE WAR

Colonel Harrison of the United States Army, has made quite a reputation by reason of the fact that he has had the courage to predict the course of the war and the luck to have had his predictions in the main fulfilled. What he has predicted for the remainder of the present year is therefore of more interest than that of most prophets. Here is what he says will happen:

September.

West—General German offensive; tremendous expenditure of ammunition.

Italy and Russia—Junction of the Russian fronts; Italy-Serbia-Roumania. Advance of both Russian wings.

East—Collapse of Turkey. Fall of Constantinople. Opening of the Dardanelles.

October.

West— End of German offensive they begin their own initiative to rectify their front, operations which are accelerated by French offensive. Slight pause at the end of the month on the line Ostend-Mauberge-Ardennes-Luxemburg-Metz-Strassburg.

Italy and Russia—Retreat of the of Galicia by the Russians. Invasion of Hungary on three sides. Flight of the Austrian Government from Austria; retreat of the Germans in Courland and in Eastern Prussia.

East— End of the Turkish operations. A large portion of the expeditionary force returns to Europe.

November.

West — Further German retreat; the front is broken into three or four portions.

Italy and Russia— Retreat of the Germans in Poland. Invasion of Germany.

December.

Italy and Russia— The Germans pray for an armistice.

Colonel Harrison speaks, of course, with the knowledge of a trained professional soldier to guide him. Whether his predictions are fulfilled to the letter or not, the course of events he has had the hardihood to sketch is a fairly logical one. It may take much longer than he thinks to bring it all about. There is bound to be a profound change when the tide begins to turn definitely in favour of the Allies. So far the Germans have been fighting from the centre outward. When the movement begins to be from the outside of the circle inward, then will come the true test of German morale. As long as Germany and Turkey can hold their lines, and as long as a resounding noise can be made by the Germans in Poland, the German people will doubtless hear with equanimity the appalling sacrifices that the military bureaucracy is demanding of them. But there will be a great change when they realise the hollowness of the present "victories," and see their hosts being beaten back. Undoubtedly we are approaching the most decisive phases of the war. Let us hope the result will be as favourable as our military friend predicts.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

Ponce De Leon started out to discover the Secret Fountain of Youth. Men are always looking for secrets: the secret of health, wealth, or happiness. But the secret of successful advertising has been discovered. It is strange it was not discovered long ago, but it was not until recent years, although it is remarkably simple. It is to "Tell the truth and shame the devil." Put into your advertisements the exact facts, without exaggeration or elaboration. DON'T LET GO

A COMMUNITY without CO-OPERATION is like a boatman who has lost his oar. You can't imagine a more HELPLESS case. Unable to GET ANYWHERE, there is no COURSE but to DRIFT with the ebb and flow of circumstance. Once LOST, it is hard, indeed, to RECOVER the oar. But surely WE don't have to get into this DANGEROUS plight. It's our OWN fault if we DO. Co-operation, like rowing a boat, must be studied and learned. And we can only learn it through PRACTICE. The PRACTICED oarsman never lets go of the oar. And if WE would keep from DRIFTING we must practice CO-OPERATION. Let's GET into practice and KEEP in practice. Let us PULL TOGETHER in everything that means PROGRESS for our Home Town. It's a case of SINK or SWIM "TO-GETHER."

Entire Family Stricken With Cholera.

YOUNGEST CHILD DIED.

Mrs. E. Slade, 276 Logan Ave., Toronto (Que., writes: "When I first arrived in Canada, nearly four years ago, my entire family was stricken with cholera from which the youngest child died. Soon after a friend recommended Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and acting on this advice I administered it to all who were suffering with the most gratifying results. Since that first attack my children have been subject to stomach troubles, but on the first symptoms I resort to 'Dr. Fowler's,' and it always brings relief. I have immense faith in this medicine and always keep a bottle on hand, also I never fail to recommend it to anyone who is similarly troubled."
Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 70 years, and has become so universally used, that many firms have gone so far as to try and produce a substitute for it, and even claiming similar names, and saying it is "The Same" or "Just As Good."
Do not accept their word for this as these no-name, no-reputation, worthless imitations may be dangerous to your health.
The genuine "Dr. Fowler's" is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
Price, 35c.

contested races with good-sized fields to start in both—in fact the 2:35 class brought out seven entrants. The well known Dr. Sinclair of Cannington, who has been starter at the local races for years, was once more in charge of the bell, and he made his usual good impression, getting the horses away well.

The 2:15 class brought out four starters, Lew Jean, owned by T. Hodgins of Orillia; Susie Hal, owned by Dr. Johnston, Peterborough; Mona Hal, Ed Hinds', Orillia, and Jimmy Direct, F. Montgomery, Peterborough. The latter was drawn after the first heat, but the other three had a lively race. It was a battle royal between Lew Jean and Susie Hal, the latter being a contender in each heat, although the Orillia mare took three straight heats. The summary:

Lew Jean, T. Hodgins, Orillia	1	1	1
Susie Hal, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough	2	2	2
Mona Hal, Ed Hinds, Orillia	3	3	3
Jimmy Direct, F. Montgomery, Peterborough	4	dr

Time—2:20, 2:21, 2:24.

There were seven horses in the 2:35 class. Phil Ha Ha, H. Elmhirst, Keene; Sir Walter, Dr. Johnston, Port Hope; Montalvo, T. Hodgins, Orillia; Ora Medium, F. Montgomery, Peterborough; Princie, T. Hetherington, Peterborough; Sedilia, B. Whitock, Toronto, and Zipzore, J. W. Rattenbury, Hamilton.

Phil Ha Ha came on and won the next three handily. The summary:

2:35 trot and pace—

Phil Ha Ha, Elmhurst, Keene	2	1	1
Sir Walter, Johnston, Port Hope	1	2	5
Montalve, Hodgins, Orillia	3	3	2
Prince Hetherington, Peterborough	7	6	4
Ora Medium, Montgomery, Peterborough	4	5	6
Sedilla, Whitcock, Toronto	5	7	7
Zipzerse, Rattenbury, Hamilton	6	4	6

Time, 2:20 1-2, 2:20 1-4, 2:20 1-2, 2:31 1-2.

During the afternoon the judging of several classes of light harness horses took place in front of the grandstand; a feature that proved most enjoyable judging by the interest shown by the crowd in the results.

The half-mile running race for a silver cup donated by Mr. Frank Clarke was won by W. Grady on Manita." W. Hickey, riding "King," was the other starter, the former winning easily. The chief excitement in this event was when the horses bolted into the fence around the judging rink, scattering the bystanders, but otherwise doing no damage.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

The Band of the 57th Regiment in charge of Lieut. Ghiddon rendered an enjoyable programme during the afternoon.

NIGHT PERFORMANCE.

There was a record crowd at the night performance, not only the largest paid attendance but also the largest actual attendance. The programme included the vaudeville acts as given in the afternoon, an exhibition of physical drill by a squad from the 80th Battalion, a display of fireworks and a concert by the 57th Regiment Band.

PROMINENT EXHIBITS

PROMINENT EXHIBITS.

It was generally admitted by those in charge of the many special exhibits on the Fair Ground yesterday that the publicity given to their goods was well worth the trouble and expense of exhibiting. The results, both in sales and in good prospects secured, proved the Peterborough Industrial to be a far-reaching means of advertising.

A THOUGHTFUL DONATION BY J. J. TURNER & SONS.

The Directors of the Peterborough Industrial, as well as thousands of visitors, to Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, for their thoughtful contribution to the Fair of the mammoth "Rest Tent," which they erected at their own expense, near the western entrance. This contribution was an additional evidence of the firm's hearty cooperation in everything calculated to promote the city's advancement. Their "Rest Tent" was a huge stretch of canvas with an open side, the interior of which was filled with comfortable lawn chairs for the free use of visitors. And the manner in which this service was appreciated was plainly evident during the Fair during both day and evening attractions being filled with visitors enjoying the restful shade which it afforded.

This energetic firm, which has done so much to help on the Peterborough Fair in the past, by their capacity for supplying large tents for Exhibition purposes, did not have time this year to put up their unusual attractive display of tents and allied goods, which have always been a live feature of the Fair. True to their enterprising instincts, however, the firm had secured their usual space on the grounds, where they hung out their familiar name-plate. They also exhibited the mammoth standard painting of "The Lions," which was specially painted by order of the Ontario Government for their exhibits at the Toronto Exhibition. This excellent work of art was executed by one of the firm's own artists, and was much admired, not only because of the patriotic sentiment it evoked, but for its true-to-nature interpretation and skilful workmanship.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons have been working night and day for many months filling hurried orders for the Militia Department, so that it was impossible to make their customary full display of tents, awnings, horse blankets, camping outfits, etc., which have served to show the extent of their "Made-in-Peterborough" lines.

MORGAN HARDWARE CO'S. CREDITABLE DISPLAY.

To big crowds of exhibitors, the Morgan Hardware Co. of 337 George Street, put up a fascinating semi-moving-picture demonstration of the resourcefulness of their young and growing hardware establishment. Their exhibit occupied one of the large spaces in the Main building, and was always a crowded corner. The centre of this exhibit was taken up with a complete laundry outfit for washing, wringing and ironing operated by electric power. This hand labour-saving outfit was inspected by many housekeepers, as it is adapted for ordinary homes, as well as larger residences. A conspicuous feature of the Morgan exhibit was the display of the famous Sherwin-Williams paints, varnishes, and "brighten-up" specialties. Building paper was also shown in great rolls; also Rayo coal oil lamps, Perfection coal-oil cook stoves and Perfection coal oil heaters. There were also samples of their galvanized tubs, clothes racks, wringers, auto strops, O'Cedar mop, etc. Another new line handled by this enterprising firm is the Higgins All Metal Window Ventilators and All Metal Weather Strips. No one could inspect this exhibit without complimenting the designer and dresser on the skill and taste bestowed in the arrangement of the display. It was in charge of Mr. Gibbon, who was pain-taking in explaining the varied lines to his host of enquirers.

From the Morgan exhibit was given away thousands of handy match-strike cards which will find a place in many homes.

"GOOD CHEER" RANGES AND THE STURGEON EXHIBIT

Among the strongest exhibits in the main building which is attracting so much attention is that of Messrs. R. G. Sturgeon & Co., the local expert sanitary plumbers and hot water heaters, of No. 392 Charlotte Street. "The Hydro Shop," as they have characterized their business, has certainly demonstrated that they can put up an exposition of their leading lines that does them credit.

The principal features of this exhibit consisted of "Good Cheer" cook stoves and ranges, made by the James Stewart Manufacturing Co. These ranges have been making fast friends wherever introduced. Their working qualities are highly spoken of, the fire-box especially having proved a great success. The "Good Cheer" is one of the handsomest pieces of kitchen furniture yet designed.

The firm also showed samples of their plumbing goods and sanitary fixtures, which are leading specialties as well as ther up-to-date household goods, including the Detroit "Jewel" gas range, and a handy, two-fuse combination range for burning gas, coal or wood—a range which is just now in good request. They also gave away to the public thousands of a printed leaflet entitled "Knit," for in that way you can "do your bit," giving directions for making hand-knitted regulation socks, with the compliments of The James Stewart Manufacturing Co., of Woodstock, makers of the "Good Cheer" ranges.

THE EMPIRE MECHANICAL MILKER

Crowds of farmers and dairymen were attracted to the interesting exhibit of the Empire Cream Separator Co., made by their energetic representative, Mr. Fred. J. Doughty of this city. The Mechanical Milker was inspected by hundreds, who were specially interested in the modus operandi of the new invention. Practical farmers who have had the machine installed say that the Milker works to their entire satisfaction. Cows that had sore teats before using the machine are now all right. One farmer says he has milked 37 cows in 40 minutes with two double units, one man and a girl, and a little practically little or no stripping after the machine. Two of the Empire "Sta-Rite" gasoline engines were exhibited in operation, and were much admired for their wonderful simplicity and power. The Empire Cream Separator was also exhibited, for which large sales are being made every year on account of its superior qualities in skimming and durability.

"OAK HALL" SYMBOLISES WHAT MEN SHOULD WEAR

The "Oak Hall" Clothing Store of George Street were the only exhibitors of Men's Clothing and Furnishings at the Fair. The enterprising local manager, Mr. J. H. Maher, put up a very interesting exhibit in their unique tent, on the main thoroughfare, which received many callers during the Fair. "Oak Hall" has been picking the winners in stylishness for men's and boys' wear and an excellent demonstration of their smart specialties was shown to exhibition visitors. Discriminating dressers were interested in this novel way the firm had of showing what the modes of the season indicated by the smart styles being portrayed from different patterns of the new suitings.

DE LAVAL DAIRY SUPPLY COMPANY

In a large tent opposite the main building the De Laval Dairy Supply Co. made a comprehensive exhibit of their products.

Apparatus and supplies of especial interest to the dairy farmers who believe in up-to-date methods as applied to dairy farming, including the world's standard De Laval Cream Separator, Alpha Gas and Gasoline Engines.

In the exhibit a separator was shown driven by a small gasoline engine, while a larger engine, in motion nearby, was of sufficient size for almost any farm work.

The Company handle Babcock testers and milk scales for those who believe in keeping a record of the performance of each individual member of their herd; milk and cream coolers, sanitary milk and cream cans, sanitary milk pails, etc. for farmers who dispose of their product for city milk supply, or to creameries. Also churns, butter workers, printers, etc. for farm dairy butter making.

Several of the Company's representatives were in charge of the exhibit to give information desired to interested visitors.

This exhibit was in every sense just such a display of modern machinery and supplies for farm and dairy as the up-to-date tiller of the soil feels well repaid in coming to see.

It was learned that the Company's business since its factories were established in Peterborough, has been very prosperous.

HEARD AND NORTHEY'S AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT

The agricultural warehouse of Messrs. Heard and Northey, 383 Water street, sent a large display of up-to-date farm machinery and implements which attracted crowds of farmers. This enterprising firm are the local representatives for the International Harvester Company, and exhibited on the grounds a number of their most important machines, among which were a double gang plough, a single sulky plough, a stiff tooth cultivator, and a Deering Coon binder. Their other exhibits were Loudan's litter carrier, cow stalls and stanchions, an ensilage cutter, a gasoline engine, a Primrose cream separator, and a Standard cream separator. This exhibit had many enquiries regarding these machines, and it was learned that the firm received some good prospects and sales. Hundreds of pretty I.H.C. stick pins were given away to visitors during the day.

The Heard and Northey Co. are also the local sales agents for the Maxwell Motor Car Co., the makers of the much talked of "Wonder Car" for 1916.

The Maxwell Touring Car is an improved car, and now selling at a lower price $925, fully equipped including electric starter and electric lights, demountable rims, high tension magnetto and other features of cars selling at twice its price. It is a light car, and built stronger than any previous model. It is strikingly handsome, easy on tires and gasoline, and claims to have the lowest repair bills. Mr. Jas. H. Northey assisted in explaining the merits of the Maxwell and other machines to the numerous callers interested in the display. Mr. Ford, the district sales agent for the Maxwell, was also on the ground, and assisted in demonstrating the claims of his car.

SUMPTUOUS EXHIBIT BY THE TURNBULL CO.

Right at the western entrance to the main building, where the stream of visitors was thickest, The Turnbull Co. of this city occupied a prominent location for an elegant showing of some of their newest goods. The well-arranged design of the dresser of the exhibit was that of a handsome, homelike dining room. A large dining table occupied the centre of the display, covered with spotless linen, and laid out with a full dinner service in French Lomoge china. A handsome reading lamp stood in the centre, reflecting a delicate pink ray of light, and cut-glass bouquet holders filled with roses and other flowers, enhanced the beauty of the spread. A complete set of table cutlery and spoons graced the tables, and every detail given to satisfy the taste of the most exacting housekeeper.

On the floor and walls of the dining chamber were to be seen exquisite examples of Wilton rugs, harmonizing with the design and the high-class goods shown. The design was not overcrowded, so that everything appealed for inspection.

There was also shown superb examples of Red Cross, Nurses' Military great coats and capes, as supplied to the nurses at the front. A walnut chair, upholstered in one of the new woven chintz patterns was much admired, as was a number of well-dressed wax figures in elegant silk costumes, dressed by their own skillful costumers. Two mammoth Japanese ceiling shades, with electroliers suspended underneath, were hung from the ceiling; and window drapings in many new designs of treatment, with fancy effects, were portrayed, and decorated the exhibit gracefully.

Many were the complimentary remarks of visitors as they they stood in crowds surveying the Turnbull display. It was a picturesque epitome of some of the dainty things from different departments of Peterborough's largest Terra Cotta and Steel Proof building, on George and Simcoe streets, with a store directory including five extensive spaces and a store service unexcelled anywhere.

FAREWELL TO YOUNG MISSIONARY GOING TO FAR OFF CHINA

Miss Lena Shearer Remembered by Members of St. Andrew's W.M.S.—Presentation of Gold Watch and Purse of Gold

In St. Andrew's church last evening there was a solemn and interesting service, during which Miss Lena Shearer was designated to the Presbyterian Mission field in Southern China. The Rev. Robt. Pogue presided and impressive addresses were delivered by the Rev. R. P. McKay, B. D., of the Foreign Mission Board, first to Miss Shearer and later to the congregation present. Rev. Geo. Craw represented the Peterborough Presbytery. A Bible was presented by the Women's Missionary Society of Canada by Mrs. Hugh Waddell, Presbyterial President, who also read an address to the young missionary from the St. Andrew's W. M. S. Auxiliary, and the presentation of a watch and a purse of gold from this Society was made by Mrs. Kerr.

Messages from the pastor, Rev. James Rollins, and the former minister, Rev. J. G. Potter, were also given and a large Bible in the Chinese language was presented by Dr. McKay on behalf of the Bible Society.

The pulpit was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion.

Miss Shearer sails early in October by the S. S. Montcagle to assume the superintendency of a hospital in China and will carry with her the affectionate interest of all who have been associated with her.

PRIVATE Doherty was six feet four in his socks; the sergeant was much shorter. The sergeant looked along the line. "Head up, there, Doherty!" he cried. Doherty raised his head. "Up higher," said the little sergeant. "There, that's better. Don't let me see your head down again."

"Am I to be always like this?" asked Doherty, staring away above the little sergeant's head.

"Your are."

"Then I'll say good-bye to ye, sergeant, for I'll never see yes again."

ONTARIO'S AIM IN LICENSE REDUCTION

Special to The Examiner

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—A striking demonstration of how inadequate are the plans of some people in regard to temperance reform in Ontario, is shown by an estimate appearing in some of the papers, that by 1916 there MAY be more than 1000 licenses in Ontario. At the present time the number is between 1700 and 1400.

There is no guarantee that the number will be reduced to 1000 but even if it is, is the existence of a thousand licensed places in Ontario anything to be proud about, particularly under war conditions and the difficult period which must follow the war?

In the West much more thoroughgoing methods are employed and with very different results.

In Saskatchewan in June there were 457 places where liquor could be obtained. Today that number has been reduced to 24.

In Alberta to-day there are about 400 licenses but the referendum to wipe out every one of them has already been passed and goes into effect on the 1st of July next.

The Manitoba referendum will also be on the question of total prohibition and it is likely that a similar policy will be adopted in British Columbia.

Where as, therefore, in the Western provinces the question is one of wiping out either all or practically all the licenses in Ontario there is talk in some quarters of being proud of that by 1916 there MAY not be more than 1,000 licenses.

There are distinct signs, however that public opinion in Ontario is going to demand within a short time much more drastic measures than any such a quarter-way course.

What Cures Eczema?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription, can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbours unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription. All druggists have D. D. D. 25c, $1.00.

Drop into our store to-day, just to talk over the merits of this wonderful Prescription. Ask also about D. D. D. Soap.

For a fancy work or sewing apron use coloured cloth instead of white. The relief our is helpful and restful to the eyes, especially if green is used. Green silk or plain green chambray are excellent materials to use offering a restful contrast to the white materials upon which one is so often working.

TOBACCO FOR THE SOLDIERS

The Citizens' of Peterborough Cigarette and Tobacco Fund --A Branch of the Overseas Club Tobacco Fund

The Overseas' Club was established years ago in London, England, having for its chief objects the rendering of individual service to the Empire, the drawing together in comradeship the British people in all parts of the world, and the maintenance of British supremacy upon the seas.

The headquarters of the club are at the General Buildings, Alwich, London W.C., England.

His Majesty, the King, is Patron of the club, and the vice-patrons are: H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, and the Right Hon. Lewis Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies, the other Officers of the Club being, President, Lord Northcliffe; Vice-Presidents, Earl Grey, Earl of Liverpool, Governor of New Zealand, Earl of Meath, Earl of Selborne, Viscount Gladstone, Viscount Bryce, Lord Denman, Viscount Buxton, Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, Lord Islington, Sir R. Munro - Ferguson, Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia, Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, Right Hon. Andrew Fisher, Prime Minister of Australia, Sir George Reid, High Commissioner for Australia, Sir Starr Jameson Bart. Lt.-General Sir Bevan Edwards, Chairman Royal Colonial Institute, Lt.-Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, Chief Scout, Sir T. Vansittart Bowater, late Lord Mayor of London, General Booth, Rev. and Hon Edward Lyttelton, the Headmaster of Eton, Sir John Kirk, Kennedy Jones, Esq., George R. Parkin, Esq., Secretary, Rhodes Trustees, Will Crooks, Esq; Hon Organizer Evelyn Wrench, Esq; Hon. Treasurer, C. F. Trucott, Esq., Hon. Auditor, E. Layton Bennett, Esq.

The club membership exceeds 125,000, and includes many of the most distinguished statesmen and men of affairs in all parts of the British Empire.

In Canada Sir Edward Walker, President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, is one of the leading and active supporters of the club's aims and objects, and Mr. Fane Sewell, Manager Canadian Bank of Commerce, Spadina and College Branch, Toronto, is the Hon. Corresponding Secretary of the club in Toronto.

The Peterborough Branch of the Overseas Club was formed with the special object of assisting the Overseas Club Tobacco Fund in securing moneys for the purpose of tobacco for the soldiers from the City of Peterborough and surrounding districts, the intention being that soldiers from our own midst should receive weekly a supply of cigarettes and tobacco, so much needed by the soldiers at the front.

The following well known citizens comprise the local executive: R. J. Soden, W. H. Dunsford, Manager Canadian Bank of Commerce, W. R. Morris, Frank Linton, F. D. Kerr, A. L. Killaly and J. E. L. Goodwill; the joint secretaries are, H. A. Cranfield and H. D. Dearle, and R. W. Travers, Manager of the Bank of Montreal at Peterborough, is Treasurer of the local branch.

The recent criticism contained in "Jack Canuck" and "The Toronto Sunday World," of Mr. Private, the leading representative of the Overseas Club, caused Mr. Dunsford to write Mr. Fane Sewell, of Toronto, Manager of the Bank of Commerce, at Spadina and College streets, Hon. Corresponding Secretary in Toronto.

Mr. Sewell's reply is so convincing that it is now published for the benefit of all subscribers and intending subscribers. The letter speaks for itself and is as follows:

Overseas Club Tobacco Fund.
Fane Sewell, Hon. Corresponding Secretary in Toronto,
Spadina and College.
Toronto, 16th September, 1915

W. H. Dunsford, Esq.,
The Canadian Bank of Commerce,
Peterborough.

My Dear Dunsford:

In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, Mr. Arthur Private, came properly accredited to this country by the Overseas Club, London, to organize the Tobacco Fund which he has done notwithstanding much opposition from many who hoped to get orders. He has never had any control of the funds, nor has one cent been diverted into any other channel than purchasing tobacco for the men at the front through the Overseas Club, London, to whom periodically drafts with relative lists of donors have been sent. The account is controlled by two well-known gentlemen in Toronto, one a banker, and the other a Justice of the Peace, and they can only draw on the funds in payment of sterling drafts. Every 25 cents is disbursed in tobacco under the organization, and any statement to the contrary is false. Every expense connected with this and any other organization of the Overseas Club is borne by the Overseas Club, London.

The Toronto World of 15th instant in the first column gave a comprehensive denial to the insinuations contained in the last copy of the Toronto Sunday World. Please read it. Write again if there are any who do not yet understand or will not believe the truth.

Yours truly,
"FANE SEWELL."

NOTES.

1. The tobacco for the Canadian soldiers is now being bought by the club from the Tuckett Company of Hamilton, parcelled and shipped by the Overseas Club under the supervision of the War Office. The Army Corps delivers to the trenches all carriage free.

2. All expenses are paid for by the Overseas Club itself, and are not paid out of the subscriptions in any way, and every cent subscribed is used in the purchase of tobacco for the soldiers.

3. No collector is paid.

4. All money collected is turned into the banks or post office, and sent to headquarters of the Overseas Club at London, England.

5. The Tobacco Fund commenced with the war, but the Overseas Club was started years ago, and is giving its time and money absolutely free of charge.

6. Twenty-five cents sends a soldier 50 cigarettes, one-quarter pound of tobacco, 2 packages cigarette papers, and one small box of matches.

7. Subscribers may contribute generally to the fund, or name any particular soldier, giving the proper address, and in the latter case the tobacco will be sent to the named individual together with a postal card addressed to the subscriber enabling the soldier to acknowledge the receipt of same.

8. The collectors for the fund are requested to commence active canvass on Monday, September 20th and the local executive ask the citizens for their generous support of this fund.

LOCAL BUSINESS WILL EXTEND ITS ACTIVITIES

Plans Have Been Completed for the Incorporation of Robert Hicks' Coal and Builders' Supply Business to a Joint Stock Company

THE OFFICERS

Information has been received that arrangements are completed for the incorporation of Mr Robert Hicks' Coal and Builders' Supply business into a Joint Stock Company, to be conducted under the name of Robert Hicks Company, Limited. A wide extension of the present activities of this old-established business is in process of organization, and a wholesale and retail business covering a large territory east of Toronto will be conducted in coal, lumber and building supplies.

Mr Hicks, it will be remembered, bought out the Rathburn Company's business here some fifteen years ago, and he has since built up a well-known and sound business of considerable proportions. Mr. Hicks, in the conduct of his business and in his various activities in the municipal and political life of the city, has made himself well and favourably known; the growth of his business and the public offices he had held indicate in some measure the confidence and esteem in which he is held by the public. It will, therefore, be no surprise that he has found it necessary to make preparations to meet increased business demands, which are sure to come when normal conditions again assert themselves.

Will be Present.

Mr. Hicks, as Managing Director, will have charge of the new Company in its extended operations, and associated with him in the direction of the Company's affairs will be Mr. A. E. Dawson, who, as its President, will contribute a wide and successful experience in commercial lines, and Miss Lena Gaskins, who has been accountant in the Robert Hicks business for the past few years. Mr. Dawson came to Peterborough from Toronto in April of this year, as Manager for Central Ontario for the Imperial Life Assurance Company, having been formerly connected with that Company at its Head Office as Inspector of Agencies.

Mr. Dawson is also interested in the Knight Brothers Company, Limited, of Burks Falls, an important lumber manufacturing concern, with a national reputation in the manufacture of hardwood flooring and trim. This firm is well known to the trade in Peterborough, among its recent contracts being the hardwood trim supplied for the new Empress Hotel, and it has now in hand the contract for the interior finish for Mr. A. W. Cressman's new residence.

The Robert Hicks Company, Limited will be the Eastern Sales Branch for this important industry, and the Murray Street yards and sheds will be utilized for stocking a complete line of the firm's products.

WELL KNOWN SINGER LEAVES

Mr. Tom Ward is leaving the city to-night for Quebec, where he has secured a position. Possessed of a fine baritone voice, he will be greatly missed, not only in St. John's choir, of which he has been a valuable member for over two years, but in musical circles generally. Mr. Ward has sung in nearly all the churches and concerts in the city, besides singing at patriotic rallies. The good wishes of all go with Mr. Ward and family to their new home. At the conclusion of the Harvest Festival service on Thursday night, the Rev. Canon Davidson thanked Mr. Ward for his valuable service to the church with his splendid voice, in expressions which were heartily endorsed by all the choristers.

Trades and Labour Notes

The excessive heat of the past week was possibly the reason that the number of delegates present at this week's meeting was not as numerous as usual. President J. J. Hartley occupied the chair.

Hon. Mr. Crothers, Minister of Labour, wrote that he was instituting inquiries into the matter that the Council had written him about, viz., the 17c per hour alleged to be paid men in a local factory working on ammunition cases. The Militia Department, to which a letter had been also sent, had taken no notice, up to the time of meeting.

The Council have documentary evidence to show that a 9-hour day clause in paving contracts had been promised by the City Fathers. The hours of the present show how this promise is kept.

A representative of the Printers, while visiting Toronto recently, took occasion to visit the Trades Toy Factory, the running of which is to help the unemployed along. The toys manufactured there are ingenious and instructive, as well as amusing, made to suit from the baby, upwards. Now that there is nothing further to say about making toys made in the land where the baby-killers are bred, Canadian-made toys should have a big boost, especially as they are manufactured by men whose lines of work are practically at a standstill, and will remain so until the European death-grip is loosened. The idea is to finish up and dispose of some of the specimens locally, and samples are expected in the city shortly and will probably make rapid sellers when real old Santa Claus is contemplating his next visit. The Trades Industrial Toy Association are responsible for this move and should obtain all support necessary when the motive has been fully grasped by the purchasing public.

Members of the Council had feelings of sorrow to express over the passing of John Malcolm Galbraith, who was acting as financial secretary when illness compelled his resignation. A letter of condolence to the widow and family will be sent by Secretary Wm. Stevens.

"From grave to gay" the Council went. A representative reported that in a certain prominent window a stirring poster was displayed "Your King and Country Need You. Join now!" This picture is attractive and useful as the delegates (and probably others) eyes wandered from the poster to the goods displayed. Then Charlie Chaplin wasn't in it with the talents the observant brother caused when he described a pair of hose in the same window with the terrible words affixed "Made in Germany."

Mrs. W. J. Greening

McFarlane, of Keene, with six others, was burned to death in a fire that occurred a week ago last night. The remains of the late Mr. McFarlane were brought to the city last night by the deceased's brother, Mr. Colin McFarlane, of Viceroy, Sask., and were interred this afternoon in the Little Lake cemetery, beside those of his father and mother.

RANKS AMONG THE WORLD'S BEST HOTELS.

Lieutenant Colonel W. Ronaldson Clark of the India Medical Service has been a recent visitor to Ottawa, and in a letter just received by the Grand Trunk officials he says:

"Please convey to the Manager of your hotel in Ottawa that my experience of hotels both in Europe and on this side of the Atlantic, is probably quite as considerable as that of the gentleman who has lately written to several Canadian papers on the subject of the "Chateau Laurier," and that I thoroughly endorse all he said with regard to this Hotel. I believe it to be one of the best and best managed I have ever come across in all my wanderings in Europe, Asia, Africa and America."

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as correct this 6th day of January, 1915. — Wm. Hawkins, Sen. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. It will only cost you a quarter to buy a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put this medicine to the test. We are sure that you will be thankful to the writer for describing his cure to you. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited Toronto.

THE SPIRIT OF THE GIFT

A Conversation of Mother and Daughter Ancat Their Share in the Jam Shower For the Soldiers

"What are we going to do about the jam shower next week, mother?" asked an only daughter the other day. It was during the afternoon lull in their menage and the question was as abrupt as it seemed unnecessary. For the mother replied that it was simply a matter of selecting a few jars and taking them to the central depot on the allotted day.

"It seemed to me," continued Mildred, "that we shouldn't wait until the last minute and then make a haphazard selection. What did you think of giving?"

"Well, I hadn't thought about it at all," replied the mother. "Of course we must give something. We haven't nearly as much fruit done down as last year, but I think some of that plum jam would do nicely."

"Surely it would, but we have far more of plums, not counting what you canned, than the other kinds. As I understand it this fruit is for the soldiers at the front, and they deserve the best we have. Let us send some of the raspberry or strawberry."

"But we've only a few of these and you know how your father likes them."

"That's just the thought, mother. We have nothing to give but the few socks we make, and I think we should give the best fruit we have."

The silence that followed possibly covered the thoughts of the mother whose only son had died suddenly six years ago when he was fifteen. Mildred was two years his junior.

"I was thinking of your father's preference dearie; but I know he would be only too glad to give whatever we could. But the plum jam is really delicious."

"Of course it is," was the reply, "but we prefer both the raspberry and strawberry, and if we give either of them they would be something of a sacrifice on our part."

"That's true," added the mother, and after a pause, "but are we sure the soldiers will get them?"

"We needn't worry about that," observed Mildred. "And, anyway, our share in the gift is simply the giving. Others will have the duty of forwarding the cases."

The mother's thought was dwelling on the daughter's main suggestion. With a little sigh she remarked that the poor boys did deserve the best. "As you say," she added. "We can only give the best fruit we have. The strawberries would be best, probably both strawberries and raspberries."

"That's the idea," replied the daughter with enthusiasm.

"We could send half a dozen jars of both, We can't carry them very well. Six altogether should be enough."

"We can telephone an express man to call for them," Mildred proposed. "That will be the best way."

"And if they will accept a dozen, we can send six more. We don't want to be conspicuous eh?" The mother's voice carried a note of satisfaction that comes with a kindly act, and her eye was alight with the love that generates the spirit of self-sacrifice.

Mildred had another idea.

"We should have been asked to write our names on the jars or some of them. We could stick paper on them. It would only be a name, but there would be some little personal touch brought right into the lines."

"Now, you're becoming sentimental dear," replied the mother.

ATONEMENT DAY AMONG THE HEBREWS

To-day Means Much to the Hebrews Who Fast and Worship All Day

To-day is the Day of Atonement, the holiest day in the Jewish calendar. The festival is ordained in Leviticus 16:29-34 and 23:27-32, as the Sabbath of Sabbaths,, and is set apart entirely for fasting, praying, and repentance. The threat of destruction of the person not observing the fast, as well as the sacred character which was impressed upon the day from the time if its institution) may largely account for its strong hold on the Jewish people for over three thousand years. All adults, male and female, abstain from food and drink for twenty-four hours, and spend the entire day in their places of worship. With rare exceptions the Hebrews all over the world will close their warehouses, offices, stores, and factories, and transact no business.

ORIGIN OF DIFFERENT FOODS WHICH WE EAT

HOW seldom we think as we partake of the different kinds of food with which our tables are spread of the origin of many of the different vegetables, fruits, etc., as, for instance, the potato, which is served daily on our tables in many and varied forms, and whose history carries us far back.

The potato is said to have first been grown in the United States; and from there it was taken to France, where it was first used as a flower and later with some idea of making a salad. But in the reign of Louis XV. the potato, the flowers of which had served as a nosegay for His Majesty, was discovered by the chemist Parmentier to have tubers that were edible and very nourishing as human food. Sir Walter Raleigh, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, presented the Queen with the first potato in England; but not for 200 years was it used as a food, and even then it was thought by labor leaders to be a conspiracy of the capitalists to demean the British working classes and reduce them to the level of beasts.

But at last the world has consented to use the plant that produced the Parmentier bouquet as a food. We use it baked, boiled, fried, in salads, cakes, soup, bread, in so many different ways can we serve most palatable and nourishing dishes. It is one of our staple food products. I have from time to time given potato recipes; below are a few additional ones:

Potato Cakes

To one and a half cups cold mashed potatoes add a well-beaten egg. Mix thoroughly and shape into round flat cakes about one-half inch thick. Fry in butter or dripping until brown on both sides.

Potato Cakes, No. 2

Two cups flour, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup finely mashed potatoes, milk or water. Mix flour, salt and baking powder. Then add potatoes and water or milk enough to make a soft dough. Turn the whole into a well-greased frying pan and cook slowly, turning occasionally, adding a little more lard each time, until cake is well cooked through and a nice brown on either side. (This is a nice tea dish).

Potato Croquettes

One quart cooked mashed potatoes, butter size of an egg, salt, pepper, one egg and a cup of milk or cream. Mould into small balls and fry in lard or butter.

Potato Puffs

Take two cups mashed potatoes, season and stir in two tablespoons melted butter. Beat to a cream and add two eggs [illegible] and one teacup milk or cream. Bake in a deep dish in quick oven until nicely browned.

Meat and Potato Cakes

Mix with two cups seasoned mashed potatoes a well-beaten egg and add a cup of cold chopped beef or ham. When thoroughly mixed, shape into flat balls, roll in bread crumbs, fry a golden brown.

Vegetable Salad

Slice cooked potatoes and turnips in a salad dish with a little onion. Slice or break through cold cauliflower. Pour over this mayonnaise dressing.

Dandelion Potato Salad

Wash young dandelion leaves in several waters, cut fine and add to potato salad made with potato, bacon (cut fine), salt and pepper and French dressing.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissues from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

IT a recent wedding the bride was Miss Jane Helper and the bridegroom was Mr. Newton Lord. The bridegroom, however, was very angry when he saw in the newspaper an account of their wedding, headed in the usual way: "Lord—Helper."

Sulphur is a great germ killer. Feed a little to the hens to ward off disease. A spoonful or two in the mash once a week will be sufficient.

ST. LAWRENCE SUGAR

HAS LONG SINCE PASSED THE EXPERIMENTAL STAGE

St. Lawrence is not a new or untried sugar, in an experimental stage, but a sugar which has a reputation behind it — a sugar which under the severest and most critical tests, shows a sugar purity of 99.99 per cent., as per Government analysis. For successful jams and preserves you can always absolutely depend upon St. Lawrence Sugar as its quality never varies. Remember, the slightest foreign matter or impurity in sugar will prevent your jellies from setting and cause your preserves to become sour or ferment.

FOR PRESERVING

It is well worth your while to ask for St. Lawrence Extra Granulated, and to make sure that you obtain it.

CAMP ON GOLF GROUNDS.

London Military Camp Said to Be the Finest in Canada.

London is said to have the finest military camp in Canada. London admits it and it must be so. It is composed of the 33rd and 34th Battalions, full strength the 29th Battery, a field hospital and Ambulance Corps, Headquarters Staff, and a Home Guard, located in the Barracks. Twenty-six hundred men under canvas, and a city of tents set upon a hill, so that all may see, testify that this war is Canada's war, and that the rural districts of Western Ontario intend to do "their bit."

Typical of the changed activities of the nation from those of a year ago is the fact that what is now an armed camp, bristling with guns and echoing to the bugle's call, was a golf course last year. The company of regulars has long since vacated the Barracks, and is fighting on the fields of Flanders. The golfers are gone—no one knows where. Maybe they enlisted in chagrin. The place of the departed regulars is taken by a stalwart Home Guard, which does police duty for the camp. It is said that six of them arrested one of the 34th men the other night. They are called the "Safety Firsts" by the men in camp.

The Barracks stand on a sandy hill looking south over the city. Around them are some fifty acres of level plain, breaking away in a steep hill along the southern border. An ideal site for a camp. The hill, which once formed a series of excellent natural hazards for the golfers, is now lined at its crest with trenches where the men learn to handle the spade and pick, a very necessary training for a war of attrition. Here, too, at night they await attacking parties and learn patience and the wisdom of the stars.

The camp grounds are high and dry and make a splendid spectacle, with their 500 tents in orderly array and the "cleanest lines of any camp in the country." Ont in front, on what used to be the long second hole, and a tefror to those who slice or pull, can be seen, any morning, half a brigade at drill, letter-perfect and wearing "cows' breakfasts." The sanitation features are almost perfect. There is an abundance of running water, and shower baths are as plentiful as the most fastidious could desire.

There is keen rivalry between the two battalions, and the interest the men take in the look of the camp is evident as soon as one enters the gate. The kitchens are ranged along the north side, and a small garden is set in front of each. Whitewash is plentiful; there are little walks and squares of whitewashed stones, while whitewashed ropes enclose the officers' quarters, and whitewashed everything-that-is-ugly makes for the appearance of a Spotless Town.

Lucky officers—each has electric light in his tent, a wooden floor, camp bed, and dresser. The men sleep ten to a tent, feet to the pole. "Grub" is excellent, if the officers' mess is any criterion. The men seem happy, though they were somewhat upset at being left behind when a detail was drafted into the second contingent. But they have settled down again to the routine of preliminary training.

A wise sergeant of the 34th discovered that the Y. M. C. A. canteen was making money and the men decided that they might just as well get what profit there was for themselves. So they started a canteen. The 33rd followed suit, and with the profits they opened a moving picture show with a change of reel three times a week.

Incalculable Eddies.

But in the one case as in the other there are eddies and currents which are incalculable and which may one day run so strongly in a certain direction as to shake even the powerful foundation of the great fabric, whether in France or in Ireland. Boulanger, the Panama scandal, the extreme legislation against the Catholic church, more than once went nearly wrecking the French Republic; it was even menaced when Madame Humbert's magic safe was opened and when Madame Caillaux's bullet killed Calmette. We are not subject to such sudden and personal shocks in Ireland, though it must be remembered that the personal misfortune of Parnell kept Ireland divided for ten long years and postponed Home Rule for more than twenty years.

But still we have our eddies and currents and, of course, even yet we are not free from the weaknesses which have have so often nearly ruined our race at critical moments in its history, when Ireland had to choose between right tactics and iron unity which have so often nearly ruin-ties and above all disunion which brought a new century of slavery and ruin. It must also be remembered that in order to make the Irish cause win, we have to procure a result which scarcely any nation has ever been able to produce, namely, the absolute unanimity of all Nationalist Ireland. That unanimity France could not achieve even when she was fighting the coalition of all Europe, nor America during her Revolution, and still less when in the Civil War she was fighting for the unity of the nation. We have our difference of class, of creed, and of interest in Ireland as in every country, and different classes, creeds and interests often find it hard even in the face of the greatest common national danger to forget their conflicts. For instance, in Ireland, the success of Mr. William O'Brien in separating the great county of Cork from the rest of national Ireland in the united fight for Home Rule, is largely due to the century-old struggle between the small farmer and the agricultural labourer on the question of wages and other labour conditions.

The Sinn Fein Movement.

The Sinn Fein movement has never been one of the serious troubles of the Irish party. That little fraction is almost entirely manned from cranks who are very often government officials, either in the post office or other public departments, with a sprinkling of men who have seen in the very praiseworthy and healthy development of the revival of the Irish language and of interest and pride in Irish history, a means of organizing impossible schemes of separation. In Ireland, too, the representatives of the old and evil state of things when every man who betrayed Ireland was certain of large and settled employment by the Government in what was then the hopeless morass of Irish life, find it convenient to cloak their hatred of the Irish Party by assuming the attitude of the Sinn Feiner. They are the sham cranks the knaves that pretend to be fools.

Another and in some respects the most serious trouble which Mr. Redmond had to confront when he threw in his authority to the side of England, France, Russia and their Allies in the war against Germany, was the strong reactment which was felt in Ireland among the clergy and even among large bodies of laity against the extreme anti-clerical legislation and pronouncements of the French government during the last twenty years. This resentment found open and even violent expression from some of the pulpits in the opening days of the war. But as time went on Ireland began to realize that the existence of Ireland and of France for both Catholic and Freethinker was threatened by the savage and wanton invasion by the Germans, and the fact was brought home to the Irish mind by the sacred union, as they call it, which the German invasion had created between all creeds and classes in France. The Irish mission to Paris helped to bring this fact more clearly to the Irish mind, and especially the splendid speech of the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris, who related among other facts the enormous number of priests who, without complaint, without reference to the violation of the Immunity to priests from military service which had been guaranteed in the past legislation of France, had gone gladly and proudly into the ranks of the soldiers who are fighting and dying for France. This brought to an end all serious talk about the support of Atheistic France by Catholic Ireland.

Factions Coalesced.

Nevertheless, when the coalition ministry came into existence and especially when it included such a strong opponent to Home Rule as Sir Edward Carson, all the different elements of faction coalesced and there was a fierce and concentrated attack on Mr. Redmond's leadership and on the Irish Party. The "Independent," a halfpenny paper of large circulation owned by Mr. William Murphy, a highly successful financier, led this attack. For some inscrutable reason Mr. Murphy has made for years the destruction of the Irish party his chief object in life. Cool, level-headed, ruthless, this singular man has pursued that purpose with a steadiness and a craft that are among the modern marvels of Irish life. Just as in England, Lord Northcliffe has devoted himself to the overthrow of the present ministry—again for reasons quite inexplicable—so Mr. Murphy devoted himself for weeks to a campaign of disparagement and audible criticism in order to compass the destruction of Mr. Redmond's leadership and of the Irish party.

This accounts for the fact that while in England political meetings have ceased and everything is for one war purpose or another, Ireland has seen a whirlwind campaign with vast gatherings going on from one end of the country to the other. It became necessary in the view of Mr. Redmond and of his associates to make an open appeal to the country and to demand its verdict on the struggle between factions, and on Redmond's leadership and the existence of the Irish party. These meetings have produced the extraordinary result that only at one of them did a single man venture to repeat the indictment of the Party by Mr. William Murphy, and this man did not find a seconder for his resolution. But facts speak more strongly than words as to the overwhelming triumph of Redmond's policy. These facts are to be found in the recapitulation of the figures of recruiting in Ireland which Mr. Redmond made in his speech at Waterford. The passage is long but it is so important that I must quote it in full. Mr. Redmond said:

What Ireland Has Done.

"In this city, that I have the honour to represent, I am told that something between 1,600 and 2,000 men have gone to the front. Our position is this: that in addition to the many, many thousands of Irishmen who were in the army at the commencement of the war, and the many thousands of reservists who rejoined the colours from Ireland when the war commenced, we have, according to the statement made by the general officer commanding the troops in Ireland, General Friend, in his speech the other day at Warrenpoint, we have sent 21,000 new recruits to the old Irish regiments who were in the army originally from Ireland. Well, now, in addition to that, we have raised in Ireland for the new army three completely new divisions. I don't think people all realize what a division means. A division means a complete army in itself, with artillery, infantry, and everything, and each division consists of between 16,000 and 20,000 men. We have raised three complete divisions; in other words we have raised an Irish army corps for the new army. These three divisions are the Ulster Division, so because mark you, I am not seeking to draw any distinction between Ulster and the rest of Ireland, and any credit I give to Ireland in this connection I am only too delighted it should be shared by men who differ from me in politics and religion. I am speaking of Ireland as Ireland, and not for any part of Ireland do I make this claim.

"Here are the three divisions which Ireland has raised: the Ulster Division, trained in Ulster; the Tenth Division, trained at the Curragh and Dublin, and the Sixteenth Division trained in the County Cork. Now, of these three divisions, the Tenth has already gone to the front. It is the first of the three Irish divisions which has gone to the front. It is at the Dardanelles, and already we have had word of the gallantry of the men there and already we have seen in the casualty list the toll which has been paid by these gallant brothers of ours from the Curragh and from Dublin. The Ulster Division has left Ireland, and is now in England undergoing its training and will shortly go to the front. The Sixteenth Division, the one that was trained at Cork, and from which 120 men were taken, unfairly, as I thought and think, that division, I am able to tell you, is practically complete. I received from an official source the day before yesterday the statement that according to the established number of battalions fixed by the War Office, the Sixteenth Division is now only 150 men short. I have been officially informed by the War Office that the Sixteenth Division is immediately going to England to complete its training as the Tenth Division did before it went to the Dardanelles and as the Ulster Division is doing at the present moment; and that the Sixteenth Division is to go to the front as a unit. In addition to the old Irish regiments who were in the army at the commencement of the war; in addition to the 35,000 recruits who have gone to the old regiments; in addition to the reservists who have gone; we will have in the firing line from Ireland three new divisions of an entire Irish army corps."

This is Ireland's answer to Mr. Redmond's challenge to his leadership and to his policy. This is Ireland's judgment written in heroic blood as to the merits of the struggle between European liberty and German despotism.

Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

WOULD YOU CONSIDER
a proposition making provision for your family in the event of death, or, if living, provision for old age?

A "BURNT, G SHAME."

Canada's Fire Loss Is the Heaviest in the World.

At a recent meeting of the Berlin (Ontario) Board of Trade the following facts were brought out in a resolution placed on record:

The fire loss per capita in Canada is greatly in excess of that of any other civilized country in the world, and our national position in this regard is constantly becoming worse instead of better, until at the present time our Canadian fire losses, in proportion to population, are approximately six times greater than those of Great Britain, France, or Germany, with a correspondingly high rate of insurance premium; and in the past ten years the average annual loss in ten British cities has been but 50 cents per head as against an average annual loss of $3.55 per head in ten Canadian cities from Halifax to Vancouver, with an average rate of premium in the British cities of but 22 cents per $100 of insured value as against an average of $1.46 in Canadian cities.

The fire losses of $14,000,000 paid by Canadian companies in 1913 would at the British rate of premium be reduced to $2,300,000, thus bringing about an annual saving of nearly $12,000,000, which, in every decade, would amount, with compound interest, to more than the Dominion Government's contribution thus far for war purposes; it being equally true that this huge sum represents perhaps less than half of the annual losses directly or indirectly resulting from fire, thus justly representing us in the eyes of European countries, on the one hand, as a nation of incendiaries, and, on the other, as absolute incompetents, and fully authorizing the verdict that the result is not only a national criminal waste, but also a "burning shame."

In the United States, though their rate of loss is considerably lower than Canada's, the National Fire Protection Association of that country, in a recent report, referred to their "reckless and unceasing waste" as an "impoverishment of the nation."

Our own losses are continually deplored and lamented, not only by our insurance companies, but by the public generally, and remedial action is continually urged along Provincial lines, as yet without avail.

The Canadian Commission of Conservation has achieved excellent results in the conservation of our national waterpowers in the great reduction of forest fires along our railways, has initiated a movement for conservation on broad national lines for city planning, and has sought out and applied means to conserve our national resources in other directions, thus making it indispensable that they have the organization to take up this most important and directly beneficial feature of national conservation with every prospect of success.

The Berlin Board of Trade requested the Canadian Commission of Conservation to take up this matter as a special department of its work with expert assistance for formulating recommendations to the different Provinces, and directing an effort in Canada to approximate gradually to the European standard, and concerted action in a movement of this kind is more likely to bring results.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—King George proposed the health of President Wilson in a toast at a banquet given in Windsor Castle on the night of September 4th, according to mail despatches printed by the New York Sun to-day. A number of American women attended the banquet, the Sun said. The King was quoted as making the following speech: "It will, I think, be an everlasting testimony to the wisdom and good sense of American people that in the most trying and difficult circumstances well nigh impossible to conceive, they stood loyally united behind President Wilson. Mr. Wilson's action throughout the period of difficulty had justified the faith and confidence of the American people." This is the first occasion, the Sun's correspondent added, that the health of the President of the United States had been proposed at an English Royal table by a Sovereign.

LONDON, Sept. 18. According to despatches from Berlin, partially admitted by despatches from Petrograd, the Russian city of Vilna is now surrounded on three sides by strong German forces. Its evacuation by Russia seems an early possibility.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—That the representatives of the German Government directly approached the British Foreign Office in the latter part of August with the object of discovering Great Britain's peace terms was a statement made by a passenger arriving to-day on the Baltic, whose source of information is excellent. The German agents were courteously received, it is stated. What actually happened in the conference is unknown.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—A conference between Sir Cicil Spring-Rice, British Ambassador, and Lord Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, and member of the Anglo-French financial commission, was held at the Biltmore this afternoon. That some vital move was being arranged in the matter of a loan to the Allies was quickly assumed in financial circles, and there was great speculation concerning the point at issue. It was assumed by many persons that the commissioners and American bankers had arrived at deadlock, and the Ambassador's aid was sought to arrange for concessions from both parties.

TORONTO, Sept. 18. — General Synod to-day decided not to change the name of the Church of England in Canada.

LONDON, Sept. 18. — Newspapers throughout England to-day devoted a large part of their columns to the report that several ministers had threatened to resign unless the government took a strong stand for conscription. The majority of the newspapers expressed the opinion that Premier Asquith and First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour possessed sufficient strength to frustrate any such attempt to force the government's hand. The general tenor of comment was that the country is not against conscription if the Government, including Asquith, believes it necessary.

EXHIBITING AT FAIR FOR PAST 60 YEARS

Mr. A. E. Kidd of the Customs House has been exhibiting at the Peterborough and other Fairs in this district for the past sixty years without interruption. His name is in the list of poultry prize winners to-day but years ago he used to show cattle, sheep, hogs, grains, etc. In fact since he was a boy of 10 Mr. Kidd has been a member of the local Agricultural Exhibition. His first entry was at the Norwood fair and later he was the largest prize winner when Peterborough had the four counties show here. Mr. Jos. Redmond was second to him on that occasion.

Simple Way to Have Beautifully Wavy Hair

Lustrous, fluffy, wavy hair plays an important part in the scheme of beauty. A heated iron should not be used to give the desired wavy effect for it destroys the life, lustre and the fluffiness of the hair. It is far better to use plain silmerine, which curls the hair more effectually, more lastingly, and at the same time keeps it beautifully soft, "light," and glossy. It is beneficial instead of harmful, and it is such a simple thing to apply the liquid before retiring, using a clean tooth brush for the purpose, and drawing this down the hair from root to tip. Very different from the tiresome, fussy, odorous curling iron method.

Pure silmerine in liquid form may be found in any drug store and a few ounces will last a very long time. It is neither sticky nor greasy and leaves no sediment, spots or streaks. The hair will be quite manageable, no matter what the style of coiffure and it will stay in curl even in damp or warm perspiry weather.

Mrs. (Dr.) Archer Dead in India

Wife of Medical Missionary Passes Away in the Punjab

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dickson, 60 Boswell avenue heard yesterday by cable of the death of their daughter, Mrs. Dr. George Archer, in the Punjab, India. Previous cables had informed them of their daughter's illness, which lasted about four weeks. It was only a year ago last September 1st that she was married to Dr. Archer, a medical missionary of the Church Missionary Society of the Church of England, who was at that time home in the city on furlough. Shortly after their marriage they left for India.

The late Mrs. Archer spent the greater part of her life in Waco, Texas, where she was well known as a church worker, having been the founder of the Evangelia Settlement in that city. When her parents moved to Toronto three years ago she went to New York to take a course in Bible study and had been in that city until only a few months before her marriage. Besides her parents she leaves a sister at home, and a brother, Dr. J. R. Dickson, a medical missionary in China.

The cable was read at the Synod meeting in Trinity College and a message of condolence will be sent to Dr. Archer.

Dr. Archer is a native of Campbellford and has many friends in Peterborough who will sympathize with him in his bereavement.

May Invade Switzerland

Germany Reported to Be Contemplating Violation of Neutrality

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Switzerland is being drawn nearer and nearer to actual participation in the war.

A despatch from Zurich today states that the fourth division of the Swiss army has been called out for active service.

The Echo intimates that the Germans may invade Switzerland in order to attack the unprotected frontier of France, south of the present sphere of operations.

Rumours are persistent that great military preparations are under way in upper Alsace," says the Echo. "There is apprehension in certain quarters that Switzerland is to be invaded. The fact is regarded with suspicion that General Wille, commanding the fourth division of the Swiss army, is a brother-in-law and a son-in-law to two officers of high rank in the German army. General Wille's wife is a daughter of Major Von Bismarck, of the German army and General Wille has been accused of having German sympathies.

Basel in Danger.

"At the terminus of their strategic railway opposite Basel, the Germans have a strong military station. They could throw 50,000 troops into Switzerland in a few hours.

"Basel lies immediately under the guns of a German fortress."

Munich Scientists Find a Cure For Hay Fever

The successful treatment of hay fever by calcium salts is the subject of a short sketch published in the current number of the American Review of Reviews.

Two Munich scientists Dr. Emmerich and Loew, have recently been studying the effects of these salts in various specific diseases, says the article, which then mentions an account in a Berlin newspaper, Die Naturwissenschaften. This is summarized from another paper. The article says that assimilation of food is essentially increased by an adequate provision of calcium salts, which can be due only to an increased formation of ferments as proved by the experiment as follows:

"But this is an activity of the cell nucleus as proved by the experiments of Hofer. Further to this there are the strengthening of the body, an increase in the bactericidal action of the blood known as the phagocytosis and the creation of a sense of resistance against various influences tending to produce illness. Calcium salts also soothe the heightened irritability of the nerves, as the tendency to sneezing etc.

Spells Relief.

According to the article in question, says the Review, here are very few of the so-called constitutional diseases which cannot be quickly controlled by any curative process as can hay fever by calcium chloride, a fact which will spell relief for many thousands of sufferers, to whom the golden-rod and other pollen bearing weeds and flowers which line our roads in late summer and early fall are signals of hardly borne torment or hardly won immunity by flight."

The concluding paragraph says that many other investigators are publishing evidence as to successful handling of diseases of the most diverse character by the calcium treatment — in short it is claimed that this treatment is highly effective acting physiologically by its effect on nutrition.

Few Russian Troops Were Trapped By the German Occupation of Vilna

Three Hundred Thousand Russian Troops Falling Back From Vilna Are Under Heavy Attack by the Germans.--Position of Russians is Very Critical.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 20.—It is apparent that few Russian troops have been trapped in the German occupation of Vilna. Austrians continue to lose territory at the southern end of the line.

Three hundred thousand Russian troops, falling back from the region of Vilna, are under a heavy attack on both flanks by the Germans, who are making herculean efforts to surround them.

Their position is more critical than that of any Russian army since the great Austra-German campaign began. But every confidence was expressed here to-day that the Slavs will either make good their retirement without being forced into a general battle, or failing in this, will smash their way out of the German trap.

The Germans have suffered enormous losses in the past few days' fighting in their attempts to encircle the Russian Vilna armies.

Cavalry forces attacking the right of the retiring Slav forces are being mowed down by Russian artillery, but persist in their attacks.

The Bavarians are attempting to cut off Russian retreat from the south, and are within a few miles of the Lida-Baranovitshi railway, but are meeting with most stubborn resistance and suffering unparalleled losses.

Will Pay Nearly Forty Millions To United States For Privilege of Buying Goods in America

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Allies are ready to pay the United States from twenty-seven million five hundred thousand to forty-four million dollars for the privilege of purchasing goods in America.

The Anglo-French Financial Commission was expected to-day to put the stamp of its approval on a great credit loan on from five hundred million to eight hundred million dollars.

Practically all details have been cleared up in conferences of the last few days. The loan will take the form of short term notes, issued and guaranteed by British and French governments, and maturing in from five to ten years.

These notes, which are to be offered to the public, at par, will bear five per cent. interest, and the underwriting syndicate will receive an additional half per cent. for flotation, a mere bagatelle of two million five hundred thousand dollars.

WAS PERMITTED TO LAND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Jas. F. J. Archibald, newspaper correspondent, who acted as messenger for Austro-Hungarian Ambassador Dumba, arrived in New York early to-day on the liner Rotterdam. He was not stopped by Government authorities and was permitted to land like any other passenger.

"I really do not know anything about the situation here, and if there is any contemplated prosecution, it will be most unjust as I am perfectly innocent," Archibald declared. "I merely took a letter unwittingly. This has caused all this unfortunate trouble."

Archibald declined to discuss further the incident which resulted in the request for Ambassador Dumba's recall.

SLEEP DESTROYERS
Tea and Coffee

She suffered from nervousness to-day and sleeplessness by night.

"Up to three years ago," writes a young woman, "I was in the habit of drinking coffee freely and did not realize that it was injuring my health. Tea contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee. Till I was finally made the victim of nervous headaches so violent that I was compelled to give up household activities and stay in bed much of the time. Then insomnia came upon me and the wretchedness of sleepless nights was added to the agony of painful days.

"This lasted until I was persuaded by a friend to give up coffee entirely and use Postum. The result was, in less than a week I began to feel a change for the better; gradually my nerves grew stronger and I began to sleep at nights.

Day by day the improvement continued and gradually, I was restored to health. My headaches left me, the nervousness passed away entirely, and I enjoyed good, sound sleep at night.

Summer Resorts Are Busy Hives of Industry These Days.

Everywhere you turn this summer you find an unceasing activity in Red Cross work. In Muskoka, where hundreds of Toronto people go, at the "Royal Muskoka" there and at other places, women are meeting every week for work.

"We are going to do Red Cross work at Nepahwa to-morrow," writes someone from that summer spot.

Up at Georgian Bay, at Go Home Bay, the same spirit of service broods over the summer homes. There everyone assembles once a week at a certain centre where sewing and surgical supplies to be made up, are given out. Cottagers arrive from all around lovely Go Home Bay, coming in sail boats, canoes, rowboats, or electric launches. The work done through the past week is taken there and packed, a fresh supply is provided, and the little boats hurry away home again, laden with their Red Cross work.

Up at Stoney Lake similar work is going on, in fact the summer resort not engaged in Red Cross work is yet to be found.

Down at Metis, in Quebec, or "Little Metis" as it is correctly speaking, there is quite a summer colony of Toronto people, and they are doing all kinds of patriotic work. They have secured a summer club house and have transformed its quiet into a hive of workers. Probably when the members of the little summer colony drift back to their homes, the inhabitants of Little Metis will carry on the work which is gaining for their quelt place by the sea, a niche in the history of to-day.

In town and city, over at Niagara, almost within shout of Niagara Camp, ladies are living the summer months with a background of Red Cross. Every tea, every bridge and garden party, every game of tennis or golf brings in more for the needs of the soldiers.

Here at the Island both Hanlan's and Centre Island have organized and women are earnestly doing their bit.

Everything else seems small when compared to the importance of keeping that endless stream of all that may be needed, making its way across the ocean.—as we used to say when children "keeping the pot boiling."—Helen Ball in Toronto Globe.

Points About a Good Horse.

There are some points which are valuable in horses of every description. The head should be proportionately large and well set on. The lower jawbones should be sufficiently far apart to enable the head to form an angle with the neck, which gives it free motion and a graceful carriage and prevents it bearing too heavily on the hand. The eye should be large, a little prominent, and the eyelids fine and thin. The ear should be small and erect and quick in motion. The top ear indicates quitness and stubbornness. When too far back there is a disposition to mischief.

At dinner that evening I asked Reggendyke point blank if he could call to mind a marriage in New York society that might fit the principals in this puzzling case.

"I'm sorry, sir, but—but I can't do it. I promised her this morning I wouldn't let it be dragged out of me with redhot tongs."

CHAPTER X.

I Receive Visitors.

THE east wing of the castle was as still as a mouse on the day my house party arrived. Grim old doors took on new padlocks, keyholes were carefully stopped up, creaking floors were calked, and yet I trembled. My secret seemed to be safely planted, but what would the harvest be?

Elsie Hazzard presented me to her friends, and with lordly generosity I presented the castle to them.

There was a Russian baron whom for brevity's sake I'll call Umovitch. There was a Viennese gentleman of twenty-six or eight, I heard, but who looked forty. His name was Piess. He was a plain mister. The more I saw of him the first afternoon the more I wondered at George Hazzard's carelessness. Then there were two very bright and charming Americans, the Billy Smiths. He was connected with the American embassy at Vienna, and I liked him from the start. The baron was in the Russian embassy and was really a very nice boy.

"And this Mr. Piess, who is he?" I asked.

Elsie was looking at the ratish young man with a pitying expression in her tender blue eyes.

"Poor fellow!" she sighed. "He is in great trouble, John. We hoped that if we got him off here where it is quiet as might be able to forget. Oh, but I am not supposed to tell you a word of the story! We are all sworn to secrecy."

"Women," said Billy impressively.

"Then it's easily patched," said I. "Like cures like."

"You don't understand, John," said Elsie gravely. "He was married to a beautiful"—

"Now, Elsie, you're telling," cautioned Betty Billy—Mrs. Billy Smith.

"Well," said Elsie doggedly, "I'm determined to tell this much. His name isn't Piess. His wife got a divorce from him, and now she has taken their child and run off with it, and they can't find—what's the matter?"

"Poor fellow!" she sighed.

My eyes were almost popping from my head.

"Is—is he a count?" I cried, so loudly that they all said "Sh!" and shot apprehensive glances toward the pseudo Mr. Piess.

"Goodness!" said Elsie in alarm. "Don't shout, John."

Billy Smith regarded me speculatively. "I daresay Mr. Smart has read all about the affair in the newspapers."

"I haven't seen anything about it in the papers," said I, trying to recover my self possession which had sustained a most tremendous shock.

"Thank heaven!" cried Elsie devoutly.

"The poor fellow is almost distracted. Really, Mr. Smart, we planned this little visit here simply in order to—to take him out of himself for awhile. It has been such a tragedy for him. He worshiped the child." It was Mrs. Billy who spoke.

"And the mother made way with him?" I queried, resorting to a suddenly acquired cunning.

"It is a girl," said Elsie in a loud whisper—"the loveliest girl. The mother appeared in Vienna about three weeks or a month ago and—whiff!—off goes the child. Abducted—kidnaped! And the court had granted him the custody of the child. That's what makes it so terrible. If she is caught anywhere in Europe—well, I don't know what may happen to her. It is just silly acts as this that make American girls the laughingstocks of the whole world."

By this time I had myself pretty well in hand.

"I daresay the mother loved the child, which ought to condone one among her multitude of sins. I take it, of course, that she was entirely to blame for everything that happened."

They at once proceeded to tear the poor little mother to shreds, delicately and with finesse, to be sure, but none the less completely.

"What was her social standing in New York?" I inquired.

"Oh, good enough," said Betty Billy. "She was in the smartest set, if that is a recommendation."

To my disgust the three of them refused to enlighten me further as to the history, identity or character of either Mr. or Mrs. Piess, but of course I knew that I was entertaining under my roof by the most extraordinary coincidence the Count and Countess of Something-or-other, who were at war, and the child they were fighting for with motives of an entirely opposite nature.

"What time do we dine?" asked Mr. Piess later, with a suppressed yawn.

"At 8," said Elsie promptly.

"I think I'll take a nap," said he. With a languid smile and a little flaunt of his hand as if dismissing us, he moved languidly off, but stopped after a few steps to say to me, "We'll explore the castle tomorrow, Mr. Smart, if it's just the same to you." He spoke with a very slight accent and in a peculiarly attractive manner. There was charm to the man, I was bound to admit. "I know Schloss Rothhoefen very well. It is an old stamping ground of mine."

"Indeed!" said I, affecting surprise.

"I spent a very joyous season here not so many years ago. Honendant is a bosom friend."

I was eager to steal away to the east wing with the news, so somewhat later I knocked at the countess' door. I realized that it was a most unseemly hour for calling on a young, beautiful and unprotected lady, but the exigencies of the moment lent moral support to my invasion.

The countess' French maid peered out at me.

"Tell your mistress that I must see her at once."

"Madame is not at home, m'sieur," said the young woman.

"Not at home?" I gasped. "Where is she?"

"Madame has gone to bed."

"Oh!" I said blinking. "Then she is at home. Present my compliments and ask her to get up. Something very exasperating has hap"—

"Madame has request me to inform m'sieur that she knows the count is here and will you be so good as to call tomorrow morning."

"What! She knows he's here? Who brought the information?"

"The bountiful Max, m'sieur. He bring it with dejeuner, again with dinner and but now with the hot water, m'sieur."

"Oh, I see!" said I profoundly. "In that case I—shan't disturb her."

Very stiffly and ceremoniously I advised caution for the next twelve hours and left.

Now it may occur to you that any self respecting gentleman in possession of a castle and a grain of common sense would have set about to find out the true names of the guests beneath his roof. But it so happens that I rather enjoyed the mystery. The situation was unique, the comedy most exhilarating. Of course there was a tragic side to the whole matter, but, now that I was in for it, why minimize the novelty by adopting arbitrary measures? Somewhat gleefully I decided that it would be good fun to keep myself in the dark as long as possible.

When I reached the room where my guests were assembled I found Mr. Piess and the Baron Umovitch engaged in an acrimonious dispute over a question of bridge etiquette. The former had resented a sharp criticism coming from the latter, and they were waging a verbal battle in what I took to be five or six different tongues, none of which appeared to bear the slightest relationship to the English language. Suddenly Mr. Piess threw his cards down and left the table without a word of apology to the two ladies, who looked more hurt than appalled.

He said he was going to bed, but I noticed that he took himself off in the direction of the moonlit loggia. We were still discussing his defection in subdued tones—with the exception of the irate baron—when he re-entered the room.

"Are there real spirits in your castle, Mr. Smart, or have you flesh and blood mediums here who roam about in white night dresses to study the moods of the moon from the direst ramparts?"

I started. What indiscretion had the countess been up to?

"I don't quite understand you, Mr. Piess," I said, with a politely blank stare.

"My dear countess," said I the next morning, "while I am willing to admit that all you say is true, there still remains the unhappy fact that you were very near to upsetting everything last night. Mr. Piess saw you quite plainly. The moon was very full, you'll remember. Fortunately he was too far away from your window to recognise you. Think how easy it might"—

"But I've told you twice that I held my hand over Pinko's nose, and he just couldn't bark, Mr. Smart. You are really most unreasonable about it. The dog had to have a breath of fresh air."

"Why not send him up to the top of the tower and let him run around on the"—

"Oh, there's no use talking about it any longer!" she said wearily. "It is all over, and no real harm was done. I am awfully sorry if they made it uncomfortable for you."

"And now will you be good enough to tell me who I am?" she asked after a few minutes. "That is, who am I supposed to be?"

"Oh," said I uneasily, "you are really nobody! You are Britton's wife."

"What! Does Britton know it?"

"Yes," said I, with a wry smile. "He took a mean advantage of me in the presence of George Hazzard not an hour ago and asked for a raise in wages on account of his wife's illness. It seems that you are an invalid."

"I hope he hasn't forgotten the baby in his calculations."

"He hasn't, you may be sure. He has named the baby after me."

"How original!"

"I thought it rather clever to change Rosemary's sex for a few days," said I.

Mankind to Come Forth From the Tomb.

A Parable Applying to the Millennium—World's Trial Will Last a Thousand Years — Co-operation With Christ in Raising the Dead —Two Classes Gradually Developed—Both Will Outwardly Keep God's Law—Selfishness the Controlling Principle With the Goat Class—Love the Controlling Principle With the Sheep—The Fire of Divine Anger Will Finally Destroy All Having the Spirit of

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

New York, Sept 19.—Pastor Russell, at the New York City Temple, W. 63d St., delivered a very interesting discourse to-day from the text, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." (Matthew 25: 40.) He spoke in part as follows:

This text of Scripture is generally misunderstood and misused. If one has not studied it in its connections, one would quite likely think that the Lord is referring to those who have lived during the Gospel Age; but the context shows that He refers to those living in the Millennial Age. The principle, however, is helpful to us now. Whoever does a kindness for anyone belonging to the Lord is counted by Him as having done it unto Himself.

In the parable of the Sheep and the Goats we read, "When the Son of Man shall come in all His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His glory; and before Him shall be gathered all nations"—peoples, not the Church. The Church will be with Him in His Throne. (Colossians 3:4.) Those spoken of here as gathered before the Throne will be the whole world of mankind. These are sometimes called Gentiles, meaning those not in covenant relationship with God.

In the past God made a covenant with the nation of Israel alone. Therefore all other nations and peoples were outsiders. During this Gospel Age the Lord has made a covenant with the Church, through Christ, a special Covenant of Sacrifice, into which you and I are privileged to enter. The opportunity to make this Covenant of Sacrifice has been open throughout the Gospel Age; and all who come to God through that covenant are said to be Israelites indeed.—Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

Our text refers, not to Christians, but to Gentiles—the peoples and nations, the world in general. Before Messiah's Throne shall be gathered all people, all nations. "And He shall separate them the one from the other, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats." It is not a class separation, but an individual one. Whoever, after trial, demonstrates that he is a goat will go over to the left hand; whoever proves himself to be a sheep will go to the right. The whole picture refers to the thousand years of the Messianic Reign. It is a picture of the world's judgment, the world's trial. The sole object of that Reign is to prove who will desire to be God's sheep, to come into His fold and have His Son as their Shepherd, and who will not come into harmony with Him, but will have a goat-like nature. Then Christ will deal with them accordingly.

Gradually all the goats are gathered to the left hand, and all the sheep to the right hand. In figurative language the Lord thus designates the place of disfavor and that of favor. These two classes will not be aware of the fact that they are going to the right or to the left, as the parable shows. Not until the conclusion of the trial do they find out where they stand.

The question arises, In what way will the people have an opportunity of ministering to the Lord's brethren during the Millennial Age? We note that the Apostles were in prison sometimes because of their service to the Lord, and were ministered unto; and that some of the Lord's followers since have been in prison or in need of assistance; but that probably not very many have been in prison or hungry or naked. Presumably it has been so all down the Gospel Age. Hence it is difficult to see how this parable could have any reference to us. Now we see what the parable means, and this is the explanation:

Throughout the Millennial Age The Messiah will be dealing with the world of mankind, the majority of whom are now in the great prison-house of death. The Apostle Paul, in speaking of the resurrection, says that the dead shall come forth "every man in his own order," or company, or class. They will not all come forth at once. The Church class will come forth first; then the Great Company class; and early in the new order of things will come forth the Ancient Worthies, who will be the earthly representatives of God's Kingdom.

As Jesus said to some in His day, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets in the Kingdom of God." (Luke 13:28.) They will be the human representatives of the Heavenly Kingdom, which will be invisible. Jesus said nothing about their seeing Himself. Neither did He say, "Ye shall see these My disciples in the Kingdom." He did say, however, "Yet a little while, and the world seeth Me no more." St. John tells us that the Church shall be like her Lord. (1 John 3:2.) If the world will not see Him, they will not see the Church; for the Church will be spirit beings, that cannot be seen.

So we have these orders, at least: the Little Flock, the Great Company, the Ancient Worthies, and the world of mankind—"every man in his own order." Jesus said, "The hour is coming when all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live." (John 5:25-29.) As the world return from the tomb, our thought is that they will come back in answer to prayer, very much the same as did Lazarus. The Lord, you remember, said, "Where have ye laid him?" Then He lifted up His eyes and prayed to the Father, after which He said, "Lazarus, come forth."—John 11:41-44.

Ministering Unto Millennial Brethren.

We do not understand that in the Millennial Age the people will have power to command the dead to come forth from the tomb, but that our Lord Jesus will have that power. As He prayed for the restoration of Lazarus, not because of any service which Lazarus would do for Him, but because Lazarus was the brother of Martha and Mary, so we conceive that nearly all the world will come forth in answer to the prayers of their brothers, their sisters, their parents, children, and friends.

To illustrate: Suppose that you and I were of the Restitution class, and not of the Church class. Suppose that we were living down in the Millennial Age, and that Restitution had progressed so far that the world was in good shape—plenty of machinery for conducting affairs, more being produced than was needed, etc. Then the Lord would let us know, as a world, that we might have the privilege of co-operating with God, that we might join with Christ in the work of Restitution. We might say, "First of all, let us pray for father." We would not desire to have father get here and find that there was no place for him to eat or sleep or live; so we would make provision for him.

Similarly, we would provide for mother and for other relatives. Each would thus be brought forth, preparations being made to assist them when they should come back into life. This whole work of bringing mankind back into life will be God's work. It will be the work of the Lord Jesus Christ, the work of spirit beings, as God's agents. But human beings will be permitted to co-operate, through their interest in humanity.

The "sheep" class of that Age will be those who will have the Lord's spirit; and as the Lord's purpose will be to bring people back from death to teach them and prepare them for eternal life, all the sheep will feel the same way. This they will do gladly, because they have a love for this work. They will be feeding, clothing, and helping those whom they have gotten out of the prison-house of death. Their prayers will go out continually after those in prison. This explains the whole work of the Millennial Age, and shows how all the people will come into harmony with God.

The Indifferent, Selfish Class.

But there will be some who will say, "I do not care so much about this matter. I would rather go automobiling than to care for these people." The sheep class will be busy working, working right along; but the goat class will be showing their selfish disposition. God does not purpose that any who are selfish shall have everlasting life. Selfishness came in as a result of sin. You and I were born selfish, and could not help it; but we have better knowledge now. We are beginning to see God's way. All then in true sympathy with God and righteousness will be cultivating love in their hearts.

After the sheep class have provided for those already recovered from the prison-house of death, they will say, "Now let us ask for others to come back. Let us get back Uncle Jim." The others will say, "I do not see why we should bother about Uncle Jim. He was only a distant relative. He did not leave me anything when he died." But the one with the sheep-like disposition will say, "Poor old Uncle Jim! I shall try to give him a good welcome back. He will wonder that conditions are so changed. He never saw these things which we now have. When he died, he thought that he was going to Hell. This will be the greatest blessing he ever had!"

The Loving, Unselfish Class.

Thus the sheep class will take their pleasure along the lines in which God and Christ will be taking theirs. Do you think that God, Christ, and the Church will be running around Heaven in automobiles? The sheep class will say, in effect, "How can we cooperate with Christ in this work of blessing the world?" They may not realize it, but they will be developing a noble, Christlike character. They will be doing themselves good as well as those raised from the dead.

At the close of the Age the Lord will say to the sheep class, "I was an hungered, and ye gave Me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave Me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took Me in; naked, and ye clothed Me; sick and in prison, and ye visited Me"; for "inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto Me." You did not know it, but I was watching you. You are on My right hand—in My favor. The Father wishes you to have the Kingdom.

God will not give any one else the kingdom. He is not selfish, but is always considering what He can do for somebody else. All of His people must have His spirit. All mankind must eventually have the same spirit or they cannot get the earthly kingdom. The Heavenly Kingdom is for those of the Church who prove worthy. They will get it because they have the spirit of love; and those of the world who cultivate the Lord's spirit will receive the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world. (Genesis 1:26-28.) Christ's Kingdom was prepared from before the foundation of the world. Mankind's will be an earthly kingdom—a Paradise world-wide.

So, dear friends, there is a little lesson here for us. We see in this parable God's disposition. It helps us to understand His mind. But you may say, "It is not natural for me to act so unselfishly." All the more need, then, for you to cultivate that spirit. The Lord is not looking for natural people, but for New Creatures. "But," you say, "in my case it would make a great difference; for my mind is not formed that way." We reply, "You must be transformed—formed over again. We are all wrong to start with. We must get out of the condition in which we were born."—Romans 12:1, 2.

The Lord does not say that we must entirely transform our flesh. But He does say that we must transform our mind, our will. We must show Him that our mind is continually striving for those things which are good, kind, loving, and generous. He will take note of what we are striving to do.

The Everlasting Punishment of the Wicked.

Lest we should be accused of neglecting a certain part of this parable, let me remind you how it reads. The goat class are to "go away into everlasting punishment." "I thought that you do not believe in everlasting punishment," says one. My dear brother, I always believe in everything the Bible says. I believe in everlasting punishment. But what kind it will be is another matter. God says one thing, and some of our creeds have said another thing. Therefore you and I, if true to God, are giving up our creeds as unreliable, thoroughly unsound. The Bible says that the punishment will be death; and we believe the Bible.

The creeds have it that everlasting death means everlasting dying, endless torture. So when the Bible speaks of everlasting death, some people have their heads so twisted that they make death mean life. At one time we had our heads fairly twisted. We ran into all kinds of difficulties. I am glad that we are getting straightened out. We are able to reason more clearly and to understand the English language better. There is such a thing as everlasting death. When the goat class are remanded to death, they will become dead everlastingly. They will remain dead to all eternity.

The Greek word kolasin, here rendered punishment, means to cut off, or to restrain by cutting off. The Lord will give mankind all the opportunities they wish to be selfish, to choose the wrong way. They will have the opportunities and blessings of the Millennial Age, as long as they will not outwardly violate the Law, as long as they will not injure somebody else. They will not be forced to help the dead. That work will be one of charity, of love. But unless they attain the spirit of love, they will not be fit for the kingdom; for God is Love. Whether on the spirit plane or in the Millennial Kingdom or in the everlasting kingdom of mankind upon the earth, no one shall continue except those who are in accord with God. All others shall be everlastingly cut off from life. See Acts 3:23; Psalm 101:8; 37:9; 2 Thessalonians 1:9.

Fire a Symbol of Destruction.

Concerning the wicked, our parable says, "Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels." Fire always symbolizes destruction, and everlasting fire would mean an everlasting destruction. What about its being prepared for the Devil and his angels? I answer: The Devil is the father of lies, a murderer from the beginning, the one who "abode not in the Truth." (John 8:44.) He has some assistants, "the angels that kept not their first estate." (Jude 6.) Instead of remaining holy angels, they became demons, associated under Satan. Their final penalty is to be quite appropriate for them—fire, the fire of God's anger, the fire of God's opposition.

As fire destroys, so God's anger will destroy Satan and all in harmony with him. And because the goat class of mankind manifest the spirit of Satan, the selfish spirit, contrary to the Divine spirit, they will be classed in with Satan and his angels; they will have their portion with Satan and the fallen spirits. They will all be destroyed in the Second Death. This will cleanse the Universe and leave everything pure. Not a sinner will be left in it. Thenceforth all will be governed by the spirit of love.

The Lord Jesus Christ was tried; the Church, His Bride, is being tried; the Great Company will be tried, before being received into the Heavenly condition. In the days of Noah all the angels were tried. So all mankind will be tried during the thousand years of Messiah's Reign, and only the victors will go into the everlasting conditions. No wonder that the Revelator, prophesying of that glorious time, says, "Every creature in Heaven [the Church, the Great Company, the angels, the cherubim and seraphim], and on earth, and under the earth [those now in the tomb], heard I saying, Blessing, glory, honor, and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever!"

"Praise the God of our salvation;
Hosts on high, His power proclaim;
Heaven and earth, and all creation,
Laud and magnify His name."

Secret Chambers.

It is a curious thing how people surprise us. In our vanity we begin to think we know them to the uttermost, and then one day, possibly by accident, possibly in a moment of emotion, a little secret door springs open in the smooth panel of their visible lives, and we see within a long, long corridor with other doors and passages opening away from it in every direction the vast secret chambers of their lives.

SHE WAS A TRUE WIFE.

The Story of a Crisis and the Way It Was Happily Handled.

A woman has just told us of what she did the night her young husband found himself bankrupt. His factory was closed, he had lost all he owned—plus a good deal more—and, as he looked at it, life was about at an end. He reflected that he had taken his wife from a happy and charming home and that he had brought disgrace and poverty on her. It occurred to him that a well placed bullet might be the best all round solution of his difficulties.

His wife, at home, made a poignant surmise as to what he was thinking. Suddenly it occurred to her that here was a chance for team work—an opportunity to show what being a wife really meant. She prepared a delicious little dinner, she made her home as inviting as she could, and she arrayed herself in her most becoming dress.

Her husband returned, not to a disheveled and sobbing woman, to a neglected house and a drama of disaster, but to a home where everything spoke of resolution, of continuity, of expectation. The fire on his hearth, his simple, well cooked dinner, the courageous eyes of his attractive wife, restored him to a true sense of values. He was able, amid all his confusion of purpose and torment of confusion, to see his failure as only a retrievable episode in his life.

He is now a successful manufacturer, his debts are paid and he has a happy home with a son and a daughter in it. He was saved from being a suicide by the fact that a woman was sportsmanlike at the right moment.—Collier's Weekly.

Gladstone's Memory.

Gladstone's power of memory was always one of his greatest assets. In his last years he often lamented that it was not what it had been, but even so it came triumphantly out of some remarkable tests. In his eighty-third year he set himself to recall Manzoni's ode on the death of Napoleon, which as a young man he had translated into English. He had entirely forgotten his own version, but by dint of hard "diggin'" or "dashing up," as he called it, he wrote down 104 of the 108 Italian lines. Two years later he essayed to write from memory a complete list of all the men who had been his cabinet colleagues and enumerated sixty-eight of the seventy.

He Got a Car.

The latest Ford story is a true story and touches Toronto. It concerns the new Ford car now driven by Dr. J. A. Macdonald, Editor of The Globe, Toronto. This car, a five-passenger touring car met Dr. Macdonald on his arrival from Detroit at the Union Station some days ago, and carried with it instructions to remain with him.

While in Detroit Dr. Macdonald addressed a meeting at which Mr. Henry Ford was present, and later visited at the home of Mr. Ford. So greatly impressed was Mr. Ford with the eloquent message of Dr. Macdonald's address that to express his appreciation, he said to Dr. Macdonald: "On your arrival in Toronto there will be a car to meet you at the station. Kindly consider it yours." (Or words to that effect.)

Dr. Macdonald returned to Toronto, and sure enough the shiny new touring car was pawing impatiently at the entrance in charge of a chauffeur from the Ford works.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE MAN ON THE BRIDGE.

A Political Intrigue in the Time of Louis XIV. of France.

The manner in which the French first gained possession of the provinces of Alsace-Lorraine through the use of a preconcerted cipher appparently meaningless to the uninitiated is also an important historical instance of the value of cipher signals of all kinds.

In 1680, when Marquis de Louvois was French Minister of War under Louis XIV., he summoned before him a man of the name of De Chamilly and instructed him to go to Basel, Switzerland, and on the fourth day thence at 2 o'clock in the afternoon to station himself on the bridge over the Rhine, with pad, ink and pen.

"Watch all that takes place," directed the Minister of War, "and make a memorandum of everything, no matter how trivial. Continue to do this for two hours. At 4 o'clock remount your horse and return here as quickly as possible. Bring your notes directly to me, no matter what time of the day or night you arrive."

De Chamilly obeyed. On the day appointed he stationed himself on the bridge and began to make notes of everything that transpired. Page after page he covered with his fine script. Three o'clock chimed from the cathedral tower. Exactly on the last stroke a tall man in yellow waistcoat and breeches sauntered across the bridge, stopping in the center to strike three hearty blows with his staff on the railing. This, together with the other details, went down in De Chamilly's book. When 4 o'clock sounded he leaped upon his horse and galloped off toward Paris feeling rather ashamed that he had nothing more important to report.

The messenger returned to the French capital in the middle of the night, but he went at once to De Louvois, who glanced eagerly through his notes until he came to the mention of the yellow breeched man. The Minister of War then rushed to the king's chamber, awoke Louis and obtained his signature to a document already prepared. Four couriers were immediately dispatched to Strassburg. Eight days later the town was entirely surrounded by French troops. It surrendered on Sept. 30, 1681.

The three taps of the staff on the railing of the bridge were the preconcerted signals of the success of an intrigue between De Louvois and the magistrate of Strassburg, and the man who struck the blows was as ignorant of their meaning as was De Chamilly of the reason for his mission.

The seizure of Strassburg received formal recognition at the peace of Ryswick in 1697, and France continued to hold the city and the surrounding country until it was wrested from her by the Germans after the Franco-Prussian war.—James Hay, Jr., in Every Week.

BLACK FOXES.

How the Little Animals Have Brought Wealth to P. E. Island.

Angus McTavish's hens clucked and scratched contentedly in their yard. It was a pleasant place. There was soft loam, a little patch of gravel and a dusty expanse for dry baths. The lord of the harem flapped his way to a stump in a corner of the low fence and posed there, the spring sun of Prince Edward Island waking his irides ent feathers to a jewellike blaze. His wives looked at him proudly. And then calamity descended.

A lithe form of a lustrous black sharp nosed, sharp eared and bushy tailed leaped the fence gracefully. A snap of the jaws and chanticleer lay low, his neck broken, while the hens fled screaming. Their lamentations brought the farmer's wife.

"Angus," she called, "there's a black fox in the fowl yard. Hurry!"

Little need for the last word of advice. "Black fox" on Prince Edward Island means wealth. McTavish and his wife joined in an earnest attempt to capture the marauder. A gun was barred, for that would have meant injury to the glossy pelt. Maybe Rey knew it, for he waited until his pursuers were close by and then with a defiant flirt of his brush skipped into the underbrush. And with him went a vision of thousands of dollars.

Thousands? you may say with an incredulous lift of the eyebrows. That's absolutely right, for the royal black fox has brought a vast income to this smallest of the Canadian provinces. Canny Scotch farmers didn't need a second hint with such a chance for gathering in good dollars, and the result is what might have been expected. The black fox has been commercialized. It was a speculation at first, but to-day fox ranching has assumed the proportions of a communal industry. The mere hunting down of a black fox for his pelt has been relegated to the dark ages. Now the fur farmers have kennels and a pair of live foxes for breeding purposes that have been capitalized at $30,000.

Properly are these Prince Edward Island foxes known as "royal" silvers or "royal" blacks! Their pelts are catalogued at prices ranging from $500 to $4,000 each at winter fur auctions in London. Twenty skins from one island ranch three years ago averaged nearly $1,400 each. Since that time the fine bred foxes have been saved for reproductive purposes; but a test pelt put on the market in 1914 brought approximately $2,000, and in the Paris shops the current quotations (before the war) ranged around $3,000.

When one vixen, or female fox, bears from twenty-five to thirty-five fox pups in the course of her ten years of "motherhood" it is little wonder that she is worth literally from two to four times her weight in gold. A normal black fox weighs from nine to eleven pounds and is now selling, alive, at from $6,000 to $18,000; while an equal weight of refined gold is valued at but from $2,975 to $3,637!

The largest source of wild black fox pelts at present is north-western Canada. Recent Edmonton despatches state that a considerable number of this season's take are valued at from $500 to $1,500. But just as indubitably as the black fox skin has usurped foremost position in the fur market so surely has the Prince Edward Island pelt won first place among black fox furs.

The first black foxes were captured and bred successfully on Prince Edward Island in 1892, no less than three different individuals claiming the credit for the achievement.

TAUNTED INTO ACTION.

Both of Them Could Ride and Were Willing to Prove It.

When flag lieutenant to Admiral Sir Henry Keppel, commander in chief at Plymouth, Lord Charles Beresford used to hunt a good deal with the Dartmoor hounds. One day when there was no run, and every one was bored, one of the ladies present begged young Beresford to provide some kind of sport. Lord Charles tells the story in his "Memoirs."

"You must do something to amuse us," the lady said.

"Very well I will," said I.

Among the officers there were an elderly admiral and an elderly general, and I pointed them out to the lady.

"I will get up a race between them," I said.

She said I could not. I began with the soldier. Ambling alongside the general, I asked him if he had ridden much in his life.

"Of course I have!" he answered irritably. "What do you mean, sir?"

"Nothing at all," said I. "I thought I would ask. The admiral—"

"What about the admiral?" cried the general, staring suspiciously at that unconscious officer.

"He said he didn't think you knew much about a horse."

The general lost his temper. He said he would show the admiral what he knew about a horse.

"You can easily prove it," said I, and before the general quite understood what was happening, he had agreed to ride a race. Then I went over to the admiral.

"Do you know what the general says? He says you look like a monkey on a horse," says I.

"Cursed impertinence!" said the admiral. "I'll race him and beat him any day in the week."

"If you really want a race I'll arrange the whole thing," said I. And I brought the two wrathful old gentlemen together, rode with them to the starting point, gave the word, and off they went as hard as they could pelt. The general was drawing ahead when his horse balked at a soft place. The admiral's horse did the same and threw his rider forward on his neck.

"Get back into the saddle and he'll go through!" I shouted, for I knew the horse. The admiral hove himself into his seat and won the race.

RAISING RAZORS.

Canada Has Contributed 1,500 So Far for Soldiers.

Kitchener wants a million razors.

Canada so far has contributed 1,500.

Kitchener requested the master cutler of Sheffield to find him a million razors for the use and comfort of the boys in Flanders. The master cutler sent on a request to Mr. Thomas B. Lee, a Toronto wholesale hardware merchant, to collect all the unused razors in Canada. The campaign has only been on for a few days, but already in the offices of Mr. Lee 1,500 razors are piled, which have come from Westville, Nova Scotia, and from Grand Forks, British Columbia, and one, a wonderful old razor made by hand out of a steel file and fitted with a handle of maple, came from a trapper's cabin in the far north!

All in a week's campaign! But this week, Mr. Lee expects to double or treble the number. And when he has 5,000 he is going to pack them up and ship them to the master cutler of Sheffield.

"For," says Mr. Lee, "razors are like pipes. A man is forever seeing a new razor he likes the look of, and he buys it, and never throws the old one away. So that in the bureau drawers of Canada there are thousands of razors just waiting to get to the trenches in Flanders."

Send your razors to Mr. Lee, 30 Front street east, Toronto. A bit of brown paper and parcels post does the trick.

A shave, like a smoke, greatly relieves and comforts the man in the trench. Every man knows how a good clean shave perks him up and makes him feel fit. The effect is the same on the man in the trench, and we can count one German for every shave.

Now, the city of Sheffield, Eng., where razors are made, is denuded of men. In battalions the men of Sheffield now deal with softer but deadlier metals than steel. But the old men still keep the factories going, and it is to these men that the unused and discarded razors will go to be sharpened and touched up as good as new to be distributed to the fighters in Flanders.

Hardly a city in Canada but has sent its offering to Mr. Lee. Winnipeg sends word that 600 razors are on the way. A splendid patriot of Seaforth, Ont., sends his regrets that he cannot fight on account of his age, "but enclosed please find three and three-quarters dozen razors from my shelves."

A Vancouver firm has collected scores. One lady of a Western Ontario city sent two dozen brand new razors, still in their original packing, which must have cost between $35 and $50. The big factories, offices, and stores are deputing one of their staff to collect all the discarded razors in the establishment.

Safety razors are not wanted, for the reason that the old style razor can be stropped by the soldier on his belt and so kept in good condition.

Among the razors sent in are some wonderful old pieces. There is that home-made one, ground out of a file, spoken of before. There is one very old one with a bone handle, and a thin, narrow blade, made in the time of Queen Anne, and which has shaven many a ruffled and bewigged dandy of olden days. There is one with a genuine tortoise-shell handle, with which came a card, finely inscribed in an old-fashioned script. Used by a soldier in the Crimea. That ought to bring luck to its future wielder. There is another one, a Chinese razor, bearing Chinese lettering stamped on the blade.

All razors are welcome. The old men of Sheffield will put them right and the comfort they will be to the boys in France cannot be estimated.

To Prevent Infection.

A Great British physician, Sir Almroth Wright has invented an antiseptic vaccine. By inoculation, it is hoped, a soldier before going into battle may be made proof against the infection of wounds.

CANADA'S ARMY.

One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Men Have Answered the Call.

Canada's army in England, France, and Flanders has grown to 80,000 men, a greater force than Wellington had at Waterloo, and nearly twice as large as the entire British forces engaged in the Crimean war. Recruiting is proceeding more swiftly now than at any other time since war was declared. After the despatch of the first contingent enlistment especially in the rural districts, fell off to an alarming extent. This was mainly due to the optimistic tone of the press, to the conviction, born of British cables, that a gigantic allied advance in May would speedily bring the struggle to a close. The second contingent never expected to get to the front.

Then came in succession the terrific German offensive at Ypres, the slaughter of Canadians at Langemarck and St. Julien, and the rolling up of the Russian hosts in Galicia, and Canadians realized, simultaneously with the motherland that the Empire was engaged in a real war. The Dominion Government proceeded to rush a second division of 25,000 men to England to re-enforce the battered battalions of the first contingent, and the recruiting of a third, fourth, and part of a fifth division was begun without delay. The response was all that could be desired.

The long roll of killed and wounded echoed each day from militia headquarters brought thousands of recruits, and to day the total number of those to don the King's khaki in the Dominion is close to 150,000. Over 12,000 of these have been put out of action, nearly 50,000 are in France and Flanders, and the rest are in or on their way to England, in nine training camps in Canada, on guard duty at vital points throughout the Dominion and garrisoning Bermuda and St. Lucia.

Training operations in the various camps are proceeding in a most satisfactory manner. Training for the first and second contingents was carried on under severe handicaps. The first contingent was mobilized at Valcartier last fall, and there was little opportunity for real shooting or musketry practice. The second contingent was scattered all over the country, billeted in armories, skating rinks, schools, and stables, and target practice was next to impossible. The summer Gen. Sam Hughes [illegible] camp

Every rifle unit in training is provided with rifle ranges and ample facilities for manoeuvres.

Officers and non-commissioned officers who were through Langemarck and St. Julien, who were wounded and are home on furlough, are used to give the men the necessary training in all the arts of modern trench warfare and finished soldiers are turned out.

Facing Huge Odds.

Petrograd estimates that the Russians are now facing 35 to 40 per cent of the total forces of Germany and 70 per cent. of those of Austria-Hungary. It is said that the German infantry pitted against the Czar's armies has increased 400 per cent., and the cavalry 900 per cent. recently.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S PRINCESS DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The princess dress has always been a favorite because of its universal becomingness and the grace which it lends to figures of every type. It is especially becoming to stout women, and this design is given in the issue paper pattern for very large women.

The [illegible] back of the dress form an unbroken panel from neck to hem. In front the material is cut out at the neck to display a little of the neck and the edge is trimmed with a wide collar somewhat of the Quaker form.

At the sides the blouse sections are separate from the skirt and have a trifle of fullness at the waistline. The sleeves may be in either of two styles, one of them plain and fitting the arm and the other loose and puffed at the wrist where there is an extremely ornamental cuff.

In dresses of this character the sleeves are usually of something sheer, as crêpe Georgette or chiffon, while the remainder of the gown is of silk, satin, velvet or plain, fine serge.

The new fall materials are characterized by their softness of finish, and there are many among them without any distinctive name, which are beautiful in themselves and suitable for a gown of the elegance and dignity of this one.

The dress pattern, No. 7355, is cut in sizes 34 to 36 inches, bust measure. Medium size requires 4½ yards of 36 inch material, 7-8 yard of 27 inch satin and ⅝ yard of crêpe for sleeves.

This pattern can be obtained by sending ten cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Good Health.

The governments of both Canada and the United States have stringent regulations regarding food adulterations. Makers are now forbidden to label an article "pure" that is not just as represented.

It was the HONEST manufacturer that worked to have these laws passed.

When a manufacturer of food products advertises his goods as "pure," under the present Canadian laws, they are really pure: you can depend upon that. It will pay you to insist upon the advertised brands. If you accept substitutes you CANNOT be sure.

GREECE AND RUMANIA READY TO JOIN ALLIES

Enemy Preparing To Make Drive Through The Balkans

Austro-Germans Will Send Half a Million Seasoned Men in An Effort to Force a Passage Through to Constantinople to Relieve the Turks---A Race Between the Allies and the Enemy---Fierce Artillery Fighting in the West

THE HESPERIAN INCIDENT IS CLOSED

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Italian reports received here to the effect that there will apparently be a big Austro-German movement this fall, with half a million seasoned men, to force a passage through the Balkans to Constantinople and relieve the Turks struggling to hold Gallipoli against the slow but sure progress of the British and French.

It is intimated that the Allies are pouring their men to the Dardanelles to meet this movement and the question now is who will reach Constantinople, Allies via Gallipoli or the Germans via the Balkans.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 20.—German artillery has joined Austrian forces massed along the Serbian frontier, it was officially announced here this afternoon.

This statement from the War Office tends to confirm reports of an Austro-German drive in the Balkans.

ROME, Sept. 20.—Both Greece and Rumania are welcoming every move made by Bulgaria and are making ready to fight on the side of the Allies if Bulgaria joins the Austro-Germans, according to advices received here to-day.

King Constantine received Premier Venizelos and several members of the cabinet yesterday. News Agency despatches reported that three classes of Greek reservists have been summoned to the colours.

Bulgarian newspapers with a leaning to Austria are attempting to stir up public sentiment in favour of Bulgaria's immediate intervention.

They print letters from Macedonia leaders(urging that Bulgaria attack Serbia without delay and seize Serbian Macedonia.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—The Germens bombarded St. Menehould with long range guns last night, killing a large number of civilians, among them the assistant mayor.

The city hall and other buildings were damaged.

St. Menehould lies west of Verdun on the Rheims-Verdun railway, which probably was the object of the German bombardment.

The German lines lie near Vienne le Chateau, about eight miles north of St. Menehould.

The French batteries throughout last night cannonaded the German artillery positions all along the battle front.

This afternoon's official communique said the shelling was particularly successful in preventing fresh supplies of ammunition from being brought to the enemy's front.

The Germans bombarded the suburbs of Arras and the front near Crichon. The cannonading was accompanied by lively fusilades from rifles and machine guns.

The German fire was hot in the regions of Foucauort, Hereleville and Tracy Le Val, the French replying energetically. Before Fontency the Germans repeatedly raked the French advanced positions with rifle fire, but did not leave their trenches. The Berry Au Bac region was the scene of lively bomb fighting throughout the night.

French troops captured German observation post east of Sapigneul, the War Office announced.

German batteries that had been bombarding French positions north of Camp Chalons were silenced, and one of the German munitions depots exploded.

The artillery fighting in Lorraine and Alsace is now becoming more violent.

HALIFAX, Sept. 20.—The Anchor liner Tusconia has rescued 408 passengers and the crew of the Greek steamer Athinai, which was burned at sea. Only one life was lost, according to a wireless message received here to-day.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—British Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna is expected to arrive here the latter part of the week for a conference with Minister of Finance Ribot and the Russian Minister of Finance, P. L. Bark, who arrived here last night from Toulon.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—The whole question of billeting or quartering the Canadian troops is still engaging the attention of the Department of Militia and it is expected that a definite announcement of the programme to be pursued will be made in a few days. General Hughes leaves again to-night and will during the week visit Niagara, London and possibly Kingston camps to take up the question with various commandants.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The German theory that the Hesperian and Orduna incidents are closed was generally indorsed in officials circles here to-day.

That the Arabic case has also been disposed of officialdom was not so certain.

In Secretary Lansing's absence an authoritative expression was unavailable, but consensus of opinion was that the whole thing depended upon Germany. If the latter is willing to meet the Washington Administration's wishes, Berlin is right in believing an amicable settlement is certain, but not otherwise.

It was widely surmised that the German idea must be based on a promise by Ambassador Bernstorff to Secretary Lansing that the Kaiser would disavow the attack on the Arabic. This was all right as far as it went, but it was doubted if it was said, the Kaiser would make the Ambassador's pledge good.

As for the Hesperian, it was stated on high authority that the Administration is prepared to believe the liner was destroyed by a mine.

THE JAM SHOWER A JAM ALREADY

This is the first day of the patriotic jam shower and it threatens to develop into a deluge before the week is out. The large northern show window of Messrs. Hall & Son's Departmental Store is crowded with, judging from outward appearances, battalions of jars of delicious fruit confections. One nice little idea is maple leaves, in their autumn colours, gummed on the outside of jars, giving a taste, in both memory and mouth, of "The Land of the Maple." At 2.30 the show window was nearly full, and it will be, literally and doubly, jammed, before the day is out.

SHOT BY CHUM WHO DIDN'T KNOW GUN WAS LOADED

George Grady, Son of Mr. John Grady, Local Baker, the Victim of Distressing Accident on Saturday Night

FUNERAL ON TUESDAY

George Grady, the fourteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Grady, 122 Park street, was accidentally shot by one of his chums, Frank Swales Princess street, shortly after ten o'clock on Saturday night, and died within half an hour.

The fatality, an extremely pathetic one, occurred in the lane at the rear of the Grady house, and was another illustration of not knowing the gun was loaded. George and Frank were companions of about the same age. The former kept a few pigeons which had been rauded by cats, and apparently the boys had decided to ambush the invaders of the dovecote. Mrs. Grady saw the boys go out into the yard as she was leaving for a grocery store. During her absence they apparently completed a few minor chores and then picked up the gun a 22 calibre arm. George had several bullets in his pockets and must have casually put one in the breach without his companion being aware of it. Shortly afterwards the gun changed hands, and as the boys passed into the yard from the shed Frank pulled the trigger thoughtlessly and without knowing the gun was loaded. When George fell at his feet, Frank thought his companion was completely the prank and he said jokingly, "Come on George, get up." When there was no response from his companion, Frank stooped over and noticed blood trickling from his chum's head. Freightened at the sight he ran home and told his sister who immediately went to the Grady home, meeting Mrs. Grady returning from the store.

Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien was called and administered the last rites of the church. Ten minutes later the boy was dead. The bullet, fired at a short distance, entered the base of the brain and lodged there.

George Grady was fourteen in August. He was a bright, manly boy and attended the Sacred Heart school. He was also one of the sanctuary boys at the Church of the Sacred Heart. The family is well known throughout the city and their many friends were shocked and grieved by the untimely death of their youngest son. Sympathy is expressed also for his companion who was in a measure a victim of the unforseen and accidental circumstances. Coroner Greer decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday morning from the family residence, 122 Park street, to the Church of the Sacred Heart and thence to St. Peter's cemetery. The members of the family besides the parents are three brothers, Joseph, Frank and Victor of Peterborough, and three sisters, Miss Ella Grady of Rochester, and Kathleen and Marion at home.

SATURDAY A NEW RECORD

Biggest Final Day of Fair Since 1912—Total Attendance and Gate Receipts Ahead of Last Year

DIRECTORS ARE GRATIFIED

TOTAL ATTENDANCE.

1915	11,424
1914	10,201
This year's gain	1,223

Gate receipts $268.10 more than in 1914.

COMPARISON OF ATTENDANCE.

	1915	1914
Friday	7,562	7,973
Saturday	3,862	2,247
Totals	11,424	9,220

SATURDAY ATTENDANCES.

1912	2,570
1913	2,670
1914	2,420
1915	3,765

To say that the Fair Directors are elated over the success of this year's exhibition is scarcely an apt expression. Elation is not the pervading spirit of any local success this years. The spectral shades of war put a damper on any tendencies to effusiveness. But the directors are overflowing gratitude to Providence for spendid weather, to the agriculturists for their entries and to citizens for their generous support. The manifold difficulties they had to overcome have deepened the satisfaction which the general success aroused.

Saturday's attendance was a new record for the concluding day according to Mr Felix Brownscombe's statistics. The presence of General Sir Sam Hughes can be, in a large measure, credit for this fine showing. The other figures above explain themselves.

An interesting coincident is the fact that the total number of children for the three days was the same at each gate, 1,008.

The total number of tickets received at the east gate was 5,846, and at the west 3,562, indicating the percentage of the crowd carried by the street cars.

The Horse Racing.

The horse racing Saturday was even more interesting than on Friday, although both events were won in straight heats. The free-for-all brought out three starters, "The Indian," owned by D. Whitock, Toronto; "Lew Jean," T. Hodgins, Orillia and "Montalvo," with the same owner. The race was easy for "The Indian," who trailed through the greater part of each heat, and then came through on end with the needed burst of speed. In the first heat the Toronto horse caught Lew Jean at the wire, but in the last two he made his drive going down the back stretch in the second half of the mile and won easily. The summary:

The Indian, D. Whitock, Toronto	1	1	1
Lew Jean, T. Hodgins, Orilha	2	2	3
Montalvo, T. Hodgins, Orillia	3	3	2

Time—2:22, 2:20, 2:23.

The 2:24 class provided a better contest, although Clara C., owned by J. T. Haggarty, of Stirling, won in straight heats. Ora Tariff, a black stallion owned by Charlie Fife, of Lang, give the winner a fine battle in the first two heats. Ora Tariff got a bad start in the first heat, but cut down all but Clara C. before the tape was reached. He challenged Clara C. all through the second heat, but could not get up. Sam Hall, also owned by Fife, took second in the last heat. The summary:

Clara C., J. T. Haggarty, Stirling	1	1	1
Ora Tariff, C. Fife, Lang	2	2	3
Sam Hall, C. Fife, Lang	4	3	2
Dr. Johnston, Ed Jones, Peterborough	3	4	4
Hutchie Wilkes, J. W. Hutchinson, Bailieboro	5	5	5

Time—2:26½, 2:24½, 2:26¼.

The dog race for the $5.00 prize donated by Mr. Wm Yelland, also took place on Saturday. There were a classy field, consisiting of "Cutie," owned by Master Simmons, which won in 1913, and "Sailor," owned by Master Murduff, winner of last year's race. "Sailor" made his record two straight Saturday, but "Cutie" gave him a battle on the way round the half-mile and the crowd enjoyed the "go" immensely.

SIR SAM HUGHES INSPECTED MEN OF THE 80th BATTALION

LT.-COL. JOHNSTON WILL REMAIN WITH THE 80th BATTALION

Has Refused Command of the New Mounted Squadron to be Raised---His Decision Applauded by Men of the 80th ---Part of New Uniforms Have Arrived---Sergt.-Major Miller Offered a Commission---To-day's Military News

Lt.-Col. Johnston, second in command of the 80th Battalion, in an address to the men of the Battalion, following this morning's parade, announced his intention of remaining with the 80th Battalion instead of accepting the position of commanding officer of the new depot squadron of Mounted Rifles which is to be raised in this division and the command of which had been offered him. Needless to say the announcement was joyfully received by the 80th men, who loudly applauded Lt.-Col. Johnston as he finished his address. He is most popular with the men under his command and the news that had been in circulation for the past few days that he was leaving the 80th for the new Mounted Corps caused regret in the ranks. This, however, was dissipated by this morning's announcement.

Lt.-Col. Johnston complimented the men on their fine conduct. "You have acted like soldiers and men throughout," remarked the second in command, "and I hope the new recruits coming in will see that the high standard set by you is kept up. You came through the inspection by Lt.-Col. Ketcheson splendidly and on Saturday you made a fine impression upon Major General Sir Sam Hughes, who remarked that you compared in appearance and marching to troops of six months' training."

Lt.-Col. Johnston then announced his decision to refuse the command of the new mounted squadron and to remain with the 80th. "I have decided to stay with you to the last ditch," he concluded amid loud applause from the ranks.

A portion of the outfit for the men of the 80th arrived from Kingston this morning. Tunics, trousers, etc were included, but the caps and puttees did not arrive and it is not likely the outfit will be issued until the former at least have been received.

The percentage of native born Canadians in the 80th Battalion is steadily increasing. The greater part of the recruits now joining here were born in Canada. And there is room for a lot more.

The latest City League ball player to join the colours is Frost, the outfielder of the Classics, who is with the 80th Battalion, as is First Baseman O'Heron, who wore an Empire uniform for part of the season. So far the City Baseball League has contributed sixteen to the khaki ranks. The Thistles holding with seven recruits.

Bert James, of Cavan, goalkeeper of last year's Peterborough intermediate O.H.A. team, has enlisted in the Sportsmen's Battery at Hamilton. Norman Harvie and Ted Cornbould, two of Orillia's star hockeyists, have joined the same unit.

Major-General Sir Sam Hughes paid Sergt.-Major Miller of the local detachment of the 80th Battalion, a fine compliment on Saturday, when he offered to give the sergeant-major a commission as lieutenant if he desired to take one. The Minister of Militia was impressed with his appearance as well as by his long record.

Sir Sam Hughes was greatly pleased with the marching of the 80th men on Saturday. "I have seen soldiers of six months' training who did not march any better," he remarked to Lt.-Col. Johnston. "The men have got the right swing to their marching."

Lieut. Clarence Henry, of the Canadian Engineers, Halifax, is home on leave.

59th's Long March.

Barriefield War Camp, Sept. 17. — The 59th Battalion is back in camp after a thre days' route march in which the battalion went a little west of the village of Bath. Every man was in the pink of condition, and none complained of being tired or suffering from the intense heat of the three days of the march. The 59th Battalion left camp on Tuesday morning at 8:30 with 1,000 men, 10 transport waggons, and 4 field kitchens. Both bands accompanied the battalion, and only a few men were left in camp. Throughout the whole march only one man had to be brought back to camp with sore feet. Everywhere the men in khaki were received with open arms and hearts, and the people of the country were pleased to see so many big brawny men being trained for battle pass through their township. The march was in command of Major Craig, and he looked well after the interests of the men from the moment they left the camp, until they returned. As a proof that none of them suffered from march or heat, many went to the city last night, and nearly all the officers attended the presentation of the play "Trilby" at the Grand Opera House. To the sound of stirring martial music from the band, the 59th marched into camp at five o'clock, with the men singing and shouting, and when the order was given to dismiss, it was impossible to say that the men of the 59th had been marching for three days over the hard roads and under the scorching rays of the hottest sun since camp opened.

Bandmaster Hughes of the 80th Battalion Band, has decided to add reed instruments to the instrumentation of his band, so that there is an opening now for clarionet players, etc. More cornet players are also needed. The band is making fine progress, and is a credit to Peterborough and to Bandmaster Hughes, who has done splendid work in whipping the organization into such good shape in such a short time.

The band of the 80th Battalion and the physical drill squad have been invited to attend the Millbrook and Norwood Fairs. It is likely that arrangements will be made to have them present as it is believed they would prove a splendid stimulus to recruiting.

Among the latest recruits in the 80th Battalion is Bryr. Carpenter, brother of Corp. Bert Carpenter of the 57th Detachment, 2nd Battalion, who was killed in action in Flanders.

The personal effects of the late Major Bennett have arrived in the city, shipped from the front, and have been turned over to his brother, Mr. J. J. Bennett, Perry street.

Major S. T. Medd, O.C. the Peterborough Squadron, 8th C.M.R., is home from Barriefield Camp.

It is expected that other Peterborough men in addition to Capt. Chas. Ackerman, are on board the Scandinavian which sailed from England on Friday. Arrangements should be made to give them a reception worthy of the occasion. And the details should not be left until the last minute.

Church Parade.

The local detachment of the 80th Battalion attended divine service at George St. Methodist Church last evening and heard an eloquent sermon by Rev. R. G. Peever, who spoke on the subject "Visions That Inspire Patriotism," taking as the basis for his remarks the story of David and Goliath. The company headed by the 80th Band made a fine showing on the march to and from the church. The streets were lined deep with interested people on both occasions, and a big crowd gathered at the Armouries to see the men fall in. The men were their fatigue uniforms with khaki helmets.

A Wrong Impression.

Either Lt.-Col. Ketcheson was misquoted in an interview which appeared in a local paper on Saturday or else the commanding officer of the 80th has little real information on what is going on here. He is quoted as intimating that recruiting has not been satisfactory in Peterborough. "From all other places the recruits are coming in splendidly," are the words attributed to Lt.-Col. Ketcheson. "Peterborough is the only one where I hear

Minister of Militia the Central Figure in an Impressive Event at the Exhibition Grounds on Saturday Afternoon—Was Presented With Freedom of the City.

MEN'S GOOD SHOWING

Five thousand people saw Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, inspect the men of the local detachment of the 80th Battalion at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition on Saturday afternoon and Canada's War Lord and the Peterborough boys in khaki shared equally in the honours. The famous Minister of Militia was given a hearty reception and the lads in the fatigue uniforms were not forgotten. Altogether it was an inspiring event, an occasion that should do much to stimulate recruiting and cause a rush of Peterborough's eligible young men to the colours. The warm tribute paid by Sir Sam Hughes to the gallantry of the Peterborough boys at the front, coupled with the spectacle presented by the keen-eyed, sturdy-looking lads of the 80th, as they swung by the grand-stand and could not fail to prove an inspiration to many who have not yet seen the path of duty.

Marched With Men.

The Minister arrived at the Exhibition Grounds from the reception at the Empress Hotel, almost simultaneously with the 80th Battalion men. He was accompanied by Lt.-Col. Johnston, Major R. T. Bonnell, and His Worship Mayor Buller. As the soldiers marched into the race course with the 80th and playing "Tipperary" the party alighted from their car, and when the Company reached them the Minister, Mayor Buller and the officers joined the ranks, and marched behind the Band, past the grand-tand, the occupants of which gave the Minister and his "fellow soldiers," as he afterwards styled them, a rousing cheer.

Then the 80th Battalion, with Captain R. P. Watt in charge, received Sir Sam with the general salute, the men with rifles presenting arms, while the others stood at attention in two lines. The Minister passed down the ranks looking at each soldier critically. Every man with service ribbon, Sir Sam questioned as to his former regiment and service. He spoke to Pte. Emile Bannet who was born in Alsace, in French, and also asked several other men in the ranks where their home were.

Interested in Drill.

The Minister then proceeded to the track, where he watched with keen interest the physical drill squad of the 80th, under Sergt. Oxley, give a demonstration of physical exercise and bayonet work. The men were on their mettle under the critical eye of Canada's War Minister and carried through the exercise with a refreshing snap. Sir Sam started the applause that followed the creditable work of the Squad for which the music was supplied by the Band of the 80th under Sergt. Hughes.

Address Presented.

The Minister of Militia, in company with the civic deputation, ascended the platform in front of the grand-stand, and the following address was read by His Worship Mayor Buller:

Major-General the Hon. Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B., M.P., Minister of Militia and Defence.

Dear Sir:—On behalf of the Municipal Council and the citizens of Peterborough, I wish to express to you our gratification with the honour you have done us in visiting Peterborough on this occasion, for we know that, with the pressure of official duties, it has been with no small effort that you have acceded to our invitation.

As Minister of the Crown as an empire Canadian, and as a neighbour who has by his abilities and devotion to duty risen to a high position in the service of his country, we welcome you heartily and ask you to kindly accept our felicitations and the freedom of the city.

We also desire to congratulate you upon receiving the distinguished honour of Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, which has been conferred upon you by His Majesty King George V., an honour which, high as it is, has been deservedly conferred as a recognition of the energetic and efficient service which you have rendered to the Kingdom and Empire at this time. The success with which the Canadian Army has been raised and equipped is very creditable to all who have been in charge of that work, and especially to you Sir, as head of the Department which has accomplished so much

THE REAL GOLD MINE.

Up to June first Canada, with pick and blast, dug out gold to the amount of a million and a half in excess of the gold output of the year 1914, and the remaining months of the year are expected to make the gold output of this year fifty per cent. greater than last year. The gold dug out of the earth this year with the plough is likely to amount to half a billion dollars, showing that Canada's real gold mine is in the soil we till.

"CONFOUND THEIR POLITICS"

At the recent sessions of the Anglican Synod, Toronto, the church militant threatened to literally justify its title. The members came at least, to verbal "apostolic" blows and knocks over the question of the omission of the second verse of God Save the King, beginning with "Confound their politics." This verse was omitted from the national anthem, in the revision of 1905. It was considered that the sentiment of this verse was revengeful, blood-thirsty, and unchristian. A thoughtful interpretation of the stanza does not, however, justify this characterization. It is simply a prayer for the overturning of the machinations of the enemies of the Empire; for the confusion and defeat of their political plans that may, or do, threaten injury to our country. "Frustrate their knavish tricks" is as apt to the present situation as if it had been written yesterday. The "knavish tricks" of the common enemy of the Empire and mankind, Germany, are an outstanding characteristics of Germany in diplomatic and military practice. The Zeppelin raids and the high seas murder of defenceless ship passengers—the slaughter of women and children, the lying, the spying and crooked course of German diplomacy, all combining to menace mankind and are directed against the integrity and well-being of the Empire and the higher civilization and the Christianity it represents. Should not these things be brought to naught? Is it not as meet and right to pray for the confusion of the politics, and the frustration of the knavish tricks that are together hostile to Christianity and Christian civilization, and to the wellbeing of humanity, which Christianity came to serve, to promote whose success the church was established? The primate of all Canada at the same session of the Anglican Synod, uttered brave and timely words in condemnation of political corruption in Canada. It would not be wrong perhaps to pray "Confound the crooked politics of Canadian corruptionists." Then why should it be wrong and unchristian to pray for the confusion of the crooked politics and the frustration of the knavish tricks of the German militarists, which are directed against all that the Church, Christians and Christianity stand for? "Scatter our enemies and make them fall," is what the while kingdom, the whole Empire, and the whole world outside the enemies of the world, are fighting for. If our fight is not just, then we cannot consistently pray, as we pray every Sunday in every Christian church, for the success of our armies. If our fight is just then we can and should pray — "Scatter our enemies and make them fall." If we do not want to bring about their fall why are we spending 25 millions a day—more than the missionary contributions of a century—and pouring out blood of brave men like water?

Clerymen are subject to like passions and weaknesses as ourselves; and when they fall into oversentitive sentimentalism like ordinary mortals it is not amiss to criticise such a mood and the attitude coming from it. Christianity in its deepest meaning is not so much a sentiment as a principle, and it is in accord with its principle that we are justified in praying and praying in the best way; fighting, against all things hostile to the triumph of the principles of Christianity. Sentiment is well enough in its place, but its place is not to obscure and weaken and travesty the significance of great truths and great duties. The action of the Church Hymns revisionists, sacrificed the substance for the shadow, and emasculated, took out the virile thing, from the national hymn by omitting the second stanza. In like manner as the revisers of another church hymnbook, left out the essence, the foundation of the Christian faith when they changed a line of the burden of Rev. E. Baring-Gould's great hymn, "Onward Christian Soldier" from, "With the cross of Jesus going on before" to "Looking unto Jesus who is gone before"; a change that at once weakens the spirit of the militant hymn and denies the cross in which St. Paul gloried. In both cases, the revisers sacrificed spirit and virility to anemic sentiment. The House of Bishops did well to restore the proscribed verse to its place and sanction and authorize its use in churches.

CONSCRIPTION.

Conscription or not conscription, that is the question that is agitating many minds—of both statesmen, or rather, perhaps, politicions, and the man in the street. Signs indicate that it is at least a debatable or debated subject in Great Britain, and the shadow of it falls on Canada. If it comes to Canada whose fault will it be? The blame of it, if blame there will be, will not fall upon the Canadian soldiers in France, or training in England; nor upon Peterborough's 1,200-share of the 150,000 brave and loyal Canadians who have enlisted for overseas service. It will be the fault of the "slackers" and shirkers whose refusal to enlist will make conscription necessary to supply the number of fighting men Canada's duty and interest require should shoulder a gun. This is the way Judge Baum put it at a recruiting gathering in St. Thomas last Friday night:

"Conscription is on the horizon in the old land. It is very likely to become law there. Lloyd George is converted to it. It may become law in Canada. If it does, the men who bring it about are not the men fighting in France or in England, waiting to fight, or the men in khaki whom I see before me in this gathering, but they are the men who stay at home surfeiting, out of action, and enjoying themselves in the field of sport, or the men who remain behind the counter, in banks or stores, or the men seen by hundreds on our streets every Saturday night, or the men who crack the balls in our billiard saloons early and late, or the young men who think it their duty to continue their professional career while their patriotic brothers are fighting for them and for all they possess, on the battle front."

NO ELECTION, NO ELECTION TALK.

There ought to be no election during the war. There ought to be no talk about the next election. There is no need for any such talk now, because the present Parliament does not come to an end until October of next year, and the election need not be held until the end of the year 1916 Toronto Star.

"BUT FOR BRITISH NAVY."

But for the British navy the German navy would have secured the command of the seas; and with the seas closed to them our Allies, despite all their splendid gallantry, would have been doomed to defeat within a few months at longest for lack of munitions and supplies. On the supremacy of the British navy, so laboriously built up by our nation at such gigantic cost and so stubbornly maintained by our seamen with such inexhaustible patience and resources, all the possibilities of allied victory have always finally rested London Daily Chronicle.

GERMAN KULTUR FINDS A PERFECT DEFENCE.

Logic made in Germany has performed so many miracles that neutrals accustomed to ordinary logic have almost ceased to wonder at the wind feats of legerdemain of the Teutonic mind.

The last effort in the case of the Arabic, however, sets a new mark.

How many a "liner" which is not even aware of the presence of a submarine be sunk according to the new rules to which the apostles of "frightfulness" have agreed to abide? The answer is impossible for a neutral, but simple for the superman. If the torpedo strikes forward of the beam the liner is attempting to escape. If the blow is abaft the beam the steamer is endeavouring to ram. If by chance the explosion occurs amidship the victim was trying to ram and escape at the same time!—New York Herald

WHY ALL THIS TROUBLE?

Why is there a dangerous controversy between the United States and Germany

Because Germany with its great navy safe in fortified harbours and canals, demands, in effect, that the United States, a neutral, shall adopt a policy calculated to nullify the sea power of Great Britain. When we are asked to prohibit shipments of munitions of war to the allies we are called upon to do for Germany what Germany is unable or unwilling to do for itself. When we are invited to force the British blockade and furnish supplies to Germany, we are invited to perform for the most militant of empires a task for which thus far it has not been willing to risk a single ship of war. Why is hatred of America and Americans openly and falsely preached in Germany? Because Americans as neutrals obedient to law will not relieve the German navy of the necessity of fighting.—New York World.

COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE ALREADY ON CANADA'S STATUTES

The compilation of the National Register in Great Britain has given renewed impetus to the rumour that "conscription is coming" in the Old Country. In some quarters, too, it is stated that it is coming in Canada.

In passing, it may be remarked that the word "conscription" is used in a very loose sense by those who talk. "Conscription" properly means the selection, by lot, of a proportion of the able-bodied manhood of a country for military service. It is absolutely certain that neither in Great Britain nor in Canada is such a system likely to be adopted. The manifest unfairness of selection by lot has already had the effect, in every country where it has been tried, of admitting substitutes procured by those on whom the lot has fallen. Hence, the poorer classes become unduly burdened with the defence of the country, while the richer classes escape with a monitary payment.

But those who loosely speak of "conscription" as a possibility either in Great Britain or in Canada, usually mean some form of compulsory military service, and not any system of selection by lot at all. The whole question is on an entirely difficult footing in the one country from that which it is on in the other, and the rendering of military service, compulsory in the one country, would require an entirely different method from that which would be employed in the other.

Liability to Service.

In Great Britain there is no legal liability to military service at all. A measure imposing such liability would have to be enacted by Parliament were compulsory military service to become the rule.

In Canada, on the other hand, there would be no necessity for Parliament to enact any fresh legislation at all should compulsory military service be deemed expedient by the Government of the day. For the legal liability to military service already exists in this country. It was imposed by the Militia Act.

Section 10 of that Act provides that "all the male inhabitants of Canada, at the age of eighteen years and upwards, and under sixty, not exempt or disqualified by law, and being British subjects, shall be liable to service in the Militia." And "service in the Militia" does not merely mean service in Canada alone. For section 69 of the same Act further provides that "the Governor in Council may place the Militia, or any part thereof, on active service anywhere in Canada, and also beyond Canada, for the defence thereof, at any time when it appears advisable so as to do, by reason of emergency." It would not, perhaps, have been possible to send the Canadian Militia to South Africa at the time of the Boer War, under the provisions of this section. For it could hardly have been contended that Canada required defending from the Boers, a pastoral people without ships, situated on another continent But with the present war, it is altogether different. Canada is being defended in France and Flanders against Germany, a formidable maritime, as well as the most formidable military power, as surely as though the German fleet were bombarding Canadian coasts.

Moreover, not merely the male inhabitants of Canada between the ages of eighteen and sixty years. For all the male inhabitants of whatever age, are liable to military service, on the requisition of the Governor-General in the case of what is known as a "levee en masse." The expression, a "levee en masse" means the taking up of arms by the people, to resist invading troops. Thus, in the case of sudden invasion every male can be called on for the work of defence.

Who Are Exempt.

The following persons are exempt from military service; Privy Councillors; judges, members of Provincial Cabinets; deputy ministers of the Federal and Provincial Governments; clergy of all kinds; telegraph clerks in actual employment; officers and clerks regularly employed in the collection of revenue; wardens and officers of all public prisons and lunatic asylums; members of the Naval Militia; members of the police force and fire brigades; professors in colleges and universities; persons disabled by bodily or mental infirmity; the only son of a widow, being her only support; pilots and apprentices to pilots during the season of navigation and persons averse, on religious grounds, from rendering military service.

But, although all males between the ages of eighteen and sixty years, not exempt or disqualified, can be called on at any time for service in the militia if the government so sees fit, the liability is more immediate in some cases than in others. For the male population is divided into four classes, for the purpose of compulsory military service, and these classes shall be called on to serve in the order specified in section 15 of the Militia Act Thus, those to be called on first would be all of the age of eighteen and upwards, but under thirty years, who are unmarried or widowers without children; secondly those of the age of thirty years and upwards, but under forty-five years, who are unmarried or widowers without children; next would come the turn of those of the age of eighteen years and upwards, but under forty-five years who are married or widowers with children, and lastly, there would be called on all of the age of forty-five years and upwards, but under sixty years. —Canadian Defence.

LEAD US NOT INTO TEMPTATION

"The great argument against license reduction is that it does not lessen drinking that when one place is closed men go to another, and those that are left are enriched without accomplishing any good. That would be quite true if all the men who drink were confirmed drinkers, which is far from the truth. We now know that there are few really confirmed drinkers in any community and when the temptations to drink are removed there is comparatively little trouble from it.

Local option does not prevent men from getting drink—it only lessens temptation. Places like Toronto Junction, Owen Sound, West Mount, and many others where men can get drink by crossing the street or by going a short distance for it, have proved for all time that only a few do so. Of course there are a few chronic drinkers in every community who think they cannot live without it, and these will get it if possible. The City Marshal of Pasedna, Cal., put it in a nut-shell when he said to the writer

"If a number of men are passing a bar-room they are likely to be tempted to go in, but if they have to go around a block or two, they will rarely do so. We know for a certainty that drinking is almost in direct proportion to the number of places of temptation."

The clock labourers' strike in Old London taught a great lesson. During this strike the open bar-rooms were reduced in number and the hours of sale were shortened, with the result that drunkenness and crime were reduced more than half, proving again that drinking is in proportion to the amount of temptation.

San Francisco teaches another lesson. After the great earthquake and fire the saloons were closed but men could purchase liquor by the bottle. During nearly three months that the bar-rooms were closed there was not a single murder, but in a month after they were open there were eighteen murders.

Lessen temptation either by lessening the number of bar-rooms or by shortening the hours of sale, and you will lessen drunkenness and crime.—H. Arnott M.B., M.C.P.S.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

His Ideal

By DESTA
E. BROWN WOODS.

Copyrighted, 1915, by Jessie Morgan.

"Now, Harry, honestly, you don't believe that?"

"Yes, I do. A true woman is always a coward. Brave is a masculine adjective, incapable of being used with a feminine noun."

"Oh, bosh! You are old fashioned, my boy."

"I grant you—mediaeval, in fact—but neither Joan of Arc nor Boadicea stirs my heart like a certain little girl who faints when she pricks her finger with a pin."

"That's what it is to be in love. Your ideal is based on what you think to be Miss Osborne's character. Now, for my part, I believe that young lady capable of heroism."

"And I tell you, George Evans, that the very thought of physical pain turns her cheek pale, but in the matter of moral courage—well, I could stake my life on her there. She has such a high ideal of truth and honor. She is so"—

"Oh, yes, yes! Spare me! Remember I am not in love."

An hour later he was sitting with his fiancee, a puzzled, pained expression on his face.

"I don't think I understand you," he said slowly. "You don't mean that you told your father the money was for charity when you were spending it on this silly speculation?"

Jessie Osborne's pretty cheeks were very pink.

"Well, I thought it a good investment, and father never lets me try stocks."

"But, Jessie, you have been deceiving him for months."

A pair of little white hands flew to hide the pink cheeks.

"Oh, I'm sorry! I'm miserable, and you don't care," came in broken sobs.

"There, there," he said soothingly as he took the slight form in his arms. "I didn't mean to be cross; but, my darling, we must be honest. We must help each other to be true and morally brave."

"Of course," he mused on the way home, "her father must have known from the first what she was doing and simply meant to give her a lesson by allowing her to proceed. Poor little girl, she didn't mean any harm, but I am disappointed. I didn't think her capable of the slightest deception."

As he turned the corner leading to his boarding house the light streamed out from Dr. Gordon's office, and he dropped in for a moment's chat.

"I say, Neil, you don't look well. What's the matter?" the doctor inquired.

"Oh, I believe I have nerves, and I haven't slept well lately."

"You had better let me give you a sleeping draft and then take a week's rest soon."

The sleeping draft had the desired effect, and scarcely had Harry's head touched the pillow when he was wrapped in deep slumber. After a time he was dimly conscious of a hum of voices in the street below. The room was hot, and he tossed off some of the bedclothes. His throat smarted, and his head ached. There was a strange roaring in his ears. He struggled to rouse himself, but it was too great an effort, and he lay dreamily listening to the voices below.

"I tell you, Evans, Neil is in his room!" came in terrified tones from Dr. Gordon. "I gave him a dope, and the noise has never wakened him."

"We must take a rope to him," said Evans. And Harry wondered vaguely at the unaccustomed ring in his friend's voice.

"But how?" Again it was Dr. Gordon's voice. "The front verandas are all in flames."

"Could we reach him by means of the new building? That beam runs parallel with his room."

"It would be madness," exclaimed Mr. Osborne. "The beam wouldn't hold your weight. See! It has burned through at the end next the Nelson house."

Was it all a nightmare, Harry wondered, or was it an awful reality? But the next words which reached him cleared the vapors from his brain and made him spring from his bed with a bound.

"The beam won't hold son heavy men, but I can go. I weigh only ninety pounds. I'll take the rope," came in Jessie's well loved voice.

Neil rushed to the window and hurriedly sized up the situation. His room was in the corner of the third flat with two windows—one at the front of the house and one at the side. From the front window he could see the firemen at work. The verandas and whole face of the house were a mass of fire and smoke. Water from the hose played on the blaze, but the crackling flames came like the laughter of a victorious fiend.

He ran to the side window. A new building was in process of construction, but the skeleton structure had already caught fire.

The smoke cleared for an instant, and the crowd below caught sight of him. He recognized the white faces of Mr. Osborne, George Evans and Dr. Gordon. Life was sweet. Was there no escape? And again he scanned the new building.

Some one was coming to him—a girl in a jersey waist and short tweed skirt, carrying in her hand a coil of rope. Her face was upraised for a moment, and he recognized Jessie Osborne. Frail, timid, little Jessie amid the fire and smoke! She must not come farther, and, placing his hand on the window ledge, he prepared to descend.

"Stop, you fool!" came from below.

"Neil, for any sake, don't put your foot on that beam or it is death for you both!" shouted Evans.

Convinced that Evans was right, he paused and watched the girl below. Light and agile as a kitten, she climbed from beam to brace and from brace to beam.

A few hours before he had boasted of his strength and bravery, yet here he was forced to stand with folded arms while this mite of a girl brought him succor. The heat was intense and every nerve was strained to the utmost as he watched the approaching figure. One wrong step meant death.

Awed silence fell upon the watching crowd, but Jessie reached the second story in safety and then advanced cautiously until third was gained. She placed her foot carefully on the last beam and then slowly transferred her weight to it. There was a sickening crack, then a sudden lurch, which caused Harry to cover his eyes with his hands. But a shout from George Evans made him look again. The beam had only sagged, and Jessie was walking steadily toward him.

He leaned over the window ledge with outstretched arms. A moment's awful suspense, and then, with a little cry, she sprang to her lover's embrace. As her foot left the beam the huge skeleton gave way, but Jessie and her precious rope were safe in Harry's grasp.

To fasten the rope and lower his preserver to the firemen below was the work of a moment; then, hand over hand, Harry descended the improvised fire escape. He felt himself seized and carried away from the heat. He heard a confusion of cheers and sobs, and then consciousness left him.

When he came to himself he was lying on a sofa in Mr. Osborne's home, with Dr. Gordon and George Evans beside him.

"Jessie?" he queried faintly.

"Is safe and well," Dr. Gordon replied. "She escaped entirely without injury, and her father has carried her almost by main force to her room to get the rest she needs. In fact," he added, "you monopolized the woman's right of fainting."

"It was that confounded dope of yours," Harry retorted.

"It came near costing your life; but, thank God, you both escaped. Your injuries are very slight, although your bandages look formidable. The burns are only surface burns and won't even spoil your beauty, and now I must go to Miss Osborne."

As the door closed on Dr. Gordon, George Evans turned to his friend.

"What you said about Miss Osborne's sense of honor is all right, but admit like a man that I had a truer estimate of her courage. Or, say," he added jokingly, although there was a suspicious tremor in his voice, "perhaps the engagement is called off since you don't admire that type."

"I can't joke about it, George," Neil answered gravely. "The type of girl I pictured is all right in theory, but"—

Of all overworked women probably the housewife is the hardest worked. She has so much to attend to, with very little help. Her work can be lightened if she knows the value of system and she should try and take a short rest in the daytime. A physician who became famous almost around the world, Doctor Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the specialist in woman's diseases, for many years practiced medicine in a farming district. He there observed the lack of system in the planning of the work.

If it is a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The disorder should be treated steadily and systematically with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For diseases from which women suffer "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful restorative. During the last fifty years it has banished from the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, worry, misery and distress caused by these diseases.

If you are a sufferer, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

Useless to Call Him.

A highland man from Tabermory asked the price of a railway ticket from Oban to Killin of the clerk at the Oban railway station.

"So much," replied the clerk.

"Hoot away'," replied Donald; "it's far over dear! I'd rather walk," and off he started.

He had not proceeded far when the train came tearing along, whistling as it neared a station.

"Ye needna whistle for me," said Donald. "I made ye an offer since and ye wadna ta' it, see ye can gang on. I'm no comin'."

THE MAN WITH THE RED BEARD.

[Original.]

It was in the wildest part of New Mexico during the wildest part of that region's history that a powerfully built man with a red beard and steel gray eye was walking along the main street of G. Hearing a step behind him, he turned quickly, drawing his revolver at the same moment. A greaser was about to plunge ten inches of steel into the red bearded man's back, but the latter was too quick for him and dropped the knife with a pistol ball, covering the hand with blood.

In a moment the street was full of greasers. They seemed to pop up from every corner. They surrounded the man with the red beard, knocked him down and had the life nearly kicked out of him when the sheriff came along and took him to jail. There he was in the hands of greasers, who put him in irons and tortured him in every possible way for three weeks, then, getting tired of him, turned him loose.

The red bearded man wandered northward—legs, arms and head in bandages—till he met a circus. To the manager he said:

"Goin' south?"

"Reckon."

"Stop at G.?"

"Yes. G.'s on the date book."

"Want a hand?"

"We need one or two more men to put up and take down the tents."

"I'm with you."

The red bearded man worked well, notwithstanding his bruises. The circus men called him Redbeard. They found it necessary to stand together while in that region, and the shout "Hey, Rube!" was frequently given. When some one of their number was attacked by greasers he would give the cry, and every circus man would at once lay about him, breaking as many bones of male citizens as possible.

There were an afternoon and an evening performance at G. The evening show was crowded with greasers, about every person in the town being on hand. During the day Redbeard had collected a lot of stakes and poles of various kinds and piled them outside of the main tent. He was not observed saying much of anything to his comrades, nor did they say much to each other or any one else. There was that dogged look on their faces that portended a storm. Among the audience was the greaser who had tried to knife the red bearded man and several men who had tortured him while he was in jail. He spotted them.

The show was over, and the audience was leaving the tent when Redbeard, his beard looking redder than ever in the big light that illuminated it and his steely eye darting fire, leaped upon the pile of improvised weapons he had collected and, filling his lungs with air, gave one long wild shout:

"Hey, Rube!"

Every man connected with the circus made a dash for the pile. There were tentmen in ordinary apparel, there were ostlers in high boots, there were negro minstrels in burnt cork and there were riders in spangled tights. Every man of them seized his cudgel, swung it in the air and brought it down on the nearest greaser. The women and children scurried away like hens and chickens to coop through a storm of wind and hail and lightning. Some of the greasers had their knives and pistols with them, but they had no opportunity to get together to make a united fight. Wherever they attempted to strike they were beaten down by a shower of oaken stakes.

Redbeard seemed to be saving himself for special objects. The first of his old enemies he espied dodging about in the melee was the sheriff who had arrested him. Redbeard made a dive for him, swung his club high in the air and brought it down on the man's skull. He sank like a steer in a slaughter house. Then came the turn of the greaser who had attempted the knifing. Redbeard found him on the ground where he had just fallen, tripped in the melee, and jumped upon him with a pair of boots alone heavy enough to stun him. In another moment the greaser's head was a jelly. Lastly, Redbeard attended to his jailers. One he held on a flaming torch used to light a peanut stand. Another he poked with an iron pointed stake. His thirst for revenge was unsatisfied till he had settled his account with every one of them.

When the affray was over there were a score of bodies on the ground, all of them greasers, either dead or badly wounded. There were others who had either been carried away or had been able to drag themselves off the field. The remainder had fled ignominiously. The manager, realizing that the affair was an unusual one, acted accordingly. He did not fear a rally that night, but he dared not go farther south to return through G. To return by any other route was impracticable, so he concluded to go directly northward.

Before dawn everything was packed in the wagons and the show turned away from the scene of Redbeard's vengeance. The men of the company formed a rear guard under the direction of Redbeard, who as a fighting man had won their entire confidence. They were followed for a short distance by a few greasers, but so few that, realizing the futility of interfering with the retreat, they soon gave it up and returned to G.

As to Redbeard, as soon as there was no longer use for his military service he left the company to go no one knew where. Since the fight cleanses have kept away from that region unless well fixed for defense. Nothing to incenses the greaser of these parts as the two short words

"Hey, Rube!"

The Experience of Others

Women often ask "How can we know that Crisco will do all that is claimed for it?"

CRISCO
For Frying—For Shortening
For Cake Making

The simple answer is that Crisco has been used for four years in hundreds of thousands of good homes, and has given general satisfaction.

When it is used according to directions, Crisco makes cakes and pies such as no lard or "butterine" can produce. Creamery butter itself could not improve cooking that is done with Crisco.

You will understand this better when you have made a trial of Crisco yourself.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN TRAIN THEIR GUNS UPON THE MINISTER OF MILITIA

Local Body Comprising Thirty Affiliated Societies Took Major-General Sir Sam Hughes by Storm—He Would Serve the Men in the Trenches With Liquor if It Would Assist Them in the Great Task That is Before Them.

Like the good politician that he is, Sir Sam Hughes declined to commit himself as to the advisability of closing the bars at an earlier hour than usual in towns and cities where soldiers are quartered. He delegated that duty to the provincial authorities, reserving for himself the credit for instituting the dry canteen. An address which, among other things, recommended early closing, was presented to the Minister of Militia and Defence by the local Council of Women, which included thirty affiliated societies, on Saturday afternoon. The representatives of these societies gathered in the reception room of the Empress hotel, where they were eulogized by Sir Sam for the many activities with which they have been associated since the outbreak of war. As regards smoking, Canada's war lord said he was a non-smoker himself, yet he would do nothing that would tend to deprive the men of the weed. If ever a man needed tobacco it was while he was in the trenches. He would serve the men with liquor if it would help them in the task that is before them and not depreciate the standard of efficiency. He believed tobacco to be harmful in some respects, yet its consumption was on the increase; even women were becoming addicted to the use of the weed.

The Address.

The address in question was read by Mrs. (Dr.) Neal. It contained the following:

Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B.
Minister of Militia—

Sir Sam,—We, as the Local Council of Women of Peterborough, represent an affiliation of over thirty organizations, covering every phase of women's work, and aggregating a total membership of about 800. A list of the societies represented is appended.

What the International Council of Women is to the world, the National Council is to Canada and the Local Council is to Peterborough.

As representing this large body of women, we desire to seize this opportunity of extending to you our sincere congratulations upon the comprehensive titles conferred upon you by his Majesty King George, realizing that it is not only a recognition of your noble devotion to the interests of your country, and of the notable efficiency with which you discharged the unexpected and exacting duties thrust upon you, but also confers distinction upon every Canadian. We also felicitate you upon the honours conferred upon you by our own city to-day.

We desire to express our admiration for the firm stand you have taken along various lines which vitally effect the physical and moral lives of our soldiers, emphasizing with much gratitude your success in securing the dry canteen for training camps and the unfaltering firmness which, despite bitter opposition discipline, it has been enforced.

While deeply sensible of the value of this effective reform, may we respectfully submit for your consideration the desirability of a still more progressive step.

Soon the training camps will pour their quotas of soldiers into the various cities. Noting the admirable results already obtained by early closing, we believe you would be strongly supported by public opinion if with your usual fearlessness you should advocate this advance. It is our belief that you cannot be too strongly commended for the giant strides which have been made by your authority in the matter of fortifying the moral convictions of our soldiers. Their temptations are in consequence far fewer, and as mothers, daughters, wives, sisters and sweethearts of the men who are fighting for the Empire, we are all deeply thankful for your efforts to establish high ideals by the removal of conditions menacing their manhood. From our midst have gone nurses and doctors, and in this delegation are mothers and relatives of men at the front. In them we have given and will continue to give, our heart's best treasure to our country's cause, we therefore gratefully recognize your untiring efforts to guard as a solemn trust their highest welfare.

List of Societies.

The delegation comprised representatives from the following named organizations: Daughters of the Empire, Morning Musical Club, King's Daughters, Graduate Nurses' Association, Young Ladies' Mission Circle, Women's Mission Circle, Ladies' Aid of Charlotte Street Methodist church, Ladies' Aid of Murray Street Baptist church, Women's Christian Temperance Union, St. John's Girls' Auxiliary, North End Reading Circle, South End Reading Circle, Women's Missionary Society, Charlotte Street Methodist Church, Womens Missionary Society, St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's church, Ladies' Aid of Knox church, Peterborough Elementary Graded Union of Sunday School Teachers, St. Luke's Church Women's Auxiliary, Church Women's Association of St. John's church, Women's Art Association, Chancel Guild of St. John's church, Art Association, Study Club, Women's Missionary Society of George street Methodist church, Women of Peterborough, Teachers' Association, Health Association, Board of Protestant Home, Young Women's Christian Association, Women's Auxiliary of St. John's church, Central Mothers' Club and the Red Cross Society.

Among Those Present.

Following is a partial list of the members of the deputation representing the Local Council of Women, who waited on Sir Sam Hughes on Saturday afternoon:

Fraternal Greetings.

This was followed by an address on behalf of the Liberal Conservative Association which contained the following:

Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B., Minister of Militia.

Sir,—The Liberal Conservative Association of West Peterborough desires to take advantage of your visit to our fair city to express to you its hearty congratulations upon the very distinguished honour conferred upon you recently by His Majesty King George.

It is very fortunate indeed that at the outbreak of this terrible war we had in our government a man of your ability and energy, as has been so ably demonstrated in fully equipping and placing at the disposal of the Mother Country 50,000 men in such a short time. This is surely a matter of congratulation. In this world crisis the Empire needs strong and capable men and it is not too much to say that Canada is doing "her bit."

We wish to express also to you on behalf of Lady Hughes our earnest hope that Her Ladyship may long be spared to grace the womanhood of the nation and to adorn the household of which she is so distinguished a member.

Signed on behalf of the Liberal Conservative Association of West Peterborough.

(Signed) Charles E. Moore,
President.

Board of Trade.

Included in the list of addresses was the following from the Board of Trade. It was presented by Mr. Basil Hall, President of the Board:

This is a day to be remembered in Peterborough. One of her nephews for though we cannot claim you as a native son of this city, still you are a son of our sister town of Lindsay, and as such a close relation, has come to visit, and Peterborough is very glad to see him again. We are glad, not because he is Sir Sam Hughes, lately showered with honours by his King and countrymen, but because our nephew has the qualities of mind and heart and the indefatigable energy that make him so richly deserving of all the honour that he has received and will receive. The last time we were privileged to meet, you were a youth, although a precocious one, and now we see you as a man grown, one who has tested his strength in the world of strong men and found that strength to be sure and great and lasting, and therefore we are proud that you have taken time from your many difficult tasks to come and visit with us a while, showing your affection for the Electric City. The officers, Council and members of the Peterborough Board of Trade take this opportunity of thanking you, and through you the government of Canada, for the assistance given to our manufacturers in introducing them to markets for their products of munitions, equipment and other goods. We also wish to express our gratification for the benefit that will come to our merchants through the quartering here of a half battalion of infantrymen. We have felt that we were entitled to recognition for the number of our fellow citizens who have left for active service, for the uniform fine class of men we have given and for the sacrifices we have made in the loss of some of our best and finest men, those who first saw their duty among us and leaving everything went to follow the flag. We are pleased that you see and recognize these things and are doing what you can to help us to do more for our country and empire and for civilization than we have yet been able to do. Your soldiers will be safe with us. We can and will treat them as well as any other community in Canada and we will take a special interest in our half battalion from the time of its formation till the end of the war.

On this the first occasion on which we have seen you since you have received this last and great and well merited honour at the hands of our Gracious Sovereign Lord the King, we the officers, Council and members of the Peterborough Board of Trade, individually and collectively offer you Sir Sam Hughes, our sincere congratulations and our best wishes for your

We feel a pride in the way in which the men of Peterborough have responded to the call of duty. Since the first call for volunteers for overseas service was made 1,100 men have enlisted in Peterborough, and this city is represented in every branch of the service. In common with every other part of the British Empire we are determined to fill up the ranks until Great Britain and her allies are successful and our enemies, who are the ruthless enemies of mankind, are defeated and the freedom of the world is firmly established.

Permit us to again heartily welcome you to Peterborough and to express our appreciation of the work which you and the Government of which you are a member, have done, and to repeat that we appreciate the honour you have done us in visiting Peterborough at this time.

(Signed) Mayor Buller.
Peterborough, Sept. 18th, 1915.

The Minister's Reply.

In reply to the address Sir Sam expressed his hearty thanks for the honour he had received at the hands of the people of Peterborough. He then passed on to briefly discuss some features of the world struggle. In the first place he pointed out that while Great Britain, France and Russia were totally unprepared for the conflict, the Germans had every munition depot filled from cellar to garret. "In fact the Germans are still using their ammunition made in 1911 and 1912, leaving that of later years still to be called on," said the Minister. As against this Sir Sam remarked there were nearly as many Russian soldiers armed with pitchforks as there were with rifles. But in spite of their preparedness the enemy had made little real progress. They were to have been in Paris, in Calais, and in Petrograd a year ago.

Taking up Canada's part in the struggle the Minister said that when the test came Canada felt it was her bounden duty to help the cause of Empire. He detailed what had been accomplished at Valcartier and told of how 33,000 men, instead of the 20,000 first asked, were sent across the water. Since then more and more had been sent until now Canada had more than 80,000 men in England or on the continent, while in training in Canada were enough to bring the total up to 157,000."

Canada's Glory

Vividly the Minister described the beginning of the second battle of Ypres, explaining that the Canadians were holding five miles of trenches when the Germans, for the first time in warfare, released their gas upon the French trenches on the left of the Canadians, causing our allies to fall back to the rear, leaving a five-mile gap in the line and the Canadian flank in the air. The enemy poured thousands of men into the opening, with field guns, scores of machine guns and cannon firing high explosive shells. Outnumbered and with practically no artillery support the Canadians had held the enemy for five days and nights, and when relieved held practically the same positions as when the battle opened. He had been told by men high in position in the British Army that never in the history of warfare had there been better fighting than was done by the Canadians in this struggle.

Peterborough's Share.

"In this struggle the boys from Peterborough, from the Midland district, from the whole of Ontario, did grand work," said Sir Sam. "This district has lost heavily. Major Bennet has fallen, Carpenter has fallen and many others have died bravely. Lieut. Doysee of Campbellford will always be remembered. I had the privilege of meeting Capt. Ackerman in London a short time ago, and found that although he was badly hurt he was anxious to get back to the front. He said to me, 'Well, I took more than my toll, anyway.' I found out when I got to the front what he meant, for I was informed that he had done as much to pick off the German snipers as any man in the line."

Sir Sam paid a fine tribute to the men of the 80th Battalion. They are clean cut, clear-eyed boys," he remarked. "Any proprietes that I have made in connection with this war have generally come true. I said the Canadians would make good, and now I will venture another prophesy, and that is that there are among these men before me, men who will live to walk the streets of Berlin, Germany."

In regard to the British fleet Sir Samuel said that it had swept the German flag from the oceans of the world, and barring an occasional submarine sneaking around the seas, were as free to British commerce and shipping as when the world was at peace.

In conclusion the Minister said that the fighting must not stop until the militarism and autocracy of Germany was wiped out. He announced that the recruits were still needed in Peterborough. "The girls will soon have nothing to do with a young man who is not an khaki," was his final warning to the young men in the audience.

Cheers for the Minister.

At the conclusion of the address three rousing cheers were given for the Minister while the Band played "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

In company with Capt. Harold Daly, A.-de-C.-to Lt.-Col. Johnston, His Honour Judge Huycke and other citizens the Minister then took a seat in the grandstand and watched the programme for some time, after which a tour of the ground was made.

Many people took advantage of the opportunity to shake hands with the Minister. Among them were many who have relatives at the front and they found that Sir Sam had a ready ear for them.

any dissatisfaction over the way recruits are coming in." Does Col. Ketcheson know that in a little over six weeks Peterborough has enrolled 325 men for active service? Does he know that in addition to the 150 men now in the 80th Battalion, this city has sent 77 men to the 33rd, 53 men to the 59th Battalion and 45 men to the 8th C.M.R.? Does he know that this list contains two bandmasters and practically two complete brass bands, and will he tell the people of Peterborough what place in the division have done as well in the past six weeks?

The Examiner confidently believes that Peterborough has contributed more bona fide residents according to population than any centre in Ontario. The figures have not been inflated by bringing in men from Toronto as did Lindsay and Smith's Falls, or by claiming everything in sight as Cobourg has done. Peterborough's quotas have been in the vast majority residents of Peterborough, while those who were not citizens of Peterborough came from the districts close by. And furthermore the standards of the recruits has been high throughout. The Examiner will venture to say that no quotas have ranked higher in efficiency or have appeared less on the crime sheets than the lads from Peterborough. For references applications may be made to the commanding officers of the 2nd Battalion 4th Battery, 21st Battalion, 35th Battalion, 39th Battalion, 59th Battalion, 22nd Battery, 26th Battery, 33rd Battery, 8th C.M.R., or any other Unit containing Peterborough men.

The Kingston Standard says: Lieut. Graham of Lakefield, who went to the front with the 2nd battalion of the first contingent, is in camp where he will be used for machine gun instruction. He was promoted on the field at the front to the rank of Lieutenant. He was later wounded with shrapnel at Festubert, and six week ago was sent home to Canada for a rest. Lieut. Graham expects to return to the front.

The Kingston Standard says: Ten more members of the Salvation Army band of Peterborough have enlisted in the 80th Battalion, and will join the new bands Lt.-Col. Ketcheson has started the work of organizing a band for the 80th and he intends having a good one. Nine members of the band of the 57th Regiment have also enlisted, and these with the salvationists make a band of 19 who have been practicing for the past week in Peterborough. Some members of the Hiawatha band of Peterborough have also enlisted in the 80th and will go into the band. Band-Sergt. Walter Hughes of the 57th Regiment has been chosen bandmaster of the band of the 80th. Peterborough is recruiting a complete company for the 80th, and the new band will be kept there until the company is complete when it will be sent to Barriefield camp. The company being organized at Peterborough is "D" Company of the 80th, and the new band is helping along the work of recruiting this company to strength.

There are already 25 Russians in the 80th Battalion, and Capt. Watson the adjutant, says they are good soldiers, and he wishes the 80th could get more of the same kind of men.—Kingston Standard.

The 80th Battalion had one hundred and fifty men on the roll at this morning's parade, fourteen having been added since Saturday and this number will be increased this afternoon. This is the largest quota for any one unit that has been raised in Peterborough at one time. The record has been hitherto held by B squadron 8th C.M.R. who had 147 men when they left here for Ottawa.

United States Army Estimates Will Be 250 Millions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Secretary Garrison will ask Congress if President Wilson gives his approval, for $250,000,000 to strengthen the nation's military defences.

The last Congress appropriated only $101,000,000 for the military establishment, including the army, the State militia, fortifications and West Point.

It is said, that if Congress is staggered by the proposed expenditure, it would be just as well if they never knew what the Board of General Officers appointed by Mr. Garrison to investigate the country's military defences, proposed.

Prominent Doctor Of Norwich Comes To Peterborough

Glowing Reference to Dr. Harvey, Who Held Many Prominent Positions in the Town of Norwich and Whose Departure From That Place is Much Regretted

The following item from the Norwich Gazette, has reference to the departure from Norwich for Peterborough of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey and family, who will take up their residence in the house occupied by the late Dr. Brown, at the corner of George and Murray streets:

There departed from Norwich on Tuesday of this week, Dr. and Mrs. Harve and family, who will make their home in future in Peterborough after a residence here of twenty-two years.

The doctor came to Norwich July 1st, 1893 and commenced to practice as a physician, and in these years he had built up a very extensive practice. In fact his professional calls were so numerous, and many of them from a distance in the country, that the strain was beginning to tell, and it was partly on this account that he decided to seek an office in a city where the long trips would be eliminated.

As a citizen Dr Harvey will be very much missed. He always took a deep interest in the town's affairs, and it was this interest that has given us many of the privileges that we now enjoy. Since his coming he has been Medical Officer of Health, and in this he has done much, he always advocated that "an ounce of prevention was worth a pound of cure," and in this way he had kept our town fairly free from infectious diseases. He strongly advocated a waterworks system, and was instrumental in us having the fine system we now enjoy. He also seen to it that all other regulations in connection with the Board of Health were carried out.

In school matters no person took a deeper interest than the doctor. Shortly after his arrival in Norwich he showed this by frequently visiting the school and giving talks to the pupils. His interest soon became apparent to the ratepayers and they elected him as a trustee, which office he has held for eighteen years. Norwich has one of the best school buildings in the country, and considerable credit for this can also be given the doctor, he being on the Board when it was erected. He also has to his credit one year's term as councillor, and two years as secretary of the Board of Trade. It was his untiring efforts that got the Board of Trade organized a few years ago, and it is one of the town's best institutions. When the Whitney Government came into power, the doctor's loyalty to his party was recognized, and he was given the appointment of Police Magistrate of the town. While acting in this capacity he always used good judgment and dispensed justice in as fair a manner as was possible. It might be said that the success of Local Option in Norwich is in a large measure due to the stand he took when any person or persons appeared before him for an infraction of the law.

Another office he held for a long term was that of member of the Library Board. On several occasions his name has been mentioned as the standard bearer for the Conservative party in South Oxford.

In the Methodist church Dr Harvey's enthusiasm was noticeable. For twelve years he had been its treasurer. Not alone will the Dr be missed in the church, but also his estimable wife, who has been President of the Women's Missionary Society for fourteen years. Mrs. Harvey was a woman of quiet disposition, but she was alert when there was a call for a ladies service.

The citizens of Norwich regret very much the removal of this estimable family, and it is their wish that in their new abode the will have [illegible]

Tobacco Day In The Trenches

What Readers of the Examiner Can Do To Help the Work

It is a red-letter day for a unit in the trenches when one of the parcels arrive which the Overseas Club is sending out through the generosity of the citizens of Canada. Boxes are eagerly opened and the parcels pass round to men who perhaps have not smoked for a week. Some are addressed to individuals; they read on them the name of a friend—even a casual acquaintance an employer or a fellow-worker, obliged to stay at home; and not less than the comfort of the tobacco and cigarettes found within is the glow of pleasure in having been remembered. Other parcels are addressed to regiments, and some of the men recall the names of the senders at home. Their unforgotten service to the Empire is sweetened by this silent message like a hand-pressure stretched across the sea; perhaps the thought comes to them that they are not in so very distant an exile after all.

Our readers are asked to co-operate in this good work, and the Tobacco Fund of the Overseas Club is so well organized that it lays their money out to the best conceivable advantage. It would cost the soldier one dollar to buy at home the parcel of tobacco, cigarettes and matches which a quarter hands to him carriage paid and free of duty not a penny of the money being consumed for organization and collecting expenses.

But they need more! Readers can subscribe, they can get collecting books, and they can induce their friends to be collectors for a fund which is sending out the largest possible value for every quarter collected. Individual contributions should be sent to the Examiner Office.

Thanks Extended

Especially Mr T H Hooper, who has so kindly roasted their meat for the past three years also Mr McGibbeon of the Morgan Hardware Co., who did their laundry work with their 1900 Washer Company's outfit, and the Ocean Blend Company, who have supplied us with such excellent tea for the past five years.

MARRIAGES.

SMITH—CRAIG—On September 4th 1915, at St. George's church, Montreal, by the Rev. Wm. Stevenson Major, Hazel Viola, youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs. John T. Craig Peterborough, to J. Neelands Smith, M.D., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Smith of Toronto.

Married men need have no hesitation in joining the 80th. The Patriotic Fund and the Separation Allowance makes the maintenance of the loved ones a certainty.

A Better Game Than Hockey

That is How Fred Denison, Well Known Peterborough Hockey Player, Describes Military Life

Following are extracts from a letter received by a member of the Examiner staff from Corp Fred Denison the former Peterborough hockey player, who is in A Company of the 34th Battalion at London:

Thought perhaps you would like to listen to a couple of lines from one of the boys of the "Old Brigade." Therefore—

Am a member of the 34th Battalion along with three other Peterborough boys, Irvine D. Ross, who used to be in the Bank of Ottawa about three years ago, is paymaster sergeant; Tommy Holyman, who used to live there, and myself. The fourth Peterborough boy here is Jack Fraser, who used to clerk in Leck's store; he is in the 33rd Battalion, which is also located on Cathoy's Heights. Some crowd, and I only wish we had more Peterborough blood with us.

We are leaving here in a short time and everyone is glad that we are getting a little nearer the front. We expect to go to Shorncliffe from here and I hope we do, because I may have a chance to see some more of the crowd over there.

The army life is a far better game than hockey, and I often wonder more of the fellows don't get into it. As soon as I read of Geo. Mmorgan's and "Billy" Gibson's death I enlisted; I could not wait to get to Peterborough to join. Our battalion was at Guelph then and I signed right away. We have a bunch of good men, too, and I think we will all give a good account of ourselves. Get that old "Examiner" paper of yours working and send more Canadians from Peterborough.

Had a chance to take a commission for lieutenant out last week, but would have to wait until the 71st went before I'd get away, so I passed it up. Paymaster Sergeant Ross had a chance to be captain quartermaster of the 71st Battalion, but threw the offer down. Everyone wants to get over there as soon as possible.

The training here has been monotonous at times, but have had a good time, too. I pitched for the battalion baseball team and we won the brigade cup without a loss; in fact we have only lost two games all season out of about twenty-five. Will send you a picture of the team.

Annual Rally Of Mission Circle

On Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, the annual rally of the Mission Circle of the Murray street church will be held.

Arrangements have been made for a series of five minute addresses on the Lives of our Missionaries," by Mrs Wearing, Mrs Breyfogle, Mrs Garbutt, Miss Barnard, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. W. Lewis, Miss Darling.

Rev Alex Haddon and wife, missionaries-elect for South America, will be present and speak briefly.

Refreshments will be served and the report of the mite box proceeds will be made. The president Mrs. E J Hunter, will occupy the chair.

Snapshots From Col. T. W. H. Young

Mrs Dr Young has received a number of snapshots from her husband, Col T W H Young, Medical Officer with the Divisional Engineers, now in France. One is a picture of Col. Young and his two brothers, Major Wallis Young, now at Aldershot, and Col Austin Young, of Souris, Man., with the same battalion as the doctor.

Col. T W H Young had not seen his eldest brother for many years, Major Wallis Young having served in India for 25 years. A number of the snapshots include pictures of the work done by the engineers while in training.

TO FORM A NEW RED CROSS BRANCH

The ladies of St John's are asked to meet in the Guild Room on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock to form a branch of the Red Cross Society and to elect officers, etc. The work has hitherto been splendidly carried on by the members of both the Women's and Girls' Auxiliaries, but this month the regular mission work has to be taken up. This most important work should be taken up by every lady in the church, for there is something for every person to do. It is expected that a thoroughly representative gathering will meet on Tuesday afternoon.

WORTH KNOWING

STRAWBERRIES may be set out now with good results, if the weather is moist.

Sweet peas require rich soil, good drainage, and moisture for their best growth.

Keep all weeds from going to seed and so destroy part of the trouble-makers for next year.

The fall fairs and flower shows begin soon. Prepare to show something. It pays you and helps make the show a success.

Dahlias have done exceedingly well so far this year. Did you have any? Now is a good time to select good varieties.

Geraniums and snapdragons may be lifted from the garden and potted for winter blossoms late in August or early in September.

It may be worth while to stop all increase of branches or buds on the melon vines, forcing the vines to hasten maturity of the fruits already formed.

Now is a good time to go over the fence corners and unused yards with a scythe and remove the burdock and other weeds that have found a home there. It will reduce the weed crop next year and makes the place look better.

MONTREAL IS CHANGED.

Waterside District Now Guarded Night and Day.

When the Kaiser hurled his legions into battle on August 4th last he changed the whole course of the port of Montreal. He did not intend to do that for his "supreme" advisers had apparently assured him that the "cubs" would seize the first war alarm to break away from the old Mother. But they didn't do that, but, instead they began at once to raise armies and equip soldiers at a rate that was amazing. The "plough shares" and the "pruning hooks" were beaten into spears; the Cubs went to war too, and against the Hun and his allies.

The port of Montreal in peace times and the same place when the war drum beats are distinctly different. The freedom of entrance to wharves and sheds has disappeared, and along with it has gone the right to loiter in the sun at the water's edge or prowl to one heart's content among the shipping and ships from over the seas. Khaki uniformed attendants guard every gate demanding a pass from all who would enter within the stone guard walls. Soldiers of the King—the Composite Battalion—with shining bayonets pace day and night the banks of the Lachine canal and woe betide the man who tries to pass one of the "boys" without the proper document. Some thoughtless—or ignorant—people have tried it in the past and, as a consequence, they have been backed unceremoniously across to the guard house with the point of a bayonet in uncomfortable proximity to the front of the coat or they have beat a hasty and undignified retreat outside the stone walls that limit the port of Montreal. Not always do they escape so well for on one occasion the individual who suddenly found himself face to face with a businesslike man with the gun and "sticker" was so alarmed that he promptly fell into the water. He was fished out with a pole and sent home with a higher regard than ever before for Canadian soldiers and cold steel.

Must Compete With U. S.

A recent report on the lumber situation in British Columbia, after discussing the effect of American competition on the Canadian lumberman, says:

The same necessity for expansion of markets exists in the Northwestern States as in British Columbia. British Columbia, therefore, in striving for sufficient markets to keep her mills operating, will be forced to meet the keen competition of the American mills. The nature of that competition may be judged from the fact that, although the market in the Canadian Prairie has never been great enough to take more than three-fifths of our ouput, the Americans have in nearly every year of the past five supplied at least one-fifth of it. Although there is now free lumber into the United States, only 40,000,000 feet were shipped from British Columbia to the United States in 1914, as compared with the 77,000,000 feet imported into the Canadian Prairie from the United States during the same period. To find and hold a wider lumber market will tax every resource of both manufacturers and Government through years of effort. There can, however, be no argument about the necessity of making an attempt."

Charity.

"I hates dese suspicious guys," said the panhandler.

"What have dey been doin' to you now?" asked his friend.

"A gink give me a dime dis morn in' to git somethin' to eat, and den he follers me into a restaurant and watches me spend it.

And Then You Won't.

Opening Of The Fall Assizes

Took Place To-day at Noon—Chancellor Boyd is Presiding

Only one case survived the first legal onslaught that was made on the civil list that was presented to Chancellor Boyd at the opening of the High Court which was accounted for to-day. Two cases in which John McNish and John Meharry were named as plaintiffs, and Review as defendants, were laid over until the next sitting of the High Court. A similar procedure followed in the case of Garnett Innis vs. the Anglo American Fire Insurance Co. The plaintiff in this case seeks to recover the sum of $2,000 from the defendant Company in consideration of certain property that was destroyed by fire some months ago. The sole remaining case is that of Hon. J. R. Stratton versus M. Pappas and G. Boukydis of Toronto, in which plaintiff seeks to recover the amount of a promissory note. This case is being heard this afternoon.

The men summoned for the grand and petit juries were discharged as the character of the docket did not require their presence.

Women Have Been Released

Case of Two Local Women Sentenced to One Year in the Mercer, Will be Appealed

Mrs. Maude Hanlon and Mrs. Phoebe Tyler, who a few days ago, were sentenced each to one year in the Mercer reformatory, have been released on bail amounting to $500 each, pending an appeal which is being instituted by Mr. D. O'Connell, counsel for the accused. The latter were tried and convicted by Police Magistrate Dumble upon an original charge of loitering on a public street. At the trial additional evidence was submitted which tended to show that the women were undesirable citizens.

HAND CAUGHT IN AN EDGING MACHINE AT MILL

Arthur Corbin, an employee of the McDonald Estate Co., had one hand caught in an edger on Saturday. It was bruised and cut, but he will be able to resume work in a short time.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—With your kind permission of space in your paper I would like to congratulate the judge of the vegetable collection in the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, who placed 2nd prize on the one which deserved 1st by a long way. To my idea he could learn a thing or two yet; but considering he is in the confidence of some of the directors, it is no wonder a director received 1st prize. Could you tell me if a director is allowed to exhibit?

What the people want is something pleasant to look upon, and for myself I like to see an improvement on the last ten years. When some one gives us something worth looking at others who cannot do as good try to put them down. I think it the line of arrangement was taken from 2nd prize that our Fair would be more of a credit to the directors. Port Hope and Millbrook fairs are far before ours simply because they know how to arrange exhibits to the people's fancy.

Thanking you for your space, I am,

One Who Likes Fair Play.

In regard to the above complaint, it might be mentioned that the judge in question made his award, taking into consideration the variety of vegetables shown as well as the arrangements. The second prize winner had a splendid arrangement of his exhibit, but had not the variety in his collection shown by the winner of the first prize.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

Mr. F. C. Weber Won Welch $50 Prize

Mr. F. C. Weber has had the honour, in addition to the $50. of winning the first prize in the Dominion contest of window displays of Welch's grape juice. The Welch week window display was from July 1 to 8. Entries were forwarded from all parts of the Dominion. Mr. Weber secured the $50 first prize and the Warne Drug Co. was among those receiving a five dollar prize. Mr. Bert T. Huston and Mr. W. J. Bryans of Toronto, were the Why all this fuss about Chewing Gum?

"Couldn't you save money on flavoring, for instance, and still give an excellent Gum?"

Yes, so we could. But you should understand at the start that Sterling Gum set out to establish a new standard in chewing gums. To accomplish this, the flavor must be both more delicious and more lasting. Hence:

Point No. 1—Crowded with flavor.

"Well, then, is all this repeated refining really necessary?"

Of course, no chewing gum is always gritty. But we want a gum which is never gritty. You can chew Sterling Gum month in and month out without striking grit in a single stick. This simple fact is expressed in Point No. 2—Velvety body —NO GRIT.

"How does Sterling Gum keep?"

We have taken great pains to produce a gum which would hold its freshness under extremes of heat, cold and humidity. The result is:

Point No. 3—Crumble-proof.

"At that rate you're a little on the order then of pure-food cranks?"

Yes. It is a matter of record that the highest grades of chicle, flavors and other materials come to us. We even pulverize our own sugar right in our own sunny kitchens. There is a real purity effort back of Point No. 4—Sterling purity.

"You speak of 'sunny kitchens'. Any particular point there?"

Indeed yes! The Sterling Factory is a model gum factory. All day long the light streams through into spotless surroundings. Hence:

Point No. 5—From a daylight factory.

"Do the help live up to their surroundings?"

Yes. Each employe wears a clean uniform and cap. Each morning we supply him with fresh-laundered, snow-white gloves. That is how we accomplish:

Point No. 6—Untouched by hands.

"That IS interesting. Now, what is Point 7?"

Point 7? That is in the gum. You will find it there. Later on we will offer suitable rewards for the discovery of Point 7. But now we simply present it to you this way: (7) What?

Turks Using Mines Against The French

PARIS Sept. 20—A War Office statement says:

In the Dardanelles from Sept. 12 to Sept. 17 there was no movement of importance.

The Turks attacked several positions of our front by means of mines which had not been employed by them up to the time.

On the morning of the 17th an enemy mine gallery was destroyed, after it had been advanced for several days by our counter-miners. The operation was perfectly successful without costing us a single loss.

MOST BEAUTIFUL WORD.

Interesting, Pathetic, and Amusing Choices in Recent Experiment.

What is the most beautiful word in the English language? A professor, who has been teaching for a number of years, has collected some interesting facts concerning the preferences that schoolgirls and schoolboys entertain for certain words. He has made the experiment with some twenty classes, all the way from an infant class in a country school to the senior students at one of the universities.

At the conclusion of an examination the teacher has had little slips of blank paper distributed. He has then requested each pupil to write down, without consulting his neighbour, what he thought the most beautiful word in the English language, giving consideration both to sound and to sense.

Of the 600 pupils that he has had, 405 wrote the name "Mother," eighty-two wrote "Home," twenty-two "Father," eighteen "Daddy," sixteen "Vacation," seven "Fireside," nine "Football," seven "Love," three "Sister," two "Aunties," and two "Grandmother." The following words received one vote each: "grand-" "Vesper," "Moonlight," "Hope," "Rose," "Hyacinth," "Angel," "Music," and "Play."

Of the remaining fourteen, one, a response from a very bright boy, puzzled the professor. That boy wrote "Cellar door." When asked about it, he pronounced it "Cellah doah," and explained, "Oh, it just sounds pretty."

The other thirteen votes, all for the same word, amused and perplexed the professor. They were all handed in at the same time from a class of twenty-nine healthy, growing, hard-working country boys. There was, the teacher insists, no opportunity for collusion. The vote was taken silently. Each ballot was then folded and dropped into a hat that the teacher asked one of the boys to pass around.

Those thir een citizens-to-be deliberately wrote down the ugly-sounding, greasy-looking, thoroughly unattractive word "Victuals." What could have been more suggestive of that teacher's opportunity than the fact that nearly half of a class of twenty-nine immortal souls thought "Victuals" the most beautiful word in the English language?

And what higher compliment could be paid to motherhood and the home than the fact that 527 of these 600 boys and girls, young men and young women, independently, and at various times and places, selected words that suggested family relationship as the sweetest words in their language?

Marvels of Memory.

"The phonograph is wonderful enough, but the human brain is vastly its superior, as it has been shown to have stored up for forty-five years the thoughts actually passing through it and the speech resulting therefrom," states a medical man.

"A boy in a village in the Tyrol when fifteen years old went to his father's field to catch a frisky colt. When about to place a halter about the animal's neck it kicked him on the head. The wound healed, but the use of the boy's reason did not return. For forty-five years he lived in the village, until he reached the age of sixty. Then a prominent German specialist, who passed through the village on a holiday offered to experiment. Finding that a portion of the skull had been forced into contact with the brain, he by skilful operation removed the pressure. The man at once regained his reason, and his first utterance as the effects of the anaesthetic wore off was 'Did the colt get away?'"—Detroit News-Tribune.

HUNTING DOG-SCALPS.

Five Hundred Pounds a Year for Killing Rabbits.

Australian life on the sheep-farming blocks is marked by some curious phases. A reward of £1, for instance, is offered for the scalp of a dingo, the wolf-like, fierce Australian dog, which is so destructive to the flocks. There was a time, says Mr. C. E. W. Bean, in "On the Wool Track" (Alston Rivers), when a scalp meant the two ears of a dog and the forehead between. Then came the wily Chinaman, who was taken on as a dogger, and who brought in "whole mobs of scalps," although nobody knew there were so many dogs about.

In the end someone examined the scalps, and then they found that when the Chinaman killed one dog he manufactured about twenty scalps out of him—ears and all. They were fine art. But after that the rule was altered. A scalp since that date has meant a strip of skin cut from the tip of the nose right down the back to the tail. You cannot manufacture two backbones out of one dog.

On some stations boys get a cartridge for every rabbit-scalp they bring in. They hit four out of every five with a pea rifle, and, according to Mr. Bean, have such big profits in the country towns during the last few years that they go rabbit-shooting instead of going to school.

Rabbits, as most people are aware, are the curse of Australia; so much so that it is a common thing for a squatter to spend £500 or more a year destroying rabbits. Poison-carts, which lay poison for rabbits, are generally employed. These carts have a knife underneath which scratches a furrow in the surface of the ground into which the poison falls and is covered up. Rabbits will grub for poison, but sheep do not. Though the greater part of the sheep country has poison laid all over it, few sheep are poisoned. But it is said some native birds have been almost exterminated.

No sheep squatter, by the way, is without his "cocky's joy," which is really golden syrup, and is so popular with squatters because it is four times as cheap as jam and six times as portable. Its name has been derived in a very curious manner. A "cocky" is a small farmer. He usually selects himself a three-hundred or five-hundred-acre holding, clears it, fences it, pays for it, ploughs it, sows wheat in it—and then goes to bed to wait for his crop. The next morning he gets up and finds the paddock white with cockatoos grubbing up his seed. He is there to plough and sow and reap—cockatoos. And that, they say, is how he got the name of a cockatoo farmer—o cocky.

On the Merry-go-round.

One melancholy, serious faced individual, despite the fact that he was apparently suffering intensely, persisted in riding on one of the merry-go-rounds at a fair. Becoming convinced that there was something seriously wrong with him, either mentally or otherwise, a man asked him how he liked it.

"'Like it?' he reiterated, with a pained expression. "I don't like it at all; on the contrary, the infernal thing makes me sick."

"Then why do you persist in riding?" I asked curiously.

"I can't help it," he replied confidently. "The man who owns this merry-go-round owes me money, and the only way I can get even is by taking it out in rides."

He Apologized.

The vice president of a certain railroad, so the story goes, was traveling incognito, and in the chief paint shop of the system encountered an Irish brush wielder working in an apparently careless manner at removing paint from the side of a car. Upon remonstrating with the man he received this reply: "Ah, come now, go long wid yes. I guess I know me bisness." The foreman painter roasted Pat and told him it was the vice-president of the road and that he must apologize. So Pat solemnly went to apologize. He said to the official: "I apologize all right; I apologize for being impolite, but be Jabers, I can't pay attention to every confounded fool that comes along."

Desdemona's Resurrected Feet.

Ellen Terry told a comical story of one of her early experiences. She was playing the part of Desdemona, and after being duly smothered in her bed by Othello and he had drawn the curtains she felt a great sense of oppression and thought she would sit up on the edge of the bed until the curtain dropped at the end of the act. To think was to do, so up she sat without knowing that the curtains around her bed did not reach the floor by nine or ten inches, and the audience was vastly amused at the spectacle of the feet of the dead Desdemona merrily swinging below the curtains of the bed on which she was supposed to be lying dead.

RECORDS BROKEN.

Rogers Pass Tunnel Now Caps All Previous Achievements.

Rapid progress is being made by the Canadian Pacific Railway in driving the Rogers Pass tunnel in British Columbia. 1. November last the record for this tunnel was 817 feet and during January it had advanced to 932 feet.

This remarkable progress, made in a pioneer heading, driven through a mica schist, is accounted for by the steady improvement in the air drills and drill steel used, as well as in the system employed.

As recently as January, 1908, the record for Europe and the world was still held by the Simplon tunnel with a monthly average of 685 feet, and in January, 1908, the record for the American continent of 449 feet was made by the Gunnison tunnel of Colorado, in a heading 8½ by 12 feet, which ultimately reached 824 feet a month when drilling through very soft shale.

The Loetschberg tunnel in Switzerland was well under way in January, 1908, but the maximum for one heading by then was only 558 feet. This was, however, far eclipsed later on by the remarkable advance of 1,013 lineal feet in a 31-day month in the same tunnel through limestone.

It is true that in 1906 one shield of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad reached 965 feet per month, doing as much as 308 feet in one week, but as this was in very soft Hudson silt and not more than 33 per cent. of the excavation was admitted to the tunnel, the remainder being pushed up into the river bed by the shield, it is not considered a fair comparison with the solid rock records.

Nothing approaching the Simplon record was reached in hard rock in America until the Wallkill tunnel, of the New York city aqueduct, advanced 523 feet in Hudson shale in September, 1910, but this record was broken three times by the Elizabeth tunnel of Los Angeles aqueduct, with 604 feet in 30 days, and the Jawbone tunnel advanced 1,061 feet in very soft rock on the same undertaking.

It remained for Canada to lead the way on the American continent in hard rock tunnels, and the Mt. Royal tunnel, in Montreal, for the Canadian Northern Railway, reached the satisfactory record of 810 feet for June, 1913, in Trenton limestone with dikes of hard rock. Now this record is outdistanced.

In these recent records on the American continent the European system of mounting the drills on a horizontal bar, with or without a drill carriage, has been adopted, and as this permits the drills being set up before the muck pile is removed, it is possible for at least two shots to be fired in an eight-hour shift. A large amount of high percentage powder per cubic yard is required to break the rock into small fragments and scatter it well along the heading floor to give time for two rounds of drilling in eight hours, especially as each round pulls an average of five feet.

OTHER PLACES AND MANNERS.

Hon. Pierre Leblanc Knew Electioneering in the Old Days.

Hon. Pierre Everiste Leblanc, the new Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, re-enters the public life of his Province after a retirement of six years, following his defeat as M.L.A. for Laval County, which he had represented continuously for twenty-four years, the final four as leader of the small Conservative minority in the Quebec Legislature. In the good old primitive days, the standard rate for votes among the habitants was one dollar, cash in hand, with a drink of gin to bind the bargain, and there is no case on record where a voter was so lost to all sense of honor as to fail to fulfil a compact thus made. Mr. Leblanc, well versed in the simple, innocent ways of the French-Canadian voters, was accounted one of the most skilful of campaigners, but he found that he had something to learn when he was called upon by his party to do some electioneering in the Eastern Townships, which are largely settled by the descendants of English and Scotch pioneers. At the first house which he visited he found the men folk away, and a buxom housewife in possession. Explaining his mission in courtly and persuasive fashion, he ventured the hope that the local Conservative candidate might count upon receiving the vote of the master of the house. The lady, for answer, extended a broad and work-worn palm, and, slapping it vigorously with the other hand, exclaimed: "John Jones votes for the man who first puts a ten-dollar bill in that hand, and he doesn't vote at all unless I get it!"

Rats Aboard Ship.

There used to be a belief that rats never went on a ship that was destined to founder at sea. This has a fine supernatural ring, but, as a matter of fact, has a good deal of truth at bottom. Unseaworthy ships in the olden days were likely to be leaky and contain much bilge water. The rats would naturally abandon such damp quarters for a drier berth.

CARING FOR FOXES.

How Breeders Rear Valuable Fur Bearing Animals.

Since the early summer of 1913 over a million dollars has been withdrawn from the Charlottetown branch of the Dominion Government saving banks for use in the fox industry. The methods of caring for foxes are now generally known, but no person who has not lifelong familiarity with animals should attempt to put them into practice. There have been instances where highly intelligent town bred men have failed after earnest efforts to handle foxes. The females are in the highest degree capricious and sensitive, especially during the mating and rearing season. If they have the slightest suspicion that their young are in danger they carry the little ones ceaselessly from place to place or even bury them alive in the snow or earth with the insane idea of protecting them. On the other hand there are captive foxes which become quite tame and make fairly tractable pets.

The young ordinarily mature sufficiently to propagate during their first year. During the early summer all foxes except the spring pups shed the long "guard hair" which projects out beyond the soft body fur. In the autumn this hair appears once more against the approach of cold weather, restoring the beauty of the fox's coat. The fur is usually taken late in December; the animal is killed with chloroform and the skin is removed with solicitous care, incisions being confined if possible to the backs of the hind legs.

The ranch is usually located in a piece of underwood on sloping ground near the owner's dwelling and is surrounded by an outer stockade or a fence of fourteen gauge galvanized fox wire (similar to chicken wire) manufactured especially for the purpose in England, Canada, and "the States." The fence is ten feet high and an overhang of two feet at the top prevents the fox from climbing out, while a deep foundation or an extension of the wire underground precludes escape by burrowing. The inner enclosures or paddocks, each devoted to one pair, are also fenced as just described and are ordinarily about thirty-five feet square. Each contains a wooden kennel or foxhouse, divided into a nesting compartment bedded with seaweed or straw and an outer cleaning compartment. Sometimes quarters for four pairs of foxes are built, though separate, in one central house, with spouts debouching from each corner into corresponding paddocks.

The foxes are fed very sparingly with scrap meat, clean offal, fish, special bannock cakes prepared with tallow, or with manufactured dog biscuits. They will consume berries and small fruit to a limited extent; and they seem to relish green grass or other herbage—this appetite apparently being nature's provision for the regulation of their alimentary systems. To females during the winter and spring are fed eggs, milk, gruel, and other nutritious and easily assimilable foods. To foxes about to be killed for their pelts are fed molasses, honey, and various patent stock foods with the purpose of enhancing the brilliancy of the fur.

The most elaborate and extraordinary precautions are taken to prevent the loss or theft of the high grade blacks. Man traps and uninsulated electric wires of high voltage are in use on several ranches; although since the fox pens are not an integral legal part of the owner's dwelling such measures are not strictly within the law. Small shanties are often built at the gates of the enclosures and armed caretakers who sleep in these huts are warned by electric gongs of any attempt to break into the ranch.

No Escape.

Some time ago an esteemed citizen was rambling along the boulevard when he was approached by an enterprising young man who was selling flowers.

"Here you are, sir!" cried the salesman, extending a bouquet. "Buy some beautiful flowers for your sweetheart?"

"Nothing doing," responded the esteemed citizen. "I haven't got a sweetheart."

"I see," was the prompt rejoinder of the salesman. "Buy the flowers for your wife."

"Wrong again," came back the other. "I am not married."

"Fine!" exclaimed the resourceful salesman. "Buy the bouquet to celebrate your luck."

A BIT TOO EFFICIENT.

It Was an Impressive Letter, but It Didn't Win the Position.

We assure our readers, gentle and otherwise, that the subjoined letter applying for a job as private secretary or stenographer to a railroad president is genuine in every respect:

Dear Sir,—I wish to lay before you my application for a secretarial position, to be given consideration at such time as you may require the services of one with the qualifications as touched upon in this letter.

A competent and qualified stenographer, experienced in charting statistics, possessed of the taciturnity and discretion necessary to association with executives, broadly read on matters germane to railroad operation, a student of unity and clearness in composition, with an acquisition of that uncommon knowledge of English—including the study of word differentiations—essential to the highest grade stenographic work, an omniverous though active reader with a vocabulary sufficiently large to meet the requirements of both your vocative and avocative correspondence, I am fitted to give such service as would be demanded by one in your capacity.

I shall be glad to give to any designated subordinate an oral expatiation of my fitness and experience.

Respectfully yours,

The railway president must have read this impressive document with awe and some apprehension. Here was a vocabulary so large that it would undoubtedly have to be checked whenever the gentleman in the secretarial position traveled by rail. Perhaps that is why the student of unity and clearness, although equipped with the taciturnity and discretion necessary to association with executives, was not invited to meet the requirements of this particular executive's vocative and avocative correspondence.

Here is a fearful example of the consequences of too much efficiency training.

THE SAVING OF MONEY.

When Purchasing Luxuries Consider How Old You Are.

One day a young man twenty-five years of age told me that he had just fallen heir to $2,500. He was going to spend the whole sum on a pure luxury. He said that $2,500 was not much money anyway and that he might as well have a good time with it, even though the good time lasted only a little while.

When I told him in a general way that he ought to save that money I made no impression on him. But when I explained to him how $2,500 invested at 6 per cent. and compounded annually would double in twelve years he began to wake up. At thirty-seven he would have $5,000, at forty-nine $10,000 and at sixty-one $20,000. The $20,000 at sixty-one would be yielding him $1,200 a year, a little more than his present salary.

I had aroused his financial imagination to the first real work it had ever done, so far as I know. He hung on to that money and invested it at 6 per cent.

I told him that when he is sixty-one and has that $20,000 maybe somebody else will give him $2,500 and if so to go out and spend it if he wants to. Money spent at sixty-one by a man of some means is not like money spent at twenty-five by a young man of no means. The man at sixty-one has comparatively little chance left for his pile to grow. In fact, by sixty-one he is supposed to have his pile.

Always when contemplating luxuries consider how old you are before buying. The price of luxuries is much higher in early life than later. It is very high in youth. If you want some comforts and a few luxuries in old age control yourself in the earlier years. Get the foundation of your capital laid early, so that it will have time to build itself from small beginnings into a substantial amount, say at sixty.

Almanacs.

It is still contended by many authorities that the almanac of 1457 was the first specimen of printing, and it has been variously credited to Gutenberg, Schaeffer and Pfister of Bamberg. Dr. Faustus, celebrated in legend, whose strange story has been immortalized by Marlowe and Goethe, was the accredited author of almanacs containing astrological signs (retained at the present day) and necromantic secrets.

DANGER SIGNALS.

Red Is Used Because It Is the Most Effective Color.

Red is the color universally used as a danger signal because it can be seen farther than any other color. It is also the color that "attracts attention, excites curiosity and arouses to action," as William Churchill said in an address before the Illuminating Engineering society.

Green, the complementary of red, is seen almost as far as red, but green is the color of which nature makes lavish use, and therefore a green signal is less easily recognized than a red, because the former may easily be taken for a part of the background, while the latter always contrasts vividly with the background. So green has been used for a clear or a cautionary signal.

At night especially red is used as a danger signal, red lanterns being placed on torn up streets and obstructions, red tail lights being used for motor-cars, red lamps to indicate fire exits in theaters, factories and hotels and more recently to mark dangerous parts of machinery, high current wires and other danger spots.

In Mr. Churchill's address, as quoted by the Scientific American, he gave the effective range of the several colored lights recognized by the Railway Signal association under ordinary weather conditions, as follows: Red, three to three and one-half miles; yellow, one to one and one-half miles; green, two and one-half to three miles; blue, one-half to three-quarters of a mile; purple, one-half to three-quarters of a mile; lunar white, two to two and one-half miles.

Red, no matter how distant, never ceases to look red. This is not true of any other color, though a good green fairly approximates it.

Yellow light is visible much farther than the distance at which its color can be distinguished and is easily mistaken for a "neighborhood light"—that is a house, for instance.

Lunar white—a pale bluish white—has come into use as a "clear" indication for switches on many railroads. It can be recognized at greater distances than yellow and is not so easily mistaken for "neighborhood lights."

Getting It Right.

A certain society lady has been noted since girlhood for her ready wit. The other day a young man of humorous bent exclaimed in her presence:

"What could be more dreadful for a woman than, after mending her husband's coat, to find in one of the pockets a love letter from another woman?"

"Fortunately," said the lady, "that could never happen. The woman would find the letter first, and then she would not mend the coat."

A Pleasant Threat.

This is the message the German Emperor's aviators are now showering upon Poland: 'All women between the ages of fourteen and thirty-two will be made prisoners of war if the men are found absent.'"

Four Tuppers in the War.

Lieut. Charles Tupper, son of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, is at Roehcliffe Barracks attending the school of musketry prior to going to the front with his regiment, a British Columbia battalion.

All four sons of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper are in service. Reginald Tupper was wounded at St. Julien. He stuck to his machine gun until twice wounded. He is convalescing in England. Gordon Tupper, an officer of the Second Contingent, is reported to have joined one of the regiments in Flanders. He has been kept out of action for some time through an attack of pneumonia. James is an inspector in the North-west Mounted Police, and has been refused permission to go to the front, as officers in the Mounted Police are required in the West. Charles Tupper, the youngest of the family, has now joined the colors.

Lieut. Merritt, a son-in-law, died at St. Julien while leading his men in an attack on the German trenches.

A Discovery.

A merchant in a Canadian city once made a discovery. He had purchased some goods that did not turn out as he thought they would. Instead of advertising "Enormous Bargains" he simply said, "I bought them to sell at $10.00, but they are not worth it; in fact I cannot recommend them at all, but you will find them worth $4.00." He sold them all and made some new customers, who were convinced of his sincerity.

Nothing new about it. Truth is as old as the hills and he simply told the truth. He discovered that honesty is the best policy, and fortunately very many advertisers are making the same discovery.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr Down of Omemee, and the Rev. Mr. Stainton of Bethel circuit, was present also.

At five o'clock the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the parlour to the strains of "Mendelssohn's Wedding March," played by Miss Ella Switzer, a friend of the bride, and took her position with the groom under an arch of evergreens and asters.

The bridal couple were attended by Miss Ada Harrison, sister of the bride and Mr. Harold Telford, brother of the groom, also little Velma Harrison, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl, carrying a pretty basket of sweet peas.

HYPNOTIZING ANIMALS.

Even the Deadly Cobra May Be Made Perfectly Passive.

Hypnotising a hen is a trick known to most country boys. It is an old experiment, first described by the Jesuit father, Athanasius Kircher, who laid a hen on the table, held it firmly for a little while and drew a chalk line in front of its eyes, with the result that it remained as if in a catalepsy.

In India it is known that a cobra caught by the neck and gently pressed will soon become stiff and remain so for a considerable time either coiled up or out straight.

A frog fastened to a board and turned suddenly upside down goes into a trance. Other animals are susceptible to this treatment, some more quickly than others.

If you pick up a crab and wave it in the air it becomes immobile, a female bending her legs over her abdomen, a male sticking them out almost straight. The same is true of the fresh water crayfish, only this results for a much longer time than a crab.

Among the insects catalepsy—commonly known as "death feigning"—is common, and, according to Professor Ernst Mangold, the learned German naturalist, is often a means of saving the life of the insect.

According to Mangold, the hypnotic condition is induced in man by suggestion or physical inhibition, in animals by mechanical inhibition, but in both cases sensory stimuli may be set. These stimuli may be optic flicking the gaze on some objects, or tactile (stroking the skin), or otherwise. Sometimes an absence of wonted stimuli may induce the state, as in the case of absolute silence.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Undiscovered Oceans of Truth.

"We may be justly proud of what has been achieved, but let us not fail to remember with Newton that 'the vast ocean of truth' still 'lies' for the most part 'undiscovered before us.' However marked may be the progress of science, her individual votaries must always feel a sense of humility at the little the best of them is able to contribute toward the general result."—Sir Edward Schaefer, in an address to the British association.

Gypsies.

The gypsies are nearer to the animals than any race known to us in Europe. They have the lawlessness, the abandonment, the natural physical grace in form and gesture of animals. Only a stealthy and wary something in their eyes makes them human.—Arthur Symons.

Passed Along.

"You must have liked the servant to whom you gave the letter of recommendation she showed Mrs. Binx," said one woman.

"I didn't care for her at all," replied the other. "But I don't care for Mrs. Binx, either."—Washington Star.

End of the World.

"You said when you asked me to marry you that you would go to the end of the world for me."

"And so I will, but the end of the world is so far off that I can't get to it until the end of the world."—Houston Post.

From Twelve to One.

Howard W. Pillow, Montreal, President of the Automobile Club of Canada, the pioneer motor body of the Dominion, was giving a lift to several directors of the organization, and naturally all the talk was flavored with gasoline.

"Are you going to buy a twelve-cylinder?" asked Mr. J. A. Davis.

"Why should I double my worries?" responded Mr. Pillow. "Haven't I trouble enough with my six now?"

There was a general laugh. "Reminds me of the first car I ever bought, nearly fifteen years ago," said Mr. Davis. "My brother and I knew nothing about automobiles, and the dealer didn't know much more. Nobody did in those days, for the business was in its infancy. We talked over the relative merits of one and two cylinders, but were still undecided, until the dealer interposed: 'Well, I'd make more by selling you the two, but as a friend of you boys, I don't mind telling you that you'd be foolish to spend the money for two cylinders when one does just the same work.' We bought the one-lunger."

A Huge Dam.

The gigantic storage wall, known as the Burrinjuck dam—the most interesting part of the New South Wales irrigation scheme—ranks as one of the greatest dams in the world, both in regard to height and volume of water impounded. It is 236 feet high, 168 feet thick at the base, tapering to 16 feet at the top, and some 780 feet in length. The famous dam at Assouan, on the Nile, has but a total height of 156 feet. This colossal cement structure had to be built across the bed of a river subjected to floods, in a deep gorge whose sides were so steep that it was impossible to establish workshops upon them.

A Lesson for Johnnie.

"Johnnie," said his father, "I'm surprised to hear that you have dared to dispute with your mother."

"But she was wrong, pa," replied Johnnie.

"That has nothing to do with it," said the boy's father. "You might just as well profit by my experience and learn once for all that when a woman says a thing is so, it is so, whether it is so or not."—London Mail.

Mighty Texas.

The state of Texas is larger than the whole German empire, considerably larger. The area of Germany is 208,000 square miles; that of Texas is 265,000 square miles. Thus Texas is as large as the German empire and Belgium, Holland, Switzerland and Denmark.

BULGARIA ASSUMES CONTROL OF MACEDONIA

German Fallacy Is Admitted

Vorwaerts Says British Food Prices Less Than Teutonic

The German Social-Democratic central organ, Vorwaerts, in its issue of Aug. 27 contradicts the widely circulated fallacy in Germany that England is suffering as heavily under higher prices for foodstuffs as Germany. The paper quotes the following prices per pound in pfennigs (a pfenning is one-fourth of a cent) for England and for Germany:

	England.	Germany.
Beef	90	141
Veal	94	144
Mutton	89	147
Pork	84	168

"Inasmuch as meat is consumed in very large quantities in England," the paper says, "the significance of the very expensive bread there is smaller. Thus our favourite comfort that the rise in prices in England is greater than in Germany, is simply a pious self-deception. The English workingman now lives at much greater expense than in time of peace, but more cheaply, and, as they do not use substitutes, better than the German worker."

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS.

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

No Allies' Offensive On The Western Front, It Is Believed, Until Next Spring

French Artillery Has Cut the German Railway Line Near Metz and Has Threatened German Communications---Italians Inflict Big Defeats on Austrians

PARIS, France, Sept. 21.—Bulgaria has assumed control of Macedonia and apparently ignores the Allies' note.

ROME, Sept. 21.—Italians have inflicted big defeats on the Austrians.

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—French artillery has cut the German railway line near Metz, and threatened German communications.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 21.—Brantford, Ontario, Boy Cadets were second in the inter-Imperial shooting contest at Bisley.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—It is believed here now there will be no Allies' offensive on the western front till next spring.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Reports from the British front tell of desultory attacks with bombs and grenades, but no action of importance.

ATHENS, Sept. 21.—There is great enthusiasm all through Greece at the prospects of entering the war with the Allies against Bulgaria.

SOFIA, Sept. 21.—King Ferdinand addressing troops last night said all Bulgaria was prepared for action in a righteous cause.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—It is believed here that Bulgaria will yet join the Allies.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—More sharp fighting has taken place at the Dardanelles. The Allies' casualties are heavy. New naval squadron arrived Sunday.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Hostile warships which bombarded the Belgian coast towns of Westende and Middlekirks Sunday were struck by shells from the land batteries. They were British ships said the War Office last night.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—It is reported here that a German submarine has been destroyed off the Norwegian coast, and three German hydroplanes have been destroyed in the Baltic.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Reports agree that terrific fighting is proceeding near Dvinsk on the eastern front. Plants for the evacuation of Kiev are also being executed.

GREAT MILITARY ACTIVITY IN BULGARIA, RUMANIA AND GREECE

ROME, Sept. 21.—Three more nations, Bulgaria, Rumania and Greece may plunge into the world war before the first snow falls in the Balkans.

The Rumanian capital is wildly excited over rumours reaching there Sunday that large bodies of German troops were transported through Hungary last week and are concentrated near Temesvar, withing striking distance of both the Serbian and Rumanian frontiers.

Rumania believes the forces are being massed close to their frontier for a demonstration in case Rumania shows signs of entering the war on the side of the Allies.

The greatest military activity since the beginning of the war is reported at both Sofia and Athens. Bulgarian troops are marching through their capital daily. The pro-German "war party" is using every method to stir the people to enthusiasm for Bulgarian participation in the war.

The Greek Premier, Venizelos, has been in daily conference with members of his cabinet, and with leaders of the Greece "war party" that returned him to office after his resignation.

Zeppelin Was Shattered By Shrapnel

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 21.—One of the crew of one of the Zeppelins that recently raided London, fell or was blown from the airship by shrapnel, according to the Daily Express, which reported today that a German's body had been found on English soil. The Express said it has also learned that Dr. Sticker, Commander of one of the largest of the Zeppelins, was missing when the dirigibles returned to their base.

A Never Failing Way To Banish Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty.)

No woman is immune to superfluous growths, and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable to always have some delatone powder handy to use when the occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water and spread upon the hairy surface; in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuzz. Be sure, however, to get real delatone.

BARBED WIRE PAINTED LIKE FOLIAGE FOR WAR

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 20.—Barbed wire painted a foliage green is now being manufactured here for the use of the armies in Europe. Steel men say that reports from abroad show that a short distance away it is impossible to see the green wire.

Woman And Male Companion Guilty Of Espionage

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A woman spy, convicted at Old Bailey, sentenced to serve ten years and her male companion, also convicted of espionage, was sentenced to be shot, the Press Bureau stated today. Both were of German origin.

"TIN" EAR TO BE NO MORE; DOCTOR FINDS A CURE.

The cauliflower or "tin" ear, used as "cards of admission" to fight clubs by third and fourth rate boxers, is about to be no more. Reports received from Seattle, Wash., state that a local physician had discovered a method of treating damaged ears without leaving the member swollen. The idea is to drain the tissues and then attach a plaster cast until they knit together again, obliterating all trace of injury.

Few boxers who have appeared in ring hostilities have escaped disfurement in this way. In fact, a number of fighters have been actually made deaf by the peculiar swelling caused by repeated pounding on the ear. Some of the leading boxers in the world, including the cleverest defensive artists in the game—Fred Welsh, Jack Britton and Mike Gibbons—carry marks of their trade.

Packey McFarland and Johnny Kilbane are two of the very few who do not sport "tin" ears.

Starched collars often get the studhole broken before they are half worn out. To make them wear longer sew a piece of fine white tape neatly across the hole and work new hole in the tape. If this is done before going to the laundry they will look quite neat and tidy when they come back, and will wear quite a long time.

Russians Confident They Escape German Trap In Retreat From Vilna

Russian Rearguard Operations Are Costing Enemy Huge Number of Men---Germans Making Desperate Efforts to Capture Some of Remaining Russian Armies

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Undiminished confidence in high military circles that the Russians will make a successful retreat from Vilna is reported by the Petrograd correspondent of the Times. The Germans, he says, are making most desperate efforts to bag some of the remaining Russian armies before the withdrawal is completed, but the heaviest transport trains and impediment are already beyond the danger zone and there is hope that the Russian forces will extricate themselves.

It is important to bear in mind, the correspondent wires, that many meshes in the German net are composed, not of infantry, but of comparatively weak cavalry units which will be swamped unless quickly withdrawn.

Viewing the situation in the northern sector of operations as a whole, the correspondent says:

"It is noteworthy that German cavalry seized and cut the Vilna-Dvinsk line on the 12th, but though a whole week elapsed we are still awaiting a decision, and though communications are cut to the Vilna group of forces the latter are able to conduct operations without any appreciable lack of munitions, thanks to the enormous reserves carried by the Russian army."

ONLY TWELVE MILES FROM DVINSK.

The Times to-day published the following from a correspondent with the Russian forces, sent on Saturday from Dvinsk:

"I spent three days on this front where a terrific battle is raging almost unceasingly. When attacks die away at one place they begin instantly at another. The nearest front is only twelve miles from Dvinsk, whose deserted streets resound with the detonations of heavy gun fire.

"The Russians are holding the Dvinsk front in an excellent line of trenches three deep and despite constant fierce attacks supported by concentrations of heavy artillery they have held the enemy off thus far.

"Many times the first line has been taken by the enemy, then retaken by our counter-attacks. The Germans are twice and thrice our strength and have enormous superiority in guns as always, but hitherto they have gained no decisive advantage, each of their attempts being paid for with heavy losses of life.

"I find the morale of the Russians unimpaired. They are fighting in the same stubborn, determined manner, while the situation as regards the supply of ammunition and rifles is materially improved and the fate of Dvinsk and the whole line along the Dvina River is undecided.

DVINSK EVACUATION ORDERLY.

"The capture of the city will be effected only by heavy sacrifice. In the meantime the town has been evacuated in the same orderly manner seen at Warsaw and if the Russians ultimately leave the Germans will occupy the same empty shells as in their former victories.

"The nature of the country here is ideal for defence and undoubtedly the Germans are paying two to one in losses. It is not apparent why the Germans attach so much importance to this sector, but if they are willing to pay the price they possibly can take it.

"A large proportion of the population of Dvinsk has fled. The evacuation was started by the German habit of dropping bombs, which killed many civilians.

"The character of the Russian defence is improving every week, and if the outside world thinks the Germans are driving this army before them it makes a gross mistake. If Riga and Dvinsk sectors are typical of Russian rearguard operations, their nature is such as should cause more depression among the Germans than among the Russians, and with winter approaching and no important objective attainable before the season changes I believe the German commanders must now recognize a growing anxiety."

Young Bank Clerk Confesses

But Pleads Not Guilty When Before the Magistrate

HAMILTON, Sept. 21.—A sensational turn was given the case of the Crown against Dr. H. McKay a prominent Hamiltonian, and C. L. Desjardins bank clerk of Barrie, accused of taking $6,570 of the Union Bank cash here last year, when Crown Attorney Washington submitted a confession said to have been made by Desjardins, despite the fact that the young man pealed not guilty before the Magistrate yesterday along with Dr. McKay.

The confession was read, and stated that Desjardins had taken the money in order to make good a deficiency in his accounts, through money lost on the races. In the confession it was asserted that his statements at the trial of John McKinnon, the manager of the East Hamilton branch of the bank, now serving three years for misappropriation of funds, were not true.

Both prisoners, unable to secure $10,000 bail, were committed to jail for trial in the higher Court.

IS LEGALLY AN OUTLAW

Old Sentence Revived in Case of Man Who Ran Away

A curious ancient penalty was revived in a sentence passed on an accused person in St. Cuthbert's John McArthur, a Glasgow dealer, did not appear with two other defendants, who were accused of receiving stolen jewelry valued at over $10,000. The other men surrendered to their bail at the Edinburg High Court and were found not guilty and discharged.

McArthur did not appear, having fled from the jurisdiction of the court, and a sentence of outlawry was pronounced by the judge. This means that he is put outside the protection of the law, is banished from Scotland, and any goods or land he may have are fortified. He can, however, at any time submit to the jurisdiction of the law that he has defied.

James Archibald Has Returned

Correspondent Says He Was Ignorant of Contents of Dumba Letter

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—James F. J. Archibald, the American correspondent whose passport was revoked because he carried the letter which resulted in the American demand for the recall of Dr. Dumba, Austrian ambassador to the United States, arrived here yesterday on the Poland-American liner Rotterdam.

Federal officers went down the bay to meet Archibald at Quarantine, and it is said they searched his baggage. He was permitted to stay on the liner for a time, despite previous reports that he would be arrested and hurried up the bay on a tug.

When Archibald landed he contented himself with this statement.

"If any prosecution is contemplated against me, it will be most unjust, as I am absolutely innocent. I unwittingly took a letter on my way over. That caused all the trouble. I did not know that the letter contained what it did. When I learn the status of my case I shall make a more extended and formal statement."

Survivor Of The Hesperian Arrives Home

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Ronald Whiteway, of Toronto, a survivor of the torpedoed Allan liner Hesperian, arrived here yesterday aboard the American liner Philadelphia, with her arm still in a sling, the result of her injuries.

"We stuck by the Hesperian as long as possible after she was torpedoed," said Mrs. Whiteway, "because everyone thought she would reach port. When the order finally came to abandon the ship some one swung me into a lifeboat, and in the confusion I broke my shoulder. She thinks a sailor struck against her while he was jumping into the boat.

Mrs. Whiteway said that she was sitting on deck the night of the explosion, that there was a terrific crash when it occurred, and the deck seemed to be torn asunder. After the shock and fright she underwent, she said she found herself in a lifeboat, but she did not know how she got there.

A. W. Ingram, an Arabic survivor, was another of the Philadelphia passengers.

German Trap To Catch Britain And America

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting upon the recent statement of Gottlieb von Jagow, the German Foreign Minister regarding Germany's submarine policy, in which Herr von Jagow asserted that it might be well for Great Britain to revoke orders restricting shipments to attack submarine whichever possible, has this to say:

The British answer to such duplicity is quite plain. We have beaten the submarine campaign, and would be indeed simple minded to give it fresh facilities by seeing down the weapons by which it has been rendered impotent.

The Gazette contends that the utterances which the German Minister suggested for preventing the sinking of belligerent merchantmen would be in fact a German trap intended to catch Great Britain and America. Germany has been driven against the will to continue the submarine war with which her naval [illegible] ...ined.

HAVE YOU A CHILD?

Many women long for children, but because of some curable physical derangement are deprived of this greatest of all happiness.

The women whose names follow were restored to normal health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Write and ask them about it.

"I took your Compound and have a fine, strong baby." — Mrs. JOHN MITCHELL, Massena, N. Y.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine for expectant mothers." — Mrs. A. M. MYERS, Gordonville, Mo.

"I highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before child-birth, it has done so much for me." — Mrs. E. M. DOSSER, R. R. 1, Conshohocken, Pa.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build up my system and have the dearest baby girl in the world." — Mrs. MOSS BLAKELEY, Imperial, Pa.

"I praise the Compound whenever I have a chance. It did so much for me before my little girl was born." — Mrs. E. W. SANDERS, Rowlesburg, W. Va.

"I took your Compound before baby was born and feel I owe my life to it." — Mrs. WINNIE TILLIS, Winter Haven, Florida.

Photographic Art.

Softness of focus, to prevent masses being bounded by hard lines complete control of light and shade a trained wit to conjure that expression and arrange that pose most suggestive of the person as a whole, simplicity, sincerity, absence of dramatic, striking and bold use of too great contrast, restraint both in pose and expression and correct rendition of color in monotone—these and a greater and greater appreciation of the value of the camera's power for telling the truth are the factors which have raised the modern idea in photographic portraiture; if not yet among the arts, at least to a highly honored place among the crafts.—C. H. Claudy in Art and Progress.

Golden Precepts.

The late Robert C. Ogden, merchant, philanthropist and millionaire, whose life was notably successful from every point of view, left behind him in writing this set of good and tried rules:

Do not mistake a prejudice for a principle.

Be energetic, wide awake, pushing, but be patient.

Use the book of Proverbs as a guide in business.

Honor womanhood.

Believe in yourself, then other people will believe in you.

"Tell me all about Mr. Plews," she said. "How is he looking? Does he appear to be unhappy?" There was a curious note in her voice, as of anxiety or eagerness, it was hard to tell which.

"He appears to be somewhat sentimental and preoccupied. He gazes at the moon and bites his nails."

"I—I wish I could have a peep at him some time without being"—

"For heaven's sake, don't even consider such a thing!" I cried in alarm.

"Just a little peek, Mr. Smart," she pleaded.

"No!" said I firmly.

"Very well," she said resignedly, fixing me with hurt eyes. "I'm sorry to be such a bother to you."

"I believe you'll go back to him after all," I said angrily. "Women are all alike. They"—

"Just because I want to see how unhappy he is and enjoy myself a little you say horrid things to me!" she cried almost pathetically. "You treat me very badly."

"There is a great deal at stake," said I. "The peril is—well, it's enormous. I am having my own time heading off a scheme they've got for exploring the entire castle. Your hus—your ex-husband says he knows of a secret door opening into this part of the"—

CHAPTER XI.

I Resort to Diplomacy.

THE countess sprang to her feet with a sharp cry of alarm.

"Heavens, I—I forgot about that! There is a secret panel, and—heaven save us!—it opens directly into my bedroom!" Her eyes were very wide and full of consternation. She gripped my arm. "Come! Be quick! We must pile something against it or nail it up or do something!"

She fairly dragged me out into the corridor and then, picking up her dainty skirts, pattered down the rickety stairs at so swift a pace that I had some difficulty in keeping her pink figure in sight. Why is it that a woman can go downstairs so much faster than a man? I've never been able to explain it.

At last we came to the broad hall at the top of the main staircase. Almost directly in front of us loomed the great padlocked doors leading to the other wing. Passing them like the wind, she led the way to the farthermost end of the hall. Light from the big panelless windows overlooking the river came streaming into the vast corridor, and I could see doors ahead to the right and the left of us.

"Your bedroom?" I managed to gasp, uttering a belated question that should have been asked five or six flights higher up at a time when I was better qualified to voice it. "What the dickens is it doing down here?"

She did not reply, but, turning to the left, threw open a door and disappeared into the room beyond. I followed ruthlessly, but stopped just over the threshold to catch my breath in astonishment.

I was in "my lady's bedchamber."

The immense Gothic bed stood on its dais, imposing in its isolation. Three or four very modern innovation trunks loomed like minarets against the opposite wall, half open. Some of my most precious rugs adorned the floor, but the windows were absolutely undraped.

"Don't stand there gaping!" she cried in a shrill whisper. "This is the mirror, the middle one. It opens by means of a spring. There is a small hole in the wall behind it, and then there is still another secret door beyond that, a thick iron one with the sixth Baron Rothbeefen's portrait on the outer side of it. The canvas swings open. We must"—

I was beginning to get my bearings.

"The sixth baron? Old Ludwig the Red?"

"The very one."

"Then by Jove he is in my study! You don't mean to say"—

"Please don't stop to talk!" she cried impatiently, looking about in a distracted manner. "But for goodness sake get something to put against this mirror!"

My mind worked rapidly. The only object in the room heavy enough to serve as a barricade was the bed, and it was too heavy for me to move, I feared. I suggested it, of course, involuntarily lowering my voice to a conspiratorial whisper.

"Pull it over, quick!" she commanded promptly.

"Perhaps I'd better run out and get Max and Ike"—

"If my hus—if Mr. Plews should open that secret door from the other side, Mr. Smart, it will be very embarrassing for you and me. Let"—

I put my shoulder to the huge creaky bed and shoved. There were no castors to this vast bedden. The countess assisted me by putting the tips of her small fingers against one end of it and pushing. It was not what one would call a frantic effort on her part, but it served to make me exert myself to the utmost.

"Don't do that," I protested. "I can manage it alone, thank you."

I secured a strong grip on the bottom of the thing and heaved manfully.

"You might let me help!" she cried, firmly grasping a side piece with both hands.

I Put My Shoulder to the Huge Creaky Bed and Shoved.

The bed moved. By means of great straining I got the heavy thing over against the mirror. One of the legs was hopelessly splintered in the drop from the raised platform.

"There," she said, standing off to survey our joint achievement; "we've stopped it up very nicely." She brushed the tips of her fingers daintily. "This afternoon you may fetch up a hammer and some nails and fasten the mirror permanently. Then you can move the bed back to its proper place. Goodness! What a narrow squeak!"

"Madame," said I, my hand on my heart, but not through gallantry, "that bed stays where it is. Not all the king's horses nor all the king's men can put it back again."

"Was it so heavy, Mr. Smart?"

I swallowed very hard. A prophetic crick already had planted itself in my back. "Will you forgive me if I submit that you sleep quite a distance from home?" I remarked with justifiable irony. "Why the deuce don't you stay on the upper floors?"

"Because I am mortally afraid," she said, with a little shudder. "You've no idea how lonely, how spooky it is up there at the dead hour of night. I couldn't sleep. After the third night I had my things moved down here, where I could at least feel that there were strong men within—you might say arm's length of me. I'm—I'm shockingly timid."

"Of course I don't mind, countess," I hastened to say. "Only I thought it would be easier up there with Ramsey and the two maids for company."

She leaned a little closer to me. "We all sleep down here," she said confidentially. "We bring Rosemary's little mattress down every night and put it in the tin bathtub. It is a very good fit and makes quite a nice cradle for her. Helene and Blake sleep just across the hall, and we leave the doors wide open. So, you see, we're not one bit afraid."

"Um!" said I judicially. "And so my study is just beyond this mirror, eh? May I inquire how you happen to know that I have my study there?"

"Oh, I peeked in the other day," she said serenely.

"The deuce you did!"

"I was quite sure that you were out," she explained. "I opened Ludwig the Red an inch or two, that's all. You are quite cosy in there, aren't you? I envy you the grand old chaise longe."

We returned to the corridor. She closed the door softly, a mockery in view of the clatter I had made in shifting the bed and its impediments.

"Listen!" I whispered suddenly, grasping her arm. "Did you hear footsteps in the— Sh!"

Some one was walking over the stone floor in the lower hall, brisk strides that rang out quite clearly as they drew nearer.

"It is—it is Mr. Plews," she whispered in a panic. "I recognize his tread. As if I could ever forget it! Oh, how I hate him! He"—

"Don't stop here to tell me about it," I cut in sharply. "Make haste! Get up to your rooms and lock yourself in. I'll—I'll stop him."

Assuming a nonchalance I certainly did not feel, I descended the stairs. We met in the broad hallway below. Mr. Plews approached slowly, evidently having checked his speed on hearing my footsteps on the stairs.

"Hello!" I said agreeably. "How did you get in?"

He surveyed me coolly. "I know the castle from top to bottom, Mr. Smart. To be perfectly frank with you, I tried the secret panel in your study, but found the opposite door blocked. You have no objection, I trust, to my looking over the castle? It is like home to me."

My plan was to detain him in conversation until she had time to secrete herself on the upper floor. Somehow I anticipated the banging of a door, and it came a moment later, not loud, but very convincing just the same. He glanced at me curiously.

"Then how did you get in?" I repeated, cringing perceptibly in response to the slam of the distant door.

"By the same means, I dare say, that you employ," said he.

For a moment I was confounded. Then my wits came to the rescue.

"I see. Through the dungeon. You do know the castle well, Mr. Plews."

"It is a cobwebby, unlovely passage," said he, brushing the dirt and cobwebs from his trousers. My own appearance was conspicuously immaculate, but I brushed in unison, just the same.

"I'd like to have your opinion as to the best way of restoring or repairing those mural paintings in the dome of the east hall," I said, detaining him. "It was necessary for me to have a good excuse for rummaging about in the unused part of the castle. "It seems too bad to let those wonderful paintings go to ruin. They are hanging down in some places and are badly cracked in others. I've been worrying about them ever since I came into possession. For instance, that Murillo in the center. It must be preserved."

He gave me another queer look, and I congratulated myself on the success of my strategy. He took it all in. The mocking light died out in his eyes, and he became intensely interested in my heaven sent project.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Curley's Rescues.

By HENRY ROSSMORE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by P. C. Eastment.

Benjy, racing down the street, brought himself up with a jerk as a gong sounded out its brazen alarm. Then he hurried toward the building with the great wide doors in the middle of the block.

The gong was still sounding, and now could be heard the trample of feet and hoofs, the jingle of metal work on the harness, the cries of the men. Then came the lesser note of the "repeat" bell and a hoarse cry of "All right!" from the captain, followed by the trample of hoofs, sounding hollow upon the wooden floor as the fire horses returned to their stalls.

Benjy's face fell. Somewhere in the city horses were dashing madly over the pavements in their race to answer an alarm, but here the great green doors would remain closed. It was only a practice hitch for Thirteen company.

In the summer time practice hitches were the best fun, for the doors stood wide open, and he could watch the men as they put the harness trip in order again and lifted the great straps off the three big grays. Then, too, the firemen lounged in front of the house, and he could hear them talking about the fires they had gone to, brave tales of valorous fights that lost nothing in the telling.

Benjy trotted down the street again to his own doorstep and carefully backed himself into the vestibule. His shrill treble rose in imitation of the clangor of the big gong, and with many a screech and shout he dashed off in the direction of the hydrant on the corner, pretending that he was Thirteen company answering an alarm.

As he neared the fire house a second time the gong sounded again, and this time the number was followed by three strokes, thrice repeated. Thirteen company made a quick hitch. A third alarm following so closely upon the first meant a fire well worth hurrying to. They went out on the third alarm from that station, and Lieutenant Curley sprang to the big doors and threw them open just as Benjy, running up, slipped on the pavement and fell full length in the path of the excited horses.

There was no holding back the grays, but Quinn, the driver, forced them over to the left, while Curley sprang forward and caught the child by the arm, throwing him to one side just as the tender came up to the door and the wheels of the steamer almost grazed Curley's arm. Then he sprang to the tender steps, and they were turning the corner before Benjy found his voice.

Bessie Borden, who had seen the incident from the steps where she had come in search of Benjy, hurried to him, and presently she was bearing the sobbing child in her arms and mingling with his tears of terror her own tears of gratitude. Beyond a barked knee Benjy was none the worse for his experience.

That night Benjy's father went down to the fire house to discover the name of the man who had saved the boy, and after that Lieutenant Curley was a frequent visitor at the Borden home. Mrs. Borden could not do enough for him, and it was at her suggestion that he boarded with them, taking his meals there in his three "swings" and spending the remainder of his liberty with Bessie Borden, while Benjy gazed solemnly and admiringly at his hero.

Curley's days off, too, were devoted to Bessie. He had neither kith nor kin in the city, and he was glad indeed to find so pleasant a way of spending his time. As regularly as his day of liberty came around it was a vaudeville performance in the afternoon with a melodrama in the evening except in summer, when the delights of the suburban resorts proved more tempting.

But Bessie was not minded to be so easily won. In the fall, when the dancing classes opened and Dick Curley had begun to put on airs of ownership, Pete Bracy came to trouble the hitherto smoothly running course of true love.

Dancing classes, as Pete and Bessie understood such things, were balls without the refreshments and without the necessity for such elaborate dress.

Before the weather grew so cool that the doors of the fire house were shut Pete used to escort Bessie past the house in the hope that they would meet Curley. Often they did, but he scarcely gave heed to them as he went about his work. He would not let Bessie see how hurt he was, and she, womanlike, was the more demonstrative toward Pete because Curley would not show his anger or regret.

Dick Curley gritted his teeth and tried to meet his disappointment like a man, but there were nights when he lay awake in quarters and longed for the call that would take him out to a fire where he could forget his own troubles in the fierce battle with the flames. The ride on the tender through the cool night air always steadied his nerves, and his unrest found ease in action.

So he lay one night trying to forget that a couple of hours earlier he had seen Pete and Bessie pass the house on their way to a dance. It had been a hard day for Thirteen, and the men had turned in early, most of them praying that they would be able to sleep undisturbed. But the clock had just struck the half hour after 10 when the big gong began to count out its dread signal.

In an instant the room was in orderly confusion. The men sprang from their beds into their night boots, pulling their trousers up over the legs of the boots as they ran toward the poles.

The man on the desk and one or two others who had not yet turned in had the horses hitched, and as the great doors swung back and Quinn grasped the trip to release the harness hangers the captain called out:

"Make it in a hurry," he shouted. "That's the box nearest the Orpheum. If the fire is there"—

The rest was drowned in the clang of the tender bell as it followed the steamer from the house, but Curley had heard enough. He had not realized at first that three-seven-three was the box nearest the Orpheum, where Pete and Bessie had gone.

The dance hall was aflame. Some of the hangings had caught fire when the electric plant had failed and recourse was had to gas. Before the engine could cover the three short blocks the flames were bursting through the windows and mounting to the roof.

The owners of the place reported that all had left the building before the fire had become serious, but even as they spoke a woman's form was silhouetted against the background of angry red flame, and a dash was made to the truck for the longest ladder.

Almost before it was against the building Curley had shoved aside the ladder man, who stood ready to mount, and pushed up the ladder ahead of him. He had recognized Bessie.

The ladder was short by a dozen feet, but Dick snapped his hook into the topmost rung and called to the girl to drop into his arms.

"I'm afraid," was the trembling reply, but Dick called again.

"It's me," he assured eagerly. "Don't be afraid, Bess; I won't let you drop."

"Dick! It is you?" There were relief and hope in the tones, and Curley braced himself for the shock of her jump.

Slowly Bessie edged to the sill and for a moment stood there; then she shot downward into the waiting arms, and, slipping his hook, Curley began the descent.

"This is one thing Pete cannot do," he said as he slowly descended.

"Pete's only good for taking me to dancing class," said Bess contemptuously. "There's a whole lot of things he can't do."

"Like what, for instance?" demanded Curley.

"He can't make me say 'Yes' when he asks me to marry him," explained Bess.

Dick's arm tightened about her.

"Can I?" he asked.

"You haven't asked me yet," reminded Bess.

"I'm asking you now," insisted Dick.

"Yes," said Bess softly. "You're dead slow, Dick—except when you're at a fire."

Utah's Organ Rock.

Utah is a veritable curiosity shop, for it contains two national monuments, prehistoric cave dwellings, Great Salt lake, and Organ rock. Organ rock is 400 feet high. It is fluted like an organ and stands in south-eastern Utah. No one knows how long it has stood there solitary and alone, but every one who has had the good fortune to see it hopes that it will always remain intact and that its fluted column may never be injured or broken. Few natural phenomena are more symmetrically shaped and few resemble more forcibly some well known object. Time and elements have chiseled it to perfection.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as they can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Mr. Labouchere's Whist Play.

While Henry Labouchere was an attache at Frankfort he was once playing whist against a very high German functionary sitting on his left. Mr. Labouchere led a small card. The lead turned out so well that he won the rest of the tricks. The minister said: "Well, Mr. Labouchere, you won the game by leading that card. But there was no earthly reason, according to the rules of the game, why you should have done so. You have therefore won the rubber by accident."

Mr. Labouchere said, "I had a very good reason for leading that card." The minister asked what it was. "We will have a bet," said Mr. Labouchere, "that my reason was a good one." The bet was therefore made.

"Now, Mr. Labouchere, what was your reason?"

He replied, "I had seen your hand."—Henry Drummond Wolff's "Rambling Recollections."

TRICKS OF GUNCOTTON.

When Dry Explosive May Be Burned In the Hand Without Harm.

If some one should place a wad of guncotton on the palm of your hand and threaten to touch it off with a lighted match you would be frightened. Yet you need not be, for, although guncotton is one of the most powerful of ordinary explosives, it would not hurt you.

When dry guncotton is exposed to the air it does not explode when ignited, but burns with great rapidity. So rapidly does the burning take place that if a loose wad of the material be held in the hand and touched with fire there is a sudden flash, and an instant later not a trace of smoke or a mark on the hand remains to indicate what has taken place. Guncotton does not detonate unless it is confined, as in the barrel of a gun.

When dry, however, guncotton can be made to explode with great violence by being struck sharply between two hard surfaces. Detonation, as such an explosion is called, is quite a different phenomenon from burning. It seems to consist in the instantaneous disintegration of the molecules of the exploding substance. It is as though all the bricks in a great building were in a fraction of a second to be scattered about the city.

When moistened sufficiently with water guncotton is not affected either by fire or blows. In this state it can be compressed, mashed to a pulp or worked into various shapes without danger. Only the explosion of a piece of the dry material or priming with fulminate of mercury can make wet guncotton detonate. On this account wet guncotton has been made use of in blasting.

Guncotton is a mixture of various nitrates formed when clean dry cotton is treated with strong nitric acid (and, for most purposes, with sulphuric acid also). If the product has a low degree of nitration—that is to say, if little nitric acid be used in the making—it may be partially dissolved by certain esters, such as acetone, ethylacetate or a mixture of ether and alcohol. It forms a colloidal solution, and the resulting jelly is particularly well fitted to use in a gun on account of the saving of space.

Raleigh's Advice.

If any desire thee to be his surety, give him a part of what thou hast to spare; if he press thee further be it not thy friend at all, for friendship rather chooseth harm to itself than offereth it. If thou be bound for a stranger, thou art a fool; if for a merchant, thou puttest thy estate to learn to swim; if for a churchman, he hath no inheritance; if for a lawyer, he will find an evasion by syllable or word to abuse thee; if for a poor man thou must pay it thyself; if for a rich man, he needs not; therefore, from suretyship, as from a manslayer or enchanter, bless thyself; for the best profit and return will be this; that if thou force him for whom thou art bound, to pay it himself, he will become thy enemy; if thou use to pay it thyself, thou wilt become a beggar.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

Suspicions of Charles Reade.

Wealthy men are often abnormally suspicious of tricks. The celebrated author Charles Reade was one of this kind. He always imagined he was being robbed and set traps to catch the thieves. When he became lessee of a certain theater he suspected that his ticket office cheated him by letting in the public for anything they could get and keeping the money. So Reade turned up the collar of his overcoat, pulled his hat down over his eyes and shuffled up to the box office as the people were going in. He shoved a half crown in the box office keeper's hand and whispered: "It's all right—that's for you—I don't want a ticket. Just pass me through." The clerk ran out, seized Reade by his coat collar and was passing him roughly into the street when he recognized his "chief."

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

Elisha Mitchell, Who Started It, Was a Martyr to His Science.

The first government geological survey in America was conducted by Elisha Mitchell, who was born in Washington, Conn., about the year 1794. He was a graduate of Yale and became professor of mathematics in the University of North Carolina. Afterward he became professor of chemistry, and in 1821 he was ordained a Presbyterian minister.

As state surveyor of North Carolina he made an extensive geological survey, and he was the first to ascertain that the mountains of North Carolina are the highest east of the Rockies. He was a martyr to science, for to settle some disputed point about the altitude of these mountains he reascended them in 1857, lost his way at night, fell down a precipice and was killed. The geological survey of the United States, which has carried out on a large scale the work commenced by Mitchell, was created for the purpose of preparing a map of the United States, classifying the public lands, examining the geological structure, mineral resources and the products of the republic and investigating the extent to which the arid and semi-arid lands may be redeemed by irrigation.—New York World.

GOT A SURPRISE.

He Expected to Be Quite Conspicuous, but Found Himself Ignored.

"Say," said the man who takes himself seriously, "I had a great surprise thrust upon me when I went down to get my marriage license last month. When I think it over I am ready to assert that it was a disagreeable surprise.

"I sneaked into the big office under the impression that everybody was watching me. But when I told the clerk at the window what I wanted he took the information with a coolness that was almost disgusting. When I gave him my name—which seemed to me to reverberate like thunder—not a solitary clerk raised his head. And nobody laughed when the inquisitor asked me how I spelled it. When I gave the lady's name and fancied everybody would utter the only sound I could hear was the turning of record leaves and the muddled clicking of a distant typewriter.

"Why, they couldn't have treated me with more indifference if I had been buying marriage licenses twice a day for ten years.

"I went into that office feeling shamed and sensitive and sneaking.

"I came out hurt, humiliated, humbled.

"I had expected to be ridiculed—I was absolutely ignored."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Doctor Said Sciatica---Rheumatism--Lumbago

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

WANTED TO CATCH FISH.

But Was Disappointed Through the Mistake of a Small Boy.

"No, I didn't catch a blessed fish," laughed the truthful man who had just returned from his vacation. "I will admit that I started out with the idea of breaking all known records, but I got discouraged right at the start, and all the fish that I expected to catch are still enjoying life. When I arrived at my destination I was told that if I needed angleworms I could get them of a small boy who made a business of furnishing them to ambitious anglers. I looked him up at once and asked him if he could get me some.

"'Do you want the ten cent kind or the twenty-five cent kind?' he asked.

"'What kind would you advise?' said I, vastly amused at the serious way he put the question.

"'Well,' said he, 'if you want worms to drown, the ten cent kind will do, but if you want worms to catch fish you'd better take the twenty-five cent kind.'

"I gravely assured him that I needed the twenty-five cent kind, got them and spent the rest of a hot day drowning the worms that he had furnished me. On my way to my boarding place, with nothing in my hands but my fishing rod, I met the small boy, who, after solemnly surveying me for a moment, fished out from a pair of ragged trousers three dirty nickels and handed them to me, saying:

"'I don't want to cheat you, mister.'

The very fear of once more meeting that small boy empty handed kept me from trying my luck again."—Detroit Free Press.

Oil Locomotives on G. T. P.

Mr. Morley Donaldson, Vice-President of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, announces that the installation of oil-burning locomotives on the mountain section of the line has now been completed. These locomotives are of the most modern type, and were placed in service for passenger traffic for the first time July 34. They are operating from Jasper to Prince Rupert, over 719 miles of main line.

Especial interest attaches to the installation of this class of motive power, as it marks the first use of oil-burners on an extensive scale in Canada. Great oil storage tanks have been erected at various points along the line for supplying locomotives with the necessary fuel.

Don't Use Curling Iron! Here's A Better Method

(Woman Beautiful.)

By no means use a heated iron. It makes the hair dry and dead looking, giving a most unkempt appearance. After brushing the hair thoroughly, just dip a clean tooth brush in a saucer of plain liquid silmerine and run it through the parts of the hair to be curled. Do this at bedtime and you will be quite surprised when you behold yourself in the mirror next morning. The hair will be beautifully wavy and curling and the effect will appear altogether natural.

You will have no trouble in doing up your tresses in the style you desire and they will look and feel fluffy and comfortable. You need not hesitate to use pure liquid silmerine which you can procure at any druggist's, as it is perfectly harmless, and will leave no greasy, gummy or streaky trace. A few ounces will last for months, particularly as one application keeps the hair in curl for so long a time.

THE COLOR OF HAIR.

Red Locks Are No Proof of Inherent Genius.

Though it is generally thought that red-headedness denotes quick-temper and ready wit, it appears that few great geniuses have had red hair. Alone among the poets of the world was perhaps Swinburne, whose hair was distinctly reddish, and among the great reformers only John Bunyan's hair was really red.

The flaxen-haired blonde or the man whose hair when an adult is a true yellow also appears to remain marked apart as being unlikely to possess genius. There is always one to be remembered, however, the great Thackeray, whose hair is described as yellow.

Dark brown to black is the prevailing hue on the heads of great men. A list of fifty names has been compiled in which the color of the hair is given by biographers, and 90 per cent. are dark brown or black. There is not, strange to say, a single mention of premature grayness, nor a single case of that ashen brown hair known as "singed" or "mouse color." But it is dangerous to generalize and no infallibility is claimed for these statements.

The structure of the hair—whether straight or curly—is given in twenty-six lists of geniuses, and of these all but four possessed curly or wavy hair.

It is extremely notable that of the remaining four Napoleon and President Jackson were the two remarkable for "wiry hair," and that James Russell Lowell and Greig were those having lank straight hair. The poet's "ringlets" and the musician's shock of hair are by this list seen not to be mere accidents, but in some strange way are co-ordinated to their powers, and the general popular instinct is not at fault.

The color of beards also arouses many points of interest. Most of the ancient tapestries show Cain and Judas Iscariot with yellow or red beards, and Pontius Pilate in ancient art always was given a beard. A reddish beard, however, does not carry the significance that goes with red hair, for a large number of eminent men with dark-brown hair have had reddish beards.

Sometimes the eyelashes alone have been ruddy, Savonarola, the Florentine reformer, who had almost black hair, having startlingly red eyebrows and eyelashes. But as a general rule, here also a silky brown beard, when accompanied by fine curling dark-brown hair is the most usual characteristic show in the biographies of men whose names have been handed down to fame.

Woolwich Arsenal.

"Good Queen Bess," in 1585, in establishing a store of arms and armor at the old Tower House, a mansion in Woolwich Warren, adjoining the then boggy and unhealthy marshes of Plumstead, founded Britains' greatest arsenal, which 330 years later gives employment to 30,000 men, earning more than $500,000 a week for making munitions of war. That was the origin of the Woolwich Arsenal of to-day, which covers 600 acres, and where guns of all sizes, every form of military wagon, shot, shell, torpedoes, cartridges, bullets, war signals, life-saving rockets, and high explosives are manufactured.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

This apron is one which can be made in an hour and which will not require any special skill. It will cut without piecing from 36 inch material, and the better qualities of gingham come in this width. Laying the pattern on a fold of the material the front is cut in one part and the back in another, the two then joined at the shoulder and underarm seams. The sleeve is so small that it hardly deserves mention, but what there is of it is cut in one with the body of the apron.

The neck of the apron is cut out and comes down in front in a point. The opening is carried a little below the front edge of the collar and is laced up when the apron is worn. This leaves an opening large enough to admit of slipping on the apron over the head. The neck is trimmed with a little square edge collar, but this may be omitted.

There is a narrow belt at the waistline and two serviceable patch pockets at the sides.

This apron is so constructed that it may be worn in place of a working dress, for the collar and belt make it seems quite like a gown. It can be made of gingham, calico, cambric, brilliantine and other washable materials.

The apron pattern, No. 7,316, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4 yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

"Escaped American Prisoner" From Germany Will Do Hard Labour For Next Three Months

LONDON, Sept. 21.—People who wish a friendly reception are warned not to mention the name of Charles B. Pray, the "escaped American prisoner from Germany," in the following places: The Intelligence department of the War Office, special branch of Scotland Yard, American Relief Committee, American Consulate, American Embassy and particularly the Military Attache's offices of the London correspondents of American newspapers.

This is only a partial list. It could also include several good-hearted charitable private persons who have taken Pray to their hearts and showered him with hospitality and money.

It is permissible, however, to mention his name in the criminal investigation branch of Scotland Yard, where it will be greeted with huge chuckles, and Pray will be designated as the man who has fooled London.

In the criminal investigation branch you will be told that Pray is a rank fraud, that his name may be Pray, but is also Edward F. Curran, and that while he may be an American, he also lays convincing claim to being a Canadian, born in Toronto.

Doubt His Story.

They also admit that he may have been a prisoner in Germany, and that he may have escaped, as he said he did, but they doubt it, as the dates of his escape and subsequent movements do not agree with their findings.

In any of the places above listed, save the criminal investigation branch of Scotland Yard, the mention of Pray's name is the signal for a bombardment of language that is not only warlike and highly explosive, but might even satisfy exponents of the gospel of frightfulness.

Mail and Empire readers will recall the story of Charles B. Pray. On July 17 he appeared at the American Relief Committee headquarters and told the marvelous story of his escape. He was outfitted with clothes and shoes and shirts, given money and sent to a lodging house in Bernard street. Here he registered as Charles B. Pray, of American nationality, born on June 11, 1874, at Rollinsford, N.Y.; occupation, machinist; last residence, Zossen, Germany.

The special branch of Scotland Yard had him soon in tow. To them and to the higher officials of the intelligence department of the War Office he told his moving story. It moved men in the yard to brush their eyes and surreptitiously dig into their pockets and slip the American some change to help him along.

Superintendent of the Special Branch Quinn is the most unemotional to men. He is as hard as nails and believes nothing until it is proved up to the hilt, and even then is sceptical. Even he believed in Pray.

Your correspondent obtained Pray's story first from these officials, then from Pray, and was assured that of its verity there was no doubt.

Showed Real Skill.

Pray was then taken back to the War Office. Various experts in ordnance listened to him for hours, taking down in shorthand his stories of oil-cooled motor car guns, using the motor engine as a circulating pump, the portable Krupp powder factory, the constituents with which Germans were able to make powder on the battlefield, and their simple devices for instantly recharging and using old cartridges.

Not only did Pray describe these things, but he drew to scale, and of his drafting ability there is not the slightest doubt. All admit he is a marvel in that respect, and he is now admitted to be a marvel in other respects.

Such a man must not be lost to the Ministry of Munitions was the determination of the War Office, so to the Minister of Munitions he was sent.

Meanwhile the American Embassy got hold of Pray and one of the military attaches had stenographers working overtime taking down his stories of German inventions, while Pray drew wonderfully convincing diagrams and scale plans.

The Minister of Munitions was trying to get Pray from the Embassy and the Embassy was trying to keep him from the Minister of Munitions. There was a friendly rivalry for his remarkable knowledge.

This went on for a fortnight, when an American correspondent paid $100 to Pray for the story he had already given another for nothing. Two English newspapers published his story, one in particular paying him well and publishing his picture. It was the picture and the system of national registration that brought about discoveries that convinced the criminal investigation branch that Pray and Curran are one and the same.

Early in July a complaint was made to Scotland Yard of a man named Edward F. Curran who had inserted an advertisement for young girls to pose as models. Two young girls answered and were told that Curran was employed at the London Hippodrome to paint a new drop curtain. His manner becoming familiar, the girls left and reported the matter to their parents, who in turn reported it to Scotland Yard.

Record Traced.

Curran was traced to a London hotel of the poorer sort and his registration card gave the particulars that he was born in Toronto, Canada, June 11, 1874, and that his last residence was Manchester.

At Manchester papers were found to reconstruct Curran's movements and it was found that he had been engaged as an extra hand on the steamship Cassandra, leaving Newport News on April 14, and was discharged at Glasgow on April 26. From Glasgow he went to Birkenhead and bought some tools from the Mersey Motor Company. He next showed up at Manchester early in May and applied for enlistment in the British army, was accepted but never showed up for actual enlistment. The following day he went to work for the Electric Switchboard Company in Manchester, but was discharged as unsatisfactory on May 26. He was next heard of in Birkenhead on June 5. Then came his London experience.

The signatures of Pray and Curran on the registration slips appear to be identical and so are the dates of birth. The photograph of Curran has been identified as that of Pray, and that of Pray as Curran.

A search is now preceding for Curran or Pray, and if Curran shouldn't prove to be Pray, why then Pray's name may not be safely mentioned in Scotland Yard, but may be in the intelligence department of the War Office.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A sentence of three months at hard labor was imposed yesterday on the American who, describing himself as Charles B. Pray, of Flint, Mich., came to London in July and stated that he had escaped from a German detention camp. The man was arrested on Sept. 3 under the Aliens Registration Act on the charge of giving a false name. It is said his real name is Curran.

The court also decreed that the prisoner should be deported on the expiration of his term in jail. This measure was decided upon following the receipt of a message from the chief of police of Charleston, S.C.

SELL GERMAN WAR BONDS

United States Show Loud Protest Against Allies False

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—On the heels of the loud protest against the proposed billion dollar loan being sought by the allies in this country German-American bankers throughout the United States issued a wide appeal to "Germans of America" to purchase recently issued German and Austrian war loan bonds.

The advertisement which appeared in the Fatherland, the Staats-Zeitung, the New York Herald and many other German papers and periodicals, and which are to be followed by circular letters, offer the bonds in small amounts, at attractive rates, to induce "Germans of Americans to invest their savings and aid the "Fatherland, to which they owe so much."

Besides endeavouring to float a large part of this immense war loan which was authorized by Germany only after grave debate, and which is being sold there by popular subscription, the bankers are offering other German bonds. Among them are bonds securing the German war loan bearing five per cent. interest payable annually. These bonds are offered at par at the exchange rate of $210 to 1,000 marks. The banks also offer to "Austrians and Germans" in this country Austrian war bonds bearing five per cent interest at a rate which overlaps five and a half per cent. interest.

AN INTERNMENT CAMP.

How Canada's Aliens Are Cared for in the North.

At a certain point in New Ontario the party of newspapermen and railway officials who made the initial trip on the National Express to Winnipeg passed the most flourishing settlement that crossed their vision since the train pulled out of Cochrane on its first run over Canada's new railway. It is not the usual sort of a settlement one meets in the wilderness. It is not a Hudson Bay trading post now, nor is its chief activity the sale of corner lots to strangers. Its form of municipal government is unusual, being organized on the principle of the absolute monarchy, with a ruling class and compulsory labor and all that goes with it.

It is an internment camp. Its name is spelled Kapuskasing, but it is not usually pronounced. Most people prefer to know it by the name of the station, Macpherson.

A football game was in progress when the National drew up. A crowd of Austrians and a scattering of red-fez-ed Turks were the spectators. Interest in the game was replaced by the phenomenon of a train formed solely of passenger and express coaches. But none of them offered to approach the tracks and the passengers who alighted remained close to the train. One of the train party forgot about war regulations and climbed a pile of brick to "snap" the encampment. Before he had his camera focussed a sergeant and several privates in various stages of shocked excitement closed in on him and prevented him from unwittingly committing what is now a serious offence.

The camp consists of a row of tar-papered one-storey shacks, set in the middle of a large clearing. Here approximately a thousand Austrians and Turks are gathered. There are only about a hundred and fifty of the latter, but they cause more trouble than all the rest put together. Their pet foible is to refuse to work. When that happens they are made to work. This system of compulsion, we were told, is a deep, dark secret in which not even the officers of the camp share. Suffice it to say that invariably the Turks do work, sooner or later.

At one time or another a few of the prisoners have escaped from the camp, but none of them enjoyed more than a few hours of freedom. Without exception they have been rounded up and returned to camp Kapuskasing.

Their labor consists of clearing the land. One of the soldiers on duty at the right-of-way outskirts of the camp informed us that nearly two hundred acres had already been cleared. If the war lasts long enough, Macpherson station will find itself the centre of a farming district, potentially one of the richest in Ontario.

After hours the prisoners are given a wide range of freedom to enjoy themselves. They play football, or watch the soldiers play; improvise sports of their own, or go a boating on the river in large punts which has been provided for their amusement.

Their diet includes a form of sausages popular among Austrians, sometimes beef, bread, jam and the like. Their rations are as good as those served the soldiers, healthful and satisfying. They are living an out-of-door life and are gaining in knowledge of the wild. When the war is over they will be given first chance to claim for settlement the land they have cleared. Altogether there are worse things than being an alien enemy in a Canadian military internment camp.

Holes in His Overcoat.

Major Byng Hall, D.S.O., First British Columbia Regiment, now a prisoner at Bischoefswerda, had an exciting experience in the second battle of Ypres when he and his men were surrounded by the Germans. He forgot to put up his hands with the result that a German only a few yards distant fired two shots at him in quick succession. Fortunately the bullets went through his outer coat. The German was about to see what a third shot would do when Private Hills caught hold of Major Byng Hall and rushed him into a group of men and the major had no more holes made in his overcoat. In a letter in which Major Byng Hall refers to the battle, he says:

"All our officers were cool and the men simply splendid; their discipline was the best I ever saw."

Major Byng Hall adds:

"This prison here is an infantry barracks, quite new and beautifully clean; we are well treated and have nothing to complain of. The food is naturally not English, but we can buy what we want at a canteen. My knowledge of German is very useful."

Major Hall has seen considerable service. As a young officer he was with the 34th Sikh Pioneers in the China-Boxer campaign. Whilst there he was ordered to raise a body of Chinese police for the district and for eighteen months was engaged in chasing brigands. Whilst doing this he won the D.S.O.

Funeral for a Dog.

In a casket lined with white satin, his paws folded, "Laddie," beloved fox terrier of Mrs Edward H. McAndrew, lay in state last night in the parlor of his late residence, 549 Carlaw avenue, Toronto, while over a hundred mourners paid their last respects before the remains were forwarded to Vermont for interment at the birthplace of the deceased.

Beside him lay his collar and leash, the mug from which he had drunk, an old shoe beloved of Laddie, and a piece of rope with which, 14 years ago he, then a puppy, had played, treasured in the family ever since.

Mrs. McAndrews stood to receive the visitors in genuine sorrow beside the body of her dead pet. She had raised him, trained him, brought him across the blue, loved him for 14 years and finally lost him through the inevitable ravage of old age.

DETECTING A FORGERY.

Each Person Has His Own Pen Scope, and That Guides the Expert.

It is a very clever forger who can deceive the up-to-date expert in chirography. Many experts base their investigations of possible forgery on the belief that every one has a pen scope, just as they have a special finger print. This technical term describes the average stretch of paper that one may cover without lifting the pen off the paper and shifting the hand to continue the line.

It is a peculiarity of handwriting that in a written letter, for instance, the pen scope throughout may show an average stretch of one inch for the text of the letter, while in the signature, if the whole length of the name, twice as long may be covered. If the writer covers the full stretch of his name in this way the expert may prove by the shorter pen scope of the copyist that the studied copy is a forgery. On its face, therefore, however free of stroke a forger may naturally be, his effort to produce a facsimile of another signature will render his scope shorter than that of the original signer.

A common means of reproducing a signature is to place the original on a piece of glass, lay another piece of glass on top of it and fasten the paper that is to receive the forgery on top of that. Then by holding the glass strips to a bright light the original signature casts a shadow through, and this may be traced in pencil, from which an ink forgery is made.

Such a forgery, however, is easy to detect by an expert. If the original has a strong down stroke on the capital letters the movement will be free and will leave the pen liner with smooth edges. The individual who has traced such letters cannot trust himself to the same free movement of the pen, and the result shows under the glass lie tracey and uncertainly.—Pearson's Weekly.

THREE WEEKS' SHELLING OF GERMAN FRONT

RUSSIANS SINK A BIG ENEMY SUBMARINE

GREAT DAMAGE DONE TO THE GERMAN FRONT IN THE WEST

Countless German Works Destroyed---Enemy Positions Made Untenable and the Way Paved for a Possible Anglo-French Offensive Movement By the Furious Bombardment of the Past Three Weeks All Along Battlefront

NOTABLE PROGRESS MADE IN ALSACE

PARIS (French Official Communique) Sept. 21.—Countless German works were destroyed, other enemy positions were made untenable, and the way paved for a possible Anglo-French offensive movement, by the furious bombardment of the past three weeks, all along the battle front.

An official statement this afternoon explained the reasons for the cannonade, that for duration and number of shells poured in upon the enemy's trenches, surpassed any previous artillery storm of the war.

"These heavy artillery actions along the entire front resulted in the destruction of divers enemy works," said the official statement. "The cannonades, often unaccompanied by infantry attacks, were intended to destroy worrisome enemy positions and mitrailleuses, demolish enemy shelter places, and the concentration of enemy troops, and render it impossible for the enemy to hold certain works.

"Day and night storms of French shells descended upon the enemy's communication trenches, encampments, bridges and supply columns. The efficacy of the French fire throughout the bombardment was proven by the reports of our aerial observers who constantly flew along the front noting the results of the cannonades. German prisoners also admitted that the damage done their positions was most serious.

"The amount of ammunition expended proves the resources of France in shells. The incessant activity gave assurance that a war of attrition could continue with small losses for our forces."

"The French troops made noteworthy progress during the night at Hartsmannsweilerkopf by using grenades and bombs."

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Russian Czar has not been so successful in his army leadership as the deposed Grand Duke, the military critic of the Times hints to-day in discussing the possibility that the Russians in the Vilna region may be unable to escape from Von Hindenburg's trap.

The Times critic declares that it was poor strategy for the Slavs to permit German cavalry to sweep around the flank and seize the railways east of Vilna.

ATHENS, Sept. 21.—The Turks are rushing more reinforcements to the Dardanelles expecting a renewal of the Anglo-French offensive. The Thrace railway is being used exclusively for their transportation.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The British steamer Linkmore, four thousand tons, has been sung by a German submarine. The crew were rescued. This is the first submarine reported for some days.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The review of operations on the western front admits that the Germans have been compelled to retire from block houses at Sapigneul near the Aisne-Marne Canal after several days' struggle.

The French artillery made the German positions no longer tenable.

The Germans, therefore, blew up the block house and retired.

The War Office to-day was silant regarding operations on the Serbian front, where German batteries were yesterday reported in action for the first time since the war began.

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—General Sir Sam Hughes was in jovial mood to-day when he passed through Toronto on his way to Barrie, where a civic reception is being held in his honour. The Minister had nothing more to report regarding proposal of billeting troops during the winter. He said no official was ready to report. Regarding his statement the other day that he was getting two recruits for every one needed, he simply said: "I can get a million recruits any time I want them."

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Conscriptionist members of Parliament at caucus to-day decided not to press the conscription issue at the present session unless labour members attempt to force the ministry to declare itself against compulsory service.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 21.—Kaiser Wilhelm and Prince Joachim were slightly injured in an automobile accident, according to Berlin despatches to-day. The Imperial automobile was wrecked. No further details were given.

VIENNA, via Amsterdam, Sept. 21.—Greatest significance is attached by the Vienna press to the Sofia despatches to-day reporting that the Duke of Mecklenburg, on behalf of the Kaiser, has conferred the German Iron Cross on Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

A few days ago, Enver Pasha, the Turkish Minister of War, declared publicly that the arrival of the Duke in Constantinople was "the forerunner of the arrival of a great Germany army."

BERLIN, via Wireless, Sept. 21.—A British aeroplane was shot down west of St. Quentin by a German fighting biplane. The aviator was killed and his observer captured.

WAR BUDGET IS INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE

McKenna's Bill Provides for a Forty Per Cent. Increase in Income Tax as Well as Other Drastic Levies

TO TAX WAR PROFITS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 21. — A forty per cent increase in income tax and other drastic levies to meet the greatest deficit ever faced by the British nation, were proposed in the Government's tax budget, introduced in the House of Commons this afternoon, by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Reginald McKenna.

McKenna intimated the revenue for one year from all sources, at only nine billion three hundred and sixty million dollars. Against this, he said was an expenditure of nearly 9 billion dollars.

The income tax exemption limit is lowered from $3000 to $2000 a year under provisions of the bill adopted to-day. Thousands of workers heretofore exempt, will be forced to pay income taxes.

Excess war profits will be heavily taxed, the government hoping in this way to raise 150 million dollars annually.

The tax on practically all patent medicines is doubled and ad valorem duties averaging 33 1-3 per cent. assessed against a long list of luxuries.

"The taxation must be on a scale never before imposed by the British nation," said McKenna. "At the end of the year we will face a dead weight debt estimated at more than two million pounds sterling, over ten billion dollars. This would by no means cripple our resources, but every section of the nation must contribute and make the greatest sacrifices."

The navy, McKenna said, is costing Great Britain more than nine hundred million dollars yearly, the army more than three and one half millions, and "external advances" more than two billions.

"This is an unprecedented situation and it has resulted in the placing of unprecedented burdens upon the nation," he said. "Consequently, I appeal to you for approval of the measures which, however drastic they may seem, are necessary for the economic life of the nation."

To illustrate the increase in income tax rates, McKenna said that a man with an income of $50,000 yearly will pay an annual income tax of $12,645.

BULGARIA MOBILIZES

Bulgarian Minister in Washington Has Announced That This Step Has Been Taken

Special Cable to The Examiner:

Bulletin, Washington, Sept. 21. — Bulgarian Minister here to-day officially announced that Bulgaria has ordered mobilization in the interests of armed neutrality.

Berlin, via wireless, Sept. 21.—Bulgarian troops are concentrating along the Serbian frontier, according to despatches received here this afternoon.

Serbia, these reports asserted, has declared the Serbo-Bulgarian frontier a closed war zone and is preparing to meet an expected Bulgarian invasion.

German troops, as well as German artillery batteries, are massed along the Serbia boundary, co-operating with the Austro-Hungarians, according to press despatches.

AN APPEAL ON BEHALF OF THE 80TH BAND

The Examiner wishes to solicit on behalf of the Band of the 80th Battalion the support of the citizens of Peterborough for this newly formed organization which should prove one of the best advertising mediums the city has ever had. The situation is briefly this. The Government does not supply band instruments and has forbidden officers of regiments from canvassing for subscriptions. There is nothing, however, to prevent free-will offerings and The Examiner believes that the people of Peterborough are too proud of the splendid overseas band that is to be raised here to keep it waiting for equipment until Belleville or some other city in the division supplies the want. The band need instruments and need music. At present they are using borrowed instruments and music from the library of the 57th Band. This state of affairs cannot continue long, and it is up to the people of Peterborough to get busy. A few days ago the Toronto Star appealed for funds to supply a band for the 3rd (Toronto) Battalion at the front and before the last edition of that day's paper was run off the amount had been subscribed. The Examiner is confident that Peterborough's citizens are just as liberal as the people of Toronto. The 80th Band is peculiarly a Peterborough organization. It is being recruited here largely from the two local bands, has a local bandmaster, and will be known wehrever it goes as the Peterborough Band. The musicians have seen the path of duty and have come forward, many of them throwing up good positions to join. They are deserving of every assistance at the hands of their fellow-citizens. Let the answer be prompt and generous. Leave your subscriptions at The Examiner Office at once. Donations great or small will be appreciatively received. Make this a popular movement to support the Peterborough Band. And act now. If you can't fight you can help along in this fine work. The Examiner is ready to receive donations.

Local Company of 80th Battalion Had 160 on the Strength This Morning and Recruits Are Coming in Well—Meeting at Millbrook To-night

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The local Company of the 80th Battalion is now well on the home stretch towards completion with over 160 men in line. There were two platoons and two recruit squads drilling to-day and the men are rounding into good shape. The recruits coming forward are uniformly of a fine class and they are picking up the drill rapidly.

Major Stroud of the 4th Hussars, Kingston, will command the new squadron of Mounted Rifles to be raised in this division. The command was offered to Lt.-Col. Johnston, who has decided to remain with the 80th Battalion.

The treasurer of the Peterborough Progressive Club has received the following letter from Signaller E. J. Downey, one of the Peterborough boys in the 4th Battery, C.F.A. at the front:

Belgium, Aug. 29, 1915.

Dear Sir,—Received chocolate from Cadbury's manufacturers, London, Eng., which I will take great pleasure in distributing among the boys from Peterborough, and I am sure they will all appreciate the thought that the people of Peterborough still have them in mind. When it is divided I am sure each man will get enough to satisfy his longing for sweets.

Now, as you know, we can't tell anything about our movements. But I can say this much. We are still doing our share of the fighting. I am writing this in one of our observation stations about a mile and a half ahead of our battery and connected by a field telephone. One officer and two telephonists stay here all the time. And every time we get a chance we let the Huns have a few rounds. We can see from where we are miles of the country in the rear of the German trenches. Our officer directs our fire from here, and they can't do much that we don't see. Now I hear my call on the buzzer, so I think I will close.

With kindest personal regards to you and wishing the Progressive Club the best of luck, I am,

Yours sincerely,

Signaller E. J. Downey.

Pte. Jack Jones of B squadron, 8th C.M.R. who has been home on leave from Barrie field, was presented with a military wrist watch by the employees of the draughting department of the Wm. Hamilton Company, where he was employed up to the time of enlistment. When he joined the 8th his fellow employees had no opportunity to express their regards but they have taken advantage of his presence in the city on leave to make the presentation which is greatly appreciated by Pte. Jones.

Alfred Brisco, a brother of Fred Brisco of the 57th detachment, 2nd Battalion, who has been missing since the second battle of Ypres has enlisted with the 80th Battalion.

Slav Torpedo Boats Have Succeeded in Cornering and Sending to the Bottom One of Germany's Largest Undersea Boats

Special Cable to The Examiner

PETROGRAD, Sept. 21. — Russian torpedo boats have cornered and sunk with the loss of all the crew, a German submarine which has been operating in the Black Sea for some time.

It is supposed this is one of Germany's largest sea going subs, which voyaged around from Heligoland, and dodged the Allied fleets at several points.

Women's Suffrage Bill In Holland

Special to The Examiner

THE HAGUE, Sept. 21 — Queen Wilhelmina, in the opening session of the Dutch parliament, announced that the government will introduce a bill eliminating present hindrances to woman suffrage.

The Queen's announcement was greeted with applause.

Parliament, the Queen said, would be asked to vote credits for an increased navy in accordance with the programme recently drafted by the Naval committee.

Grafton's Balloon Prizes

Orders For Goods Will Be Attached to Balloons Released at Lakefield and Other Fairs

Messrs. Grafton and Co. will inaugurate a novel feature at their clothing exhibit at Lakefield Fair to-morrow. During the afternoon, a number of balloons in the shape of animals, etc., will be sent up and attached to them will be orders for goods which will be given to the finder on presentation at their store in Peterborough. The same thing will be done at other Fairs.

Most Generous Response To Jam Shower

Hundreds of pint jars were received at Richard Hall's store yesterday as the contribution from members of the Presbyterian churches of the city toward the jam shower for the soldiers. As an indication of the generosity of the people this is a splendid showing and a gift that will be fully appreciated. Some women gave as many as a dozen jars, and one presentation was of four dozen. A man gave six five-pound pails of honey, and a woman gave six large jars of maple syrup. The north window of the Hall store is being used as a display, but the quantity of jam therein is only a fraction of what was drawn to the room on Simcoe street, where the jars will be packed and boxed. The contributions yesterday were very generous and apparently of highest quality, an illustration of the fact that the efficient, careful home-keepers are the great majority. It is felt that announcing the number of jars received on the successive days would afford grounds for comparison and a slight rivalry which even though friendly, is desired to be avoided.

Masquerades As A Man

Local Woman Assists Her Husband Who Is a Scavenger

For some weeks past or probably months there has been masquerading in this city a woman attired in habiliments common to the male species. She sallys forth at night in company with her husband who by the way is a scavenger, and assists him in his work. As the by-law prohibits him carrying on his chosen calling in the daytime it must of necessity be carried out after nightfall. Just why the man's wife is permitted to masquerade as a man for this purpose is a mystery known only to the police who are supposed to regulate such matters.

The variety is known as the "bountiful," and Mr. Stenton stated that it produced more tonnage than any other variety.

GOOD FOR WAR-TIME.

The war, bad as it has been has not altogether dislocated business. We have this year the greatest acreage sown and the greatest crop in our history. And now there is one kind of indication that industrial and labour conditions are reviving. At the risk of giving our big contemporary, the Globe, a free advertisement, we give the the reading of a barometer by which to judge the improved conditions of manufacturing conditions. "A year ago," says the Globe, "on Monday, September 21, 1914, there were only eleven "Mechanics Wanted" advertisements in the Globe, calling for seventeen men. Yesterday, Monday, September 20, there were fifty advertisements, calling for at least seventy-five men. Conditions have greatly improved during the past year."

THE CONSCRIPTION BUGBEAR

They are making a good deal of fuss in the Mother Country over possible, if not prospective, conscription. It has, however, no terrors for anybody but those who bring it on themselves. The young Canadian who is eligible for military service, and enlists, has no need to bother his head over conscription. It is a dead issue with him. In his own person he has discounted conscription. And why should we make a fuss over conscription as a form of coercion, inconsistnet with democratic liberty? The essense of democratic liberty is subjection of personal liberty to the common good. We are free men, but we must pay taxes and obey and uphold the laws which are made, not for good men, but for bad men. Conscription if we bring it upon ourselves, comes within the same category as paying taxes, and keeping the walks clear of snow in the winter. Both are an infringement upon personal liberty; but necessarily so for the common good. If conscription were inconsistent with democracy, the greatest democracy of them all, the United States, would not have adopted it as it did do, in the days of the Civil war. It was necessary to save the country, and its application showed the citienship of the country did not include a surplus of patriots. Of those who brought it on themselves by refusal to enlist, some obeyed the law; some bought immunity from service; and some "skedaddled." While thousands of Canadians enlisted in the armies of one side or the other, more from the spirit of adventure than interest, more thousands of United States citizens invaded Canada — fled hither to escape military service, were such cravens as call themselves citizens of a country they had not the manliness to fight for. We don't want conscription in Canada. It will be a blow to our pride of patriotism; a slur upon our patriotism and upon the young manhood of the country. Whether we have or have not conscription depends upon the young men of Canada.

THE SCHOOLS AND THEIR FRUITS.

In another part of this issue is printed a letter from Mr. Mowat, Inspector of Peterborough Public Schools. The communication is printed with pleasure and satisfaction, because it is one of the first evidences made public of an interest shown in the matter involved, by an intelligent authority. It would, however, have been preferable if the writer had shown a little less resentment, and a little better understanding of the aim of The Examiner in dealing with the subject of the behaviour of pupils of the schools. Your "annual distribe" shows a "lamentable ignorance" of the object The Examiner seeks in dealing with the subject of the results of popular education. The writer corrects "our lamentable ignorance" by specifying the "adequate provisions" that have been made for aesthetic and moral development of character. The list looks well on paper, and theoretically promises much. But we are not looking for theories, but results; not for well appearing plans, but plans successfully carried out. No one denies, or is ignorant of the fact that the provisions specified are made. But whether these plans and the means employed for their application, represent a definition of "adequate provision" is perhaps questionable.

In regard to religious instruction in the schools, the section of the law quoted as applying, is the finest possible example of how not to do it—"a clergyman of any denomination may give religious instruction * * * at least once a week after the hour of closing school in the afternoon." Just think of that for "adequate provision" for religious instruction—not in dogmatics, but the instruction that tends to formation of high character —"may"; "at least once a week"; "after the hour of closing the schools." Not very much like the Scriptural way provided by the inspired Isaiah — "precept upon precept; line upon line; here a little, and there a little." Not giving a perfunctory "once a week" at the fag end of the day to the chief thing, the formation of character, which is not a made-to-order thing, but composed of layer upon layer of teaching and habit. Could anything be more unavailing in character, and lead to more perfunctory application than the legal provision for religious instruction? If the other "provisions" for the aesthetic and moral development of character mentioned by our correspondent are not more effectually applied, they are not a matter of much boast.

The Examiner's correspondent, shows us that somebody has taken more interest in the matter referred to than the member of the School Board, whose indifference was criticised. Somebody has inquired and found out that it was a little lad who had attended school "for the period of three days." At the same time he shows that he entirely, if unintentionally, misunderstands The Examiner. There was no intention to bear hardly upon so tender an offender; he was only dealt with on the ex-unodisce-omnes principle—as a type of a prevailing condition. The Central School children may have refrained from injuring the flowers in the Central Park—under the very eyes of their teachers, and in the presence of the park gardener; but was their abstinence due to ingrained principle? If so, these children are an exception to the children, boys and youths, of the city generally. The Examiner has only made so "sweeping condemnation of school children," if it has done so, with good intentions. We have not aimed at any other thing than to call attention to the evidences of lack of proper formation of character in the schools, in the matter of respect for elders and superiors, and respect for the rights of others. This involves the integrity of our public places. We have not singled out any children of any school, except as examples of the whole generally. We have maintained that if successful teaching of the golden rule were done in our schools, the next generation would be better in the regard of respect for public and private rights than the next. We know something is wrong, and naturally look to our schools to remedy the wrong — the schools which have the charge of the children, that will make our men and women, five days in the week, as against the one or two hours a week of the Sunday school and the church. Character building, to be successful must, like the growth of the oak, be a continuous process, not a matter of fits and starts. The public school has opportunity for continuous influence upon children's character; and it is a matter of regret that the community does not show larger evidences of its success; for no one will admit that the children of the present generation are as polite, respectful, and well-behaved as we should expect in a continuously improving civilization.

The Examiner is glad that it has uttered its "annual distribe," and made its "sweeping condemnation." We have realized one part of our object—the arousing of intelligent and authoritative interest in a subject which every thinking person will consider a matter of vital moment. We are sure Mr. Mowat's object in writing was good; but no more so than the Examiner's was in making the comments that provoked his comments; and if we can arouse a similar single-minded and intelligent interest in the members of the School Board and the teachers of his inspectorate, The Examiner will have the pleasant duty of giving congratulations, instead of having the unpleasant duty of offering criticism in the public interest.

PUT SNAP IN RECRUITING.

If we have more recruiting meetings they ought to be better handled. The speeches should be short and to the point and delivered by men of magnetism. There should also be good music, and enlistment ought to take place on the spot and at the time wherever it is possible; the gathering should be largely of the nature of a revival meeting. The chairman should be able to throw enthusiasm into the meeting and every energy concentrated on the one thing of getting men to join.—Toronto World.

ATTITUDE OF LLOYD-GEORGE TOWARDS CONSCRIPTION

Lloyd George's appeal to his countrymen to refrain from wrangling over conscription and to leave the question to the decision of the government contains the same common sense that has characterized most of his utterances on the war. The issue between a continuance of the voluntary system and the adoption of compulsion, he says, is one of fact, not of principle. It must be decided by figures, not by uninformed guesses or still less by sentiment. It is a plain question of whether or not the country can win through the war without conscription, and facts and figures can alone decide this. These facts and figures are in possession of the government and of the government alone.

The minister very properly says that "if these figures demonstrate to every unprejudiced person that the voluntary system has exhausted its utility and nothing but legal pressure can give us the armies necessary to defend the honour of Great Britain and save Europe from the triumph of military despotism, I have not yet heard of the man who would resist compulsion."

If the British government shows from facts and figures that compulsion is needed, there will be no opposition to it. We don't want conscription if we can get along without it, but if we can't do without it, there is no Britisher who thinks so little of his country that he would oppose it. The man who would oppose it after it had been decided upon from national and not from political motives would brand himself as a traitor to his country.

As contended in these columns months ago, there is a vast difference between conscription that is settled upon as a national policy during peace time and the adoption of compulsory military service during the progress of war as a measure in defence of the nation. Conscription adopted in peace time is decidedly a militarist policy. Conscription when found necessary when war is actually in progress is not a concession to militarism nor a departure from the principle of democracy, but is purely an action of self-defence. The issue is entirely different now to what it would be were there no war going on.

It is surely the business of the government, which has responsibility for the success or non-success of information that has not been made public, to give this question first decision. No political consideration should be entertained regarding it. The other members of the British government will be as unselfish in their decision as Lloyd George when he declares that he will do his best to secure the utmost effort from the nation in opposition to the enemy "without the least regard to the effect my appeals may have upon my own political fortunes." The same cannot be said, however, of some of those who have been attempting by fair means and foul to force the government's hands for months in both directions.

Let the government decide first. Says Lloyd George:

"It is all a question of ascertainable facts. Why then, all this premature anger? The determining facts have not yet been published. When they have been sifted and made known the advocates of one view or the other will surely find that the whole cylinders of fervour and veracity have been wasted in attacking positions which they will then discover they ought to defend. Let the government have a fair chance to decide. — Ottawa Free Press.

IS THIS RED TAPE?

"No assignments of pay can be made after the expiration of three months from the date on which a soldier has been reported missing."

This is the language of an official letter from Ottawa to the mother of a young man who went to the front, and who may be dead or a prisoner in Germany. If he is a prisoner she ought to be receiving a share of his pay, and if he is dead she ought to be receiving a pension. There is neither sense nor justice in cutting her off from every allowance because her son has been missing for three months. Is not the three months' limit merely a piece of red taper? We are told that this war is to last a long time, perhaps three years. If so, the allowance ought to be continued for three years, or till the end of the war. Surely it ought not to be assumed that it is a soldier's fault if he is missing after three months.—Toronto Star.

The Canadians' Stand At Ypres

The following poem was written by a captain of the 7th Canadian Battalion and has been sent by Pte. Gordon Fallen of Peterborough, who was wounded some time ago:

England as the mother, and Canada as the son,
And proud of the deeds they have fought and won.
Yes it was Ypres where the battle raged high,
And we left on the field many heroes to die.

It was not by their shells, but by gas we all know,
That choked and blinded us wherever we'd go,
But they hung to the trench till they dropped down with pain,
And the shells burst around them yes time and again.

But move, not them, they were game to the core,
They stood in defiance and ready for more.
We are proud we can say we fought side by side
With our brave Highland Laddies to try stem the tide.

But they poured down upon us, now words cannot tell,
For around old St. Jean it was simply like hell.
Now Ypres in the distance was shelled night and day
And the fire from the buildings showed the dead as they lay.

A hard struggle at hand, and every man they could find,
When a cry of a general soon passed through the line,
"For God's sake hang on men, it's the key to the west."
And the boys from dear Canada, they sure did their best.

Although it proved costly, the situation was saved
And those that have fallen are ranked with the brave.
They have now left a name, that will stand good and true,
For they died whilst defending the red, white and blue.

Every recruit brings the end of the war closer. Do your bit by joining the 40th Battalion.

WANT BOYS TO REPLACE OARSMEN LOST IN WAR

Efforts are being made, with some show of success, to place rowing on a solid basis among the schools of England, with the Eton methods and school of rowing as the standard. Many famous oarsmen have been killed in the war the supporters of aquatics want the boys schooled in the art in order to start systematically at the conclusion of the war. It is hoped to have college men who have taught the orthodox style of English rowing volunteer to teach the schoolboys. A miniature Henley recently held, in which only schoolboys competed, is a fair example of what may be accomplished in that direction.

COBB LEADING IN CLOSE RACE FOR PASSING HONOURS

There is as pretty a race for the pass honors in the American league as there is in the National for the pennant. The scrap to see who will lead the Johnsonites in working the pitchers for gifts is a four-handed one, the pace-setter being Tyrus Raymond Cobb of the Tigers, and his three pursuers Edward Trowbridge Collins, of the White Sox, Bertram E. Shotten, of the Browns, and Owen Bush, a team-mate of the Georgian. These four pastimers all have passed the century pole, Cobb having drawn 107 gifts from the hurlers, and the other three men each 101. Last season there only was one century plant Donie Bush. The midget then trudged on 112 occasions.

When the full returns are in it will be found that a great many more passes have been issued this year than last, the cause for the increase being Cornelius McGillicuddy's mania for digging up Minot Crowells and Bruno Hasses. In 1914 there were 27 men who obtained 50 or more gifts while this year there are 20. Of the eminent pass collectors of 1915 five are Tigers, four are Yankees, three are White Sox, two are Red Sox, two are Browns, two are Indians, one is a Senator and one is a White Elephant. Players in the half-century list who already have obtained more passes this year than they did last are Cobb, Shotton, Eddie Collins Veach, Hooper, Hughey, High, Cook Ray Chapman, Fourner, Schalk, Austin and Vitt. Cobb and Shotton have particularly boosted their 1914 totals for last year Tyrus only procured 57 favours, while Bertram had 64.

Bush and Eddie Collins have reached first over the four-ball route in 73 contests. Cobb in 69 and Shotton 68. The last named is the only member of the quartette who has extracted four passes from pitchers more than once. He thrice received four gifts. Eddie Collins once has walked four times in one game.

This is the way Cobb, Collins, Bush and Shotton have piled up their huge totals in complimentaries-

Bush has walked once in 51 games, twice in 16 games and thrice in 6 games.

Shotton has walked once in 45 games, twice in 16 games, thrice in 4 games, and four times in 3 games.

Cobb has walked once in 37 games twice in 26 games and thrice in 6 games.

Collins has walked once in 51 games twice in 17 games, thrice in 4 games and four times in one game.

Here are the 27 best pass-getters in the American.

107 bases on balls—Cobb, Detrfoit.
101 bases on balls—E. Collins, Chicago; Bush, Detroit, and Shotton, St. Louis.
74 bases on balls—Hooper, Boston.
69 bases on balls—Vitt, Detroit.
66 bases on balls—Pipp, New York.
63 bases on balls—Speaker, Boston.
62 bases on balls—Veach, Detroit.
58 bases on balls—Schalk, Chicago, and Austin, St. Louis.
57 bases on balls—Moeller, Washington.
56 bases on balls—Crawford, Detroit, Chapman, Cleveland, and Fournier, Chicago.
55 bases on balls—Walsh, Philadelphia.
54 bases on balls—Cook, New York
53 bases on balls—Graney, Cleveland.
52 bases on balls—Hartzell and High, New York

FEDS. HAVE 25 PLAYERS WHO ARE WORTHLESS

But Will Keep Them at Heavy Loss Until Their Contracts Expire

James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal League, discharged a few broadsides in the general direction of the Federal League recently, in answering O. B.'s "planning" of the Feds' action in releasing players.

"Those fellows ought to observe the ruling of that motto about people who live in crystal huts shouldn't heave bricks," said Gilmore. "If the Federal league treated its players even one-tenth as unjustly as organized baseball has treated ball players, we'd hide ourselves because of shame over our actions.

"We've never blacklisted a player, as organized baseball has done. We've never refused a player a job simply because he played in some other organization, and we've never failed to pay a player every dollar that he's worth and sometimes more. If a player in our league—a youngster just breaking in—shows that he is a real player we don't wait until he threatens to jump before we advance his salary. We give it to him voluntarily. We pay for value received—and we pay well. That's more than organized baseball is doing.

Tripled Some Salaries.

Before our advent, it was the practice of organized baseball to pay the players just as little as possible. The player had to accept what was offered to him or be barred from baseball. The magnates in those days told the players that they were paying them all they were worth. Yet when we got into the baseball business they doubled and tripled the salary of those players, which shows that they originally had been paying the players only one-half or one-third of their real value.

Some of the players who came over to us from organized baseball figured that their future baseball career would be one long joy party. Their habits soon interfered with their best playing skill. I sent warnings to these men, through the club presidents, that boozing would not be tolerated. The men, for the most part, ignored the first warning. Because I wanted to give them every possible chance, I sent a second warning. Some of the men observed that warning and quit dissipating. Others did not and they were released.

Living up to Contracts.

"There are in the Federal League right now about 25 ball players, secured from organized baseball who are of little use to us. But we are keeping them and will keep them until their contracts expire, simply because they are doing the best they can. Their efforts may be feeble ones, and they aren't any real help to their clubs, but they are trying to earn every dollar they get, and we show our appreciation of their efforts by letting them stay.

"To keep these men means a loss of nearly $100,000 a year to the magnates in the Federal League. But they are being kept because it's our policy to play fair with the men who play fair with us. Does anyone think that organized baseball would keep 25 men or even one man if that man was of no value to it?"

LAWN BOWLING

A fob contest was played off last night at the green between the Brightman and the Cottrell rinks, with the following result:

Cottrell ..... 010000010040 — 6
Brightman ..... 10414201402 — 23

The next fob contest will be played to-night between the Brightman and the Pratt rinks.

The Red Cross tournament is being played last night and to-night. The result will be published to-morrow. There will be a tidy little sum to hand to the Patriotic Society.

The Club's annual meeting will be held this week on Friday on the green, when plans will be made for the coming season.

There never was a better chance for promotion than there is in the 80th Battalion right now. To-day is the time to join.

QUAKERS HAVE NEVER WON A PENNANT.

Are Trying For The 200 Mark By End Of The Week

there are a number of other recruits who have been accepted, but who have not yet reported for duty.

Major Eastwood, A.M.C., who has been away on a short vacation, is back on duty at the armouries.

The provisional corporals of the local detachment of the 80th are practising voice production. Sergt. Major Miller had them hard at work this morning shouting orders to imaginary squads. From outside the armouries one would imagine a whole battalion was being drilled inside.

Bert Janes, the Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. goaler, who has enlisted in the Sportmen's Battery, at Hamilton, is the latest in the list of local hockeyists to join the over-seas forces. Among the other well-known Peterborough hockeyists who have enlisted are Fred Denison, Maurice Park and Cyril Giroux, intermediate players, and Harold Morrow, Harold Knapman and Ormie Cavanah, of the Juniors.

The band of the 80th Battalion will attend the recruiting meeting at Millbrook to-night. Lt.-Col. Johnston and Sergt.-Major Miller will also be in attendance. The party will motor to Millbrook, leaving the Armouries at 7 o'clock, sharp. Cars are being furnished by Messrs R. W. Travers, A. T. Johnston, J. T. C. Lang, John Crane, F. R. J. McPherson, James Hamilton, R. R. Hall, J. F. Linton, and P. Trehilcock.

Men are coming into the 80th with a rush just now. "Two hundred by Saturday night" is the slogan of the officers, and by present indications the strength of the detachment should not be far away from that mark by that time. It would mean sixty-four recruits during the week, over twenty of which have already been secured, leaving five days to secure about forty men. If every man in the ranks will make himself a recruiting sergeant, it can be accomplished.

The recruits squad yesterday was the largest since the recruiting for the 80th began. The "rookies" are in charge of Corp. Lemay of Lakefield.

Two Chemong Indians were taken on the strength of the local detachment yesterday. They are both powerful men and keen to learn the drill.

Among the recruits who joined the 80th Battalion yesterday was Albert Stanley, son of Mr. Wm. Stanley, assistant caretaker at the armouries. He is the third son to enlist, two other brothers having joined the 8th Mounted Rifles last January.

Bandmaster W. Peryer of the 59th Battalion Band was home from Barrie-field on leave yesterday.

The 80th Battalion Band took on several musicians yesterday. Two sons of Drummer Dwyer of the band have enlisted. They are clarionet players and will be welcome additions to the organization. Two musicians are expected from Campbellford to-morrow.

FRENCH REVERE GENERAL WHO FOSTERS ATHLETICS

Gen. de Maud-huy's great popularity in the French army is attributed to the fact that he is an advocate of sports. He has contributed more than any other general officer to the development of athletics in the garrisons. Every regiment stationed at St. Mihiel teams, and the general never missed during his stay there had two football a match. He also encouraged boxing and foot races. Berretrout, the champion mile runner of the army, was one of the men selected by him as athletic trainer of the troops.

The general was a frequent spectator at the training boxing bouts, and did not disdain a round or two himself with the gloves. He had learned the French system from Charlemont and proved an apt pupil in the English style.

One of the many dainty articles that can be made from handkerchiefs is a collar for a child. The handkerchief may be either silk or muslin hemstitched. Fold in the shape of a triangle, cut a round out of the centre for the neck, and down through one point. Hem neatly around the neck and along the cut edge. Sew a frill of lace round the lower edges, or if liked it can be crocheted with silk lace threads. Work the border and round the neck and down the fronts with a fancy stitching in white or coloured washing silk.

Stock Markets

The Westinghouse Dividend.

The usual date for Westinghouse Directors to meet to act on the current quarter's dividend is Sept. 23 or thereabouts, but the Street has already begun to speculate about the action to be taken. War orders have had beneficial effects on dividends of other companies, and holders of Westinghouse shares are hoping that the time is near for a betterment of their income. An increase from the 4 per cent. rate in force for three years to 6 per cent. is looked for in some quarters. Expectations so far, however, have not been converted into anything more assuring, because the Directors decline to predict what they may do. There was a time when the stock paid 10 per cent. Mention to a Director the possibility of a return to that figure and much emphasis is placed on the denial that such action may be taken in the future, far or near.

Baltimore & Ohio.

All the surplus cars on the Baltimore & Ohio, according to a statement by Daniel Willard, President of the road, have been pressed into use. The Pennsylvania Railroad only a short time ago made a similar report on its idle cars. According to Mr. Willard, there was an actual shortage of 100 cars on the Baltimore & Ohio system one day last week. This loss is passenger business, due to the falling off in immigration a year ago, has not yet been overcome, but the freight tonnage in August was about 10 per cent. ahead of last August. The loss of the immigrant trade, Mr. Willard said, meant a loss of $800,000 a year to the road.

31,996,519 Cotton Spindles in Action.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Cotton used during August was 464,486 bales, exclusive of linters, compared with 383,680 bales in August last year, the Census Bureau announced to-day.

Cotton on hand on August 31 in consuming establishments was 1,166,190 bales, against 675,873 a year ago; in public storage and at compressers 1,676,231 bales, against 546,034.

The churning of the war stocks into activity is not being received with as much favour as was the previous advance. Brokers having customers inclined to speculate in these issues are doing all they can to dissuade them from making such commitments, believing that a severe smash would come should real talk of peace arise.

While most bankers claim that the war orders received by the large industrial companies do not contain cancellation clauses, others declare that these contracts could be broken by finding fault with specifications not lived up to owing to the rush in which the munitions are being turned out.

American Brake Shoe, which has been negotiating with agents for the allies for a $35,000,000 shell contract, expects to get the order if the huge foreign loan is floated.

Steel companies have advanced prices $1 a ton for bars, plates and structurals for delivery the first quarter next year. Big trunk lines have started inquiring earlier than usual for the rail requirements. New York Central and Pennsylvania are believed to want at least 300,000 tons.

Net operating revenue of all express companies for May were $988,303 against $164,804 in May, 1914.

Illinois Central is in the market for fifty Mikado engines and Norfolk & Western for twenty-five Mallet locomotives.

What will be termed "financial buccaneering" in the financing methods of the American railroads have been found in the physical valuation of the roads. The forthcoming report of the Interstate Commerce Commission will it is learned censure many of the railroads roundly. It was stated on high authority to-day that financial jugglery, such as has already been disclosed in the New Haven and the Rock Island investigations, has been unearthed by the agents of the commission in their work and very few railroads have escaped.

MARKET OPINIONS OF NEW YORK HOUSES.

Post and Flagg—The market has undoubtedly commenced to discount the successful conclusion of the negotiations for a big European credit, the announcement of which is looked for this week. Nothing official however has yet come to life, and any hitch in the negotiations at this time would cause great disappointment.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.—Should we get an announcement of the successful closing of negotiations of the foreign credit, we would look for a better market, in which rails should share. They have been laggards for a long time and with the improvement in earnings it is full time that speculation should turn to them.

Jenks, Gwynne & Co.—With the character of the news over the week-end favorable we look for the stock market values to show further improvement.

E. A. C. Randolph—A general policy of buying standard rails confidently, taking sound industrials on a conservative scale down on reactions, and buy specialties for turns when made bullishly active is suggested as the best course during the prevalence of the trading market. Higher prices are indicated for Central Leather, B. & O., Atchison, N. Y. Central, Erie First, G.G., Wx., U.P., Reading, C. & O., St. Paul and New Haven. These stocks are understood to have been unusually well accumulated and there are signs that important buying is becoming more aggressive.

Laidlaw & Co.—It would be surprising if the stock market did not respond in some degree to the favourable developments outlined.

Harris, Winthrop & Co.—Big loan will help railroad stocks. We believe in making bullish commitments but not on the bulges.

NEW YORK PRESS COMMENT.

Sun.—Basically, conditions are promising for a fair measure of constructive improvement in quoted values.

Wall Street Journal.—Accumulation of stocks still appears to be in progress, and the market shows broadening.

Financial America.—Most of the interest in the stock market is in the specialties which show a strong tone.

Times.—There is evidence of a renewed broadening of speculative interest in the stock market.

Situation Along The Canadian Lines Remains Unchanged

Enemy's Aeroplanes Have Been Slightly More Active Than Usual---Enemy Artillery Also Active on the Left Section

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—The following was received yesterday by Gen. Sir Sam Hughes from Six Max Aiken, Canadian eye witness

"During the period of the 7th to 13th September the situation along the front of the first Canadian division has remained unchanged. The enemy's aeroplanes have been slightly more active than usual; the enemy artillery has also been active, particularly on the left section. There has been little rifle fire beyond the ordinary sniping. Our patrol report the enemy still busy strengthening his defences with wire entanglements.

"On the evening of the 8th instant a successful bombing expedition was carried out under the direction of Lieut Bellmant, 5th batallion. The bombs thrown apparently all fell within the enemy's parapet, causing considerable loss and damage, and the party retired without casualties

Under cover of prearranged artillery fire large working parties have been employed continuously in strengthening and improving various parts of our defences.

A party of six Canadian journalists visited the first Canadian division on the 12th and 13th inst., spending considerable time in the trenches. On the 13th inst., they saw a fast model German aeroplane which had been brought down in the early morning by a young English airman in the vicinity of the Canadian lines after a long pursuit and machine gun tight in mid-air. The party also visited Ypres and the hospitals commended by Colonels Murray, MacLaren and Birkett.

Appointments to Canadian headquarters are as follows:

General Staff officers, second grade Lieut-Col. C. H. Mitchell and Major R. F. Haytor, D.S.O; general staff officers, third grade, Capt. R. P. Clark; administrative staff, assistant provost marshal, Major A. MacMillan; chief engineer, Lieut.-Col. C. J. Armstrong, with temporary rank of brigadier-general.

Brig.-Gen. A. W. Currie, C.B., has been promoted to rank of major-general Other appointments include: Lieut.-Col. A. E. Ross to be assistant director medical services, first Canadian division; Lieut.-Col. L. J. Lipsett, C.M.G., to command second infantry brigade with temporary rank of brigadier-general; Capt. A. B. I. Webber, Royal Irish Fusiliers, to be brigade-major, first infantry brigade. brigadier-general Turner was appointed major-general some weeks ago.

Soldier Taken From Ypres To A London Hospital And Operated On In Twelve Hours

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Dr. J. C. H. Beaumont, the Surgeon of the White Star liner Baltic, who has returned from a three months' tour of the military base hospitals in England and Scotland said recently that the rapidity in the removal of wounded men from the field to the base hospitals was one of the wonders of the war. Liners like the Asturias, Avon, and Aragon are constantly crossing the channel between Havre and Southampton, and each has accommodations for 1,200 men.

"In one case to my personal knowledge a soldier was severly wounded near Ypres at 7 o'clock in the morning and twelve hours later he had been carried across the Channel and conveyed by train and automobile ambulance to the London Hospital in the Mile End Road and successfully operated upon," said Dr. Beaumont. "Many of the major cases are operated upon at the field base hospitals. Though the use of the X-rays surgery has become more conservative, because the surgeon is assured of the exact local conditions and upon that forms a prognosis for more conservative surgery than twenty years ago. In Netley Hospital, near Southampton, when I visited it there were 2,000 wounded men all in the best of spirits and no complaint from any of them. Hospitals are scattered all through the country, and many fine mansions, like Dunrobin Castle, have been converted into convalescent refuges, and the women of the families assist in looking after the patients.

"Since the war commenced 4,600 surgeons have joined the army and navy from the colleges. Many doctors have given up one practices to lend their aid, and others, retired years ago, have returned to operate in the base hospitals. A month after the war commenced I offered my services and was refused on account of my being over forty. In May this year I offered to serve again in the army and was accepted. Then the White Star Line said I could not be spared, as there were no surgeons to go in the steamers. The young graduates start at $5 a day as surgeons with their quarters and board and $250 to purchase an outfit for the field."

Dr. Beaumont went on to say that there had been a great decrease in the number of gangrene cases in Flanders and lockjaw cases in France, where the soil was very fertile and nourished the tetanus germs. The injection of the anti-tetanus serum immediately after the lockjaw sets in had proved very successful, as well as the inoculation for typhoid fever. Analysis of water before drinking and the general hygiene of the army had been looked after better than ever before.

The greater portion of the wounds of the men in hospitals were caused by shrapnel or high explosives, and not by the rifles of increased velocity, which send a bullet through a man without stopping him unless it strikes a vital spot. There are also a number of nerve shocks which result in loss of memory, loss of speech, and insanity, caused by the strain of being so many hours in the trenches under the terrific detonation of the high explosives.

"It is a mistake the doctor said, "for the people who have not been to the other side to say that the people of England do not realize the seriousness of the war. They do now, from millionaires to newsboys. When the battle cruiser Lion and Tiger went out to fight the German ships they sailed so quickly that forty workmen were carried off on the Tiger. Among them was a walking delegate who had been asking frequently in public 'What is the navy a-doing of?' He was given a station with the other workmen before the Tiger went into action and the first salvo from the big guns frightened him so that he had to be confined in a straitjacket, with a guard mounted over him.

"As the battle proceeded the guard looked down and exclaimed: So you're one of them armchair orators that's always asking what's the navy a-doing of. Well, you're going to see now."

"Just then a big shell burst nearby, covering the two with a variety of debris. 'That's a starter,' said the sailor as he turned to the orator, but the latter had fainted dead away.

200 by Saturday night. That is the slogan of the 80th Battalion this week. There is a place in the ranks for you.

Presentation To Mrs. (Dr.) Harvey

Also to Miss Marion Harvey, Who Have Removed to Peterboro' Where They Will Reside

NORWICH, Sept. 21.—The September meeting of the W. M. S. of the Methodist Church, Norwich, was held at the home of Mrs. C. Fry.

The meeting was subsequently converted into a farewell for Mrs. (Dr.) Harvey, who has been President of the Society for fourteen years, and who leaves, with her family, for Peterborough, their new home.

A very appropriate address was read by Mrs. Wm. Jull, and a beautiful cameo brooch, set with pearls, was presented by Mrs. Rawlings.

Mrs. Harvey, who expressed her surprise at being thus honoured, thanked the ladies most heartily for the beautiful gift, and referred feelingly to the many happy days enjoyed in the Auxiliary work with her associate members.

She would always be pleased to hear of the success of the auxiliary, and hoped to continue as a missionary worker in her new home.

Presentation to Miss Harvey.

They also presented Miss Marion with an address, expressing regret at her removal from their midst, and accompanied with a beautiful pearl sunburst.

WARRIORS OF AIR CHIVALROUS TO FALLEN ENEMY

Tell Friends of Victim When He Falls Into Their Hands in European Battles

British Army Headquarters in France—"Though it has been repeatedly stated that chivalry does not exist in this war," said a British aviator, "this does not apply to the British and German aviation branches. Whether it is the individualism of our work and its novelty, or whatever it is that is responsible, something of the old spirit of knighthood maintains among the riders in the air. When a British aviator has to descend in the German lines, whether from engine trouble or because his engine or his plane has been damaged by anti-aircraft guns-fire, the next day the Germans report to us his name and whether he survived, and if so, whether he is wounded. We always do the same. It has come to be a custom."

The reports are made in a manner worthy of airmen, and they are the only communications that ever pass between the two foes which watch for heads to snipe at from their trenches. What is called a "message bag" is dropped over the British lines by a British aviator, sometimes when he is in the midst of bursting shells from the anti-craft guns. Long streamers are attached to the little cloth bag.

"That is one of the advantages of belonging to the flying corps," says the British aviators. "It may be weeks before his relatives and comrades know whether a man who is missing after a trench attack or counter attack is a prisoner or dead. Such little kindnesses as this don't interfere with your fighting your best for your cause. At the same time they take a little of the savagery out of war. Of course, the rule could not apply to prisoners taken in trench fighting—only to airmen. There are relatively few airmen on either side, and only an occasional one ever comes down in the enemy's lines."

Col. Allen Returns.—Col. J. A. W. Allen of the 20th Batt., 2nd Canadian contingent, is returning to Canada for a rest, and will return to a command at Shornciffe in a short time. Picture shows the regret of his men at losing him. They are carrying the Colonel to his train.

Will Remove The Remainder Of Crop

Police Court Case Adjourned Sine Die—Drunk Fined Two Dollars

The Police Court has developed into quite a recruiting centre. Seldom a morning passes but what one or more delinquents are given an opportunity to enlist in preference to a term in gaol. This, despite the fact that there is no record of one having been accepted. The militia authorities have said on more than one occasion that they are not anxious for that class of recruits. This morning the opportunity to enlist was extended to a local man who pleaded guilty to a charge of theft.

Adjourned Sine Die.

The case of Arnold Mason versus Frank Montgomery, was adjourned, sine die, in order to give the litigants an opportunity to effect a settlement.

Mr Joseph Wearing appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. G. Gordon acted in a similar capacity for the defendant. It appears that Arnold was a sub-tenant of a piece of property that was subsequently disposed of to the defendant. The latter undertook to harvest the crop on the property in question, claiming that the transfer of the property gave him immediate possession. Mason will be given an opportunity to reap the fruits of his labour and will receive compensation for the amount said to have been removed.

James Shay pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness. He was fined two dollars. Shay claims to have come from Smith Falls.

Better get a khaki suit on before Capt. Charlie Ackerman comes home at the end of the week. Then you can look him unashamedly in the eye when you shake hands with him. Join the 80th.

Bride Agrees To Seek No Divorce

St. Louis Husband Divorced One Wife and Wants No Repetition

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—When Miss Matilda Delhve, 27 years old, was married in East St. Louis to Frank H Dearing, 41, travelling freight agent for the Georgia railroad, she bound herself doubly by the ceremony and by a prenuptial agreement to remain his wife until death should them part. In the prenuptial agreement she pledged herself never to sue for divorce or separate maintenance.

She was not opposed to divorce on principle, she said, but she thought that a man and a woman should know each other so well before marrying that there would be no chance of the marriage being a failure. She and Dearing had known each other four years.

The explanation given by Dearing to Justice Driscoll, who performed the ceremony after certifying the agreement, was that he wanted to shield his children from the possibility of divorce or separate maintenance litigation.

Dearing and his bride, for business reasons, wanted to keep their marriage secret for a while. Mrs. Dearing is in charge of the St. Louis branch of the Victor Chemical works. Her duties are agreeable on account of the absence of her husband from the city much of the time she prefers to retain her position, so that she will have the diversion of business life to occupy her while he is away. She has gone to live at Dearing's home, however, and it was not the intention to keep the marriage secret from their friends.

The couple became acquainted when they were associated in a business way in the same office. Dearing's home is at Athens, Ga. He obtained a divorce in the latter part of 1912 from Mrs. Pauline H. Dearing on the ground that when he was transferred from Jacksonville, Fla., to St. Louis she refused to accompany him. They were married April 5, 1900, and there were two children, Pauline, 12 years old, who was with her mother, and Abin, 10, who was with Dearing's parents.

Many Children Die From Summer Complaint

When They Could Be Saved By Using DR. FOWLER'S Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. Guy R. Rhyns, Middle Clyde, N.S., writes: "Last summer my little boy Ross, then a year old, had summer complaint. He was so bad the waste matter from the bowels looked as if it had come from a broken boil. I live some distance from a doctor, but I sent word to him to come as soon as he could. In the meantime I gave him Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and he gradually grew better after the first two doses, and after using all the bottle he was cured. I am the mother of three children, and I could not get them through the long summer months without it."

Thousands of families throughout Canada and the United States have used this sterling remedy during the past 70 years and have always found it a "friend in need."

When you ask for "Dr. Fowler's" see that you get "Dr. Fowler's." Don't accept some no name, no-reputation medicine which some dealer may say is "The same" or "Just as good."

The genuine is manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont

WAR CRUSHES MEXICANS INTO PIT OF DESPAIR

Villa Troops Shattered and Dirty and Bread Lines Abound in Cities

TORREON, Mexico, September 20—Starvation conditions in Mexico City are fairly typical of central, northern, northeastern and northwestern Mexico

Northern Mexico has long since forgotten the principles of the revolution, and the political, financial and social "reforms," which were the slogans of Villa and Carranza. To the great mass of the Mexicans those principles never were more than campaign talk. They understand that the military leaders are merely playing politics with guns instead of speeches, processions and votes.

In Torreon eggs sell for 12½ pesos each, chickens 25 to 35 pesos each; milk, a peso for a half litre; cigarettes (as much an article of food to a Mexican as bread, 2½ and 5 pesos for a package of 10. A silver peso is worth about 15 cents in United states money, and a paper peso about 7 cents. Practically there is no meat here although the hotels occasionally are allotted a little by the government.

ALWAYS A BREAD LINE

Torreon always has a bread line. It is a long, patient, black robed line of women with bowed heads. Able bodied men have either been killed or wounded in the fighting or are in conscript service or in hiding. So the women and children stand in the bread line in front of the panaderia, or municipal bakery.

While the supply lasts each is given a pittance of corn meal, sometimes a mere handful. When the forage is gone some turn away to forage in the garbage cans of more prosperous citizens. Others just wait in the bread line. Sometimes they faint before the doors open. Sometimes they drop dead and their bodies lie on the streets.

At one of the larger panaderias the crowd waited thirty six hours. Then the gendarmes appeared and ordered the women to leave. They did not refuse to disperse, they simply did not go. The gendarmes repeated the order loudly and fired pistols in the air. A torrent of Spanish broke out from the women.

"Shoot us!" they cried. "Death must come. Shoot us but don't let us starve to death. The bullet is more merciful."

VILLA TROOPS DOWN HEARTED

Torreon is full of Villa troops, mostly elderly men or young boys. The flower of the army is dead or disabled, principally dead. The army of today is not well uniformed, spick and span as it was a year ago, when Villa was triumphant and his treasury was full of money. Villa forces are thin, hardened, morose, the result of many battles and successive defeats. All that prevents mutiny is fear of the big brown man with the bush mustache and the blazing eye, Villa.

Northern Mexico is full of wounded now in the hospitals and on the streets. Torreon and Chihuahua City are also [illegible] 12,000

A Justification Of The Provisions For Ethics In Our Public Schools

An Interesting Communication from the Inspector of Peterborough Public Schools

The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have read with interest your annual diatribe on the Peterborough Public school children.

Last year it was brought forth by some Queen Mary children crossing a lawn on their way to school, while this year the occasion was the climbing of a tree by a little lad who had attended school for the period of three days.

You seem to forget that Sept. 1st is the day on which over two hundred children begin attending our schools for the first time, and that it takes more than three days for the moral and aesthetic development of character.

The statement that, no adequate provision made in our schools for the aesthetic and moral development of character, shows a lamentable ignorance of what has been provided. The course of study includes Literature, History, Music and Art. The Golden Rule Books, a series compiled with the one object of aiding in the training of manners and morals, have been added to an already overburdened curriculum. In addition to these, we have the Bible in our schools, and, more important than all for young children, we have the teachers example and precept.

The school law also says: "A clergyman of any denomination shall have the right, and it shall be lawful for the Board to allow him to give religious instruction to the pupils of his own denomination, in each school house, at least once a week, after the hour of closing the school in the afternoon."

These provisions for the aesthetic and moral development of character are not being ignored or neglected in the Peterborough Public schools. The teachers are honestly striving to do their part and have the right to look for the cooperation of the church and the home, including the family newspaper.

That the Central school children who called down your wrath upon them in Saturday's issue, are not devoid of all sense of right, and have some lingering traces or regard for the property of others, is shown by their regard for the flowers in Central park. They pass through the park four times a day and throughout the whole season they have not injured a dozen flowers.

Your sweeping condemnation of Public school children, because of the thoughtless acts of a child or two, is neither just nor fair. I remain,

Yours very truly,
A. MOWAT, I. P. S.

Little French Girl Bakes Bread For The Village

PARIS, September 21—Danian, the only baker in the village of Exodun, department of Deux-Sevres, being called to the colours, the village was without bread. Then Madeleine Danian, the baker's daughter, a slight miss of 14, lit the bakery furnace, and with the help of her brother of 10, tried to make bread. After several attempts she succeeded to the satisfaction of the villagers and the surrounding farm people, and has been working now for many months from four o'clock in the morning until late in the day, baking bread for the populace.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE GEO. GRADY

The largely attended funeral of the late George Grady this morning testified to the wide circle of his friends, and to the bereaved family was an expression of esteem and sympathy. All the children of the Sacred Heart School were present in a body and walked from the house to the Sacred Heart Church and afterwards to St. Peter's cemetery. A numerous congregation assisted in the requiem mass and many accompanied the remains to the cemetery.

The pall bearers were John McCarney, Ed. Guerin, John Theobald, Fred Grady, John Finn and John Armstrong, Jr., representing the Sanctuary boys, of whom the deceased was a member. Many floral tributes were received.

Before peeling onions for pickle pour boiling water over them and they will not make the eyes smart.

To remove fruit stains from linen stretch the fabric over the mouth of a basin and pour boiling water on the stain.

Military Roll Of St. John's Church

Over One Hundred Names Appear On the List Now Exhibited in the Porch

There was installed on Saturday last, in the porch of the ancient looking edifice of St. John's Anglican church a list of names of members of the congregation connected with the church, who are either on active service at the front, or who have enlisted to render the highest services to their Country and their King.

This roll comprises more than one hundred names, of whom some are officers, some non-commissioned officers, nurses and privates, all in their various spheres doing their level best for the country so dear to us all.

The list, which has been printed, is imposing in its simplicity. A massive dark oak frame of Oxford design, some two feet by three feet, having a grey mat as a margin, contains the list printed in good bold type—Tudor, Windsor and Claredon. As a back ground, and slightly draping the frame, is a silk Union Jack, making the whole a very effective, efficient, yet most flashy, display. A small cross prefaced to some of the names signifies that the bearers have already sacrificed their lives for Right against Might.

At the foot of the list is a very suitable, fervent prayer from the pen of Mr. W. F. Johnston, erstwhile People's Warden of St. John's church.

The beautiful silk flag is the gift of Mr. H. Denne, and was specially manufactured by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, on whom it reflects great credit. The printing work was set up at the Examiner Office, the frame being made to order by Mr. Hoovens, of Hunter street.

Over 165,000 Of Enemy Birth Among Population Of Canada

OTTAWA, Sept. 21—That there are 165,775 persons of enemy birth in Canada, including Germans, Austro-Hungarians and Turks, is indicated by a special report on Canada's foreign-born population issued to-night. The figures, which have been compiled from the last census returns are of special interest now that the country is at war. Toronto possesses 2,670 foreign-born Germans, Austrians and Turks over 21 years of age, while there are 668 people in Berlin, Ont., who were born in Germany.

There are 29,130 Austro-Hungarians in the Dominion this nationality largely preponderating among those of alien enemy birth. There are 39,577 German-born inhabitants and 4,768 who were born in Turkey or Syria.

As regards subjects of allied countries it may be pointed out that persons of French birth in Canada number 18,000, of Italian birth 34,739, and Russian 89,984. In view of the prominent part Bulgaria is playing in Balkan diplomacy just now it is of interest that the number of Canadian inhabitants of Bulgarian birth is fixed at 1,503. That unhappy country, Belgium, has 7,975 of its citizens in the Dominion.

Of the total number of Austro-Hungarians in Canada, 80,940 are naturalized citizens; 23,283 Germans and 1,889 Turks share the same privilege.

Charles Veenman will leave this evening for Barriefield Camp.

HARD WINTER IS PREDICTED

Aunt Jane of Georgia Sees It By Cobweb Process

Georgians would do well to lay in a large supply of coal, for, in spite of the excessive heat of the summer, the approaching winter is bound to establish a record for all-round severity.

"Aunt Jane" Barksdale of Dalton, Ga., has read the signs and "Aunt Jane," who is an old, ante-bellum negress, knows.

She has examined the spider webs and has found them unusually thick and tough, the webs being similar in texture to those found the summer preceding the coldest winter she ever experienced—during war times. Torn away the webs will be reformed on the morrow. It is an infallible sign of a severe winter.

This is a direct call to the native born Canadians. Our adopted sons from across the seas have responded to the appeal unanimously. It is up to the home brews. Join the 50th.

Only Good Poultry Are Worth Feeding

Mr. C. H. Wilson Commends Local Associations and Advises Those Who Are Not Members

Mr. C. H. Wilson of Brockville, who was poultry judge at the Fair, paid a tribute to the local Poultry Association in the evident good results of their work. There must, however be many citizens, he said, who should be members of the Association. These are the people who buy a dozen hens or so, throw them into coops or stuffy sheds, built according to their own ideas and then they expect these fowl to thrive. When they invest money in poultry they should get a good strain, give some attention to their flock before buying it. Scrub stock will eat just as much to feed as good ones. In other words, Mr. Wilson intimated that there must be many useless hens in the city's numerous nondescript flocks. If people are interested enough to keep hens they should try to keep good ones, instead of wasting good feed on scrubs. The influence of the Association should reach a wider field every year and through it can the citizens learn the most approved methods of caring for fowl, housing them, feeding, etc.

"BUCKET OF BLOOD" IS RENAMED "EVERBODY'S."

Nevada City, Colo, Sept. 20.—The last sign indicative of the days when Nevada City was a wild and woolly mining camp—that of the "Bucket of Blood" restaurant—has disappeared.

The place recently changed hands, and the new proprietor decided the name was too sanguinary, so adopted the title, "Everybody's" instead.

BULGARIA'S MOBILIZATION OF MACEDONIA CAUSES INDIGNATION

Has Assumed She is Master Before Stating What She is Willing To Do in Return For Control---To Ask For Explanations

PARIS, Sept. 21 Despatches from Sofia, Bulgaria, announcing the mobilization there of troops made up of residents of Macedonia, have caused another complication to be introduced in the Balkan situation which already was tense through the presentation by the Entente allies of the joint note requiring Bulgaria to define her attitude.

The mobilization of Macedonians has caused surprise and indignation in official and diplomatic circles here, as it is declared that the whole purpose of the present negotiations between the allies and Bulgaria and Serbia is to determine whether Macedonia belongs to Bulgaria or Serbia. That Bulgaria should mobilize Macedonians while the future of Macedonia was still at issue is declared in the highest Serbo-Greek quarters to be an affront to the allies and the other Balkan states. One of the Legations that is taking part in the negotiations outlined the situation today as follows:

Bulgaria demanded from Serbia the re-cession of Macedonia as an essential condition to Bulgaria's joining the other Balkan states and co-operating with the Entente allies. The latter took up Bulgaria's claims and presented them to Serbia in joint notes. Serbia after mature consideration, yielded to the desires of the allies and conceded virtually nine-tenths of the territory in Macedonia demanded by Bulgaria. The only portion of Macedonia not conceded was a small section which was considered essential to Serbia's military defences, but these concessions of Macedonian territory were made in order that Bulgaria give something in return, namely, her co-operation with the Balkan states and the allies. The allies therefore handed Bulgaria a joint note last week reciting Serbia's concessions of nine-tenths of the disputed Macedonian territory and in effect asking Bulgaria what she proposed doing as a result of the concessions.

Now, however, the diplomatic outline continued, before giving an answer, Bulgaria assumes that she is master of Macedonia and begins the mobilization of Macedonian residents that is she assumes control of Macedonia before stating what she is willing to do for the allies in return for such control. This the diplomatic authority pointed out, gives the situation a new phase which may call for another note from the allies in addition to that of last week, asking an explanation of the Macedonian mobilization at the moment when the allies are negotiating terms by which Bulgaria may secure the re-cession of Macedonia.

It is understood that the allies' joint not of last week was accompanied by a verbal request to M. Radoslovoff, the Bulgarian premier, for a reply at the "earliest possible date."

Hanover, Germany.

Dear Mrs. McKinlay,—I only received your letter a few days ago and I am taking the first opportunity to answer.

As regards your son, I met him at Carrell, in France, about the second week in April, but have not heard from him since. It is possible that he is a prisoner in one of the other camps. I am very sorry to hear of your husband's illness. I will have to ask you to let Mrs. Pappas know that you heard from me, as I should send this letter to her. She lives at 678 George Street. We are well treated here. Hope you will let me know if you hear from your son, and when you see my aunt, just tell her I have sent two letters to her since we were captured and have no answer yet. I will have to close now as this is my busy day.

Hoping that you will hear from Sammy and that Mr. McKinlay will soon be all right again, I remain,

Yours very sincerely,
J. H. MILLER.

Surprised To See Lights Burn All Day

An American visiting the city, was surprised on a recent visit to notice the street electric lights burning during the day. When he asked for an explanation he was told it was cheaper to keep them burning than to have them put out. In that case, the visitor thought it would be a good thing to have the people burn their lights all day and the profits gained thereby divided among them

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The gymnasium classes opened yesterday, the junior and the senior employed boys being the ones to start the season. In spite of the fine weather a splendid interest is being manifested by the boys in the classes and a successful season's work is being looked forward to.

The senior business men and the junior business men, now known as the Drop In class, will not commence activities at present but will get together October 18th. The reason for this is the fact that most of the men prefer to take advantage of the fine weather and secure their recreation on the bowling or tennis greens, or other outdoor activities.

The senior class commences to-night.

The annual city championships will again be held on the afternoon of Thanksgiving day, Oct. 11th. The four trophies given by Messrs. Hayden, Huycke, Eastwood and Peck, will be competed for. A splendid programme of athletic events will be provided, and the proceeds will be devoted to the work of the Y.M.C.A. with the soldiers at the front. This work is meeting a great need among the men in the trenches and at the bases and is highly deserving of the best support.

Many farmers throughout Ontario have erected fine steel truss barns this year, and have moved away their crops at less expense and with greater ease than in former years. The steel truss barn has no cross timbers which does away with lifting loads to the roof before swinging in over the mow and at the same time allows of one third more storage space

DROPPED DEAD ON FAIR GROUNDS

Smith Township Man Stricken With Heart Failure—Was a Director

Allan Trennum of Smith Township dropped dead yesterday on the Lakefield Fair grounds. He had just completed rolling the grounds and was about to unhitch the horses, when he was stricken. Dr. Fraser was summoned but the man was beyond all aid when he arrived. Deceased, who was one of the fair directors, resided about two miles south of Lakefield on the 7th concession. He leaves a wife and one child.

DEMAND THE IMMEDIATE CESSATION OF MACEDONIA

In Bulgarian Ultimatum to Nish, so Says Report From The Balkans---Mobilization of Greek Armies in Interests of Serbia Will Follow.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—An Athens despatch today predicted a Bulgarian declaration of war against Serbia within 48 hours. Other reports from the Balkans said Bulgaria was preparing to send an ultimatum to Nish, demanding the immediate cessation of Serbian Macedonia.

Formal notice of the sending of such an ultimatum will be followed by the mobilization of Greek armies in the interests of Serbia.

Despite these disquieting reports belief was still held in some quarters to-day that Bulgaria may yet be kept out of the war.

Several well informed diplomats here took the view that Bulgaria is attempting to frighten Serbia into offering concessions by a show of armed force.

If Serbia refuses, they held, Bulgaria will withdraw from her menacing attitude without striking a blow.

Entire Block of N. Y. Subway Caves In

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—An entire block of the new Seventh Avenue subway caved in without warning early to-day between 23rd and 24th streets. A crowded street car, running on the surface, dropped into the great gap caused by the cave in and a wild panic ensued.

Police estimates at 8:45 a.m. were that twenty-five persons had been killed, and nearly 100 injured.

Crowds pressed in upon all streets leading to the scene of accidents and such confusion resulted that it was impossible to verify these figures.

ROUMANIA TO REMAIN NEUTRAL SAYS BERLIN

BERLIN, (via Amsterdam), Sept. 22.—German officials asserted to-day that the Balkan situation had been cleared up entirely to the satisfaction of Germany and her allies, that Bulgaria could be counted upon for active aid, and that Roumania would maintain a neutrality "benevolent as regards the Teutonic allies, at least."

The indication of general confidence as to the future attitude of Roumania came as a great surprise to the public, which had expected that the Bucharest Government would support the entente powers. That Roumania's attitude had been largely changed through the efforts of Count Czerin Von Chudemitz, Austria's Minister to Roumania, became known through a despatch from Bucharest to the Vossische Zeitung. The correspondent of this paper reported that the Austrian envoy had conveyed to Premier Bratiano reassuring assertions as to the policy of the Central Empires, and had presented evidence as to the past results of the Teutonic armies' operations and their future plans.

Officials at the Foreign Office declined to comment to-day on reports that the King of Roumania and Bulgaria would confer with Duke Johann of Mecklenburg, Emperor William's personal diplomatic envoy, who is receiving his instructions directly from the Emperor.

Heavy Burden For The Swiss

Cost of Protecting Frontier is Immense For The Little Republic

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Switzerland's expenses for mobilization up to September 1 amounted to $28,000,000. President Motta made this announcement in a speech to-day to the National Council of the Swiss Confederation, as reported by the correspondent at Berne of the Havas Agency. The President stated that if the war should continue ten months longer the nation's mobilization expenses would reach $80,000,000.

Switzerland faces a net deficit of $20,000,000 at the end of three years. It is expected this will necessitate the creation of new financial resources, such as tobacco monopoly, in addition to the revenue derived from the war tax and the increase of postal and telephone taxes.

Rousing The Dead In The War Zone

The Warring Nations Are Disturbing The Rest of Nation's Long Dead

Not content with turning the whole living world topsy-turvey, the warring nations are distributing the rest of nations long dead. A French officer with the troops in the Dardanelles campaign in a letter to his wife, writes:

"We are on a Greek necropolis of the highest antiquity, some five or six centuries before our era. In digging trenches we come on enormous stones which resound. They are the lids of tombs. With great care (but not always) we remove the covering stone. Underneath is the interior of a stone coffin, which we empty little by little. Grain by grain for centuries the soil has gently intruded. Inside there is a skeleton more or less preserved.

"Besides this, in each sarcophagus ethre are potteries more or less rich, but always of exquisite form. I have beneath my eyes a delicate cup, which the slighest shock would break. It symbolises that particular and characteristic beauty of form which Greece revealed to us. Its long handles, almost ethereal in their delicacy, give to this little thing the palpitations of wings. Only passionate admirers of the human body were capable of creating such marvelous lines in clay. They are arms which open towards Heaven—these handles on my Greek cup. I very much enjoy drawing these treasures. Last night the guns were silent. A respite for all. It is so rare."

High Tariff Wall Against Neutrals' Goods Urged on Allies to Hasten End of War

Economic Pressure to End Secret Aid Shipment to Germany is Measure Suggested by Dr. E. J. Dillon.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—In the current number of the English Review there is an interesting article by Dr E. J. Dillon entitled "A Way to End the War." The writer reviews the shuffling policy of certain neutral countries and declares the majority of them are speculating on the ultimate victory of Germany, and while getting all favours possible from the Allies are endeavouring to render every possible assistance to the enemy.

Dr. Dillon suggests the formation of an economic league, which would mean the adoption by the Allies of "two customs tariffs for all produce and manufactured goods entering their respective countries from abroad, a lesser one to be applied to all imports from Allied countries, or if might in our case be wholly dispensed with, and another very much higher, to be levied on all merchandise coming from other States."

The effect would be to raise prices, but says Dr. Dillon, it is a matter of dire necessity, while "in reality the cost of food would not be appreciably augmented owing to the large number of markets on which we could still draw for our duty free supplies.

"If, say, Roumania were not a member of the league, we should purchase our cereals in the United States, Canada, Australia and Russia. Doubtless the South American Republics would also join the concern, which in their case would not imply readiness to render help other than diplomatic to the Allies. Now this tariff league, if established at once, would represent 271,500,000 friends, as against 142,750,000 million enemies and 65,000,000 neutrals."

Another item in this economic programme would include "far reaching restrictions on the coasting trade and sufficient heavy shipping dues to kill the competition which was formerly carried on by the great German liners against those of Great Britain. On coal, too, which before the war was export duty should be levied, which 000,000, a higher and a lower rate of export duty should be evied, which would sensibly affect the industries of the non-combatants of the league."

"The direct bearing upon the destinies of Europe of a close economic entente established at once can hardly be over-stated. For it is stated that none of the neutrals, if denied the gratuitous enjoyment of the benefits now conferred on them by communion with the owners of the world's chief markets, could thrive on the few crumbs that might fall from Germany's frugal board. Solicitude for the material interests to which they are peculiarly susceptible would therefore move them to turn, like the sunflower, toward the source of heat and fertility. And it, instead of speculating on our ultimate defeat, they felt moved to speculate on our triumph, and to make the venture safe by throwing in their lot with ours the campaign would be virtually won."

ITALY CALLS ON YOUNG RESERVISTS

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 22.—All male Italians over 19 years of age in Western Pennsylvania and Northern West Virginia have been called to report for examination for military duty. The order was received late yesterday by Joseph Natale, the Italian Consul, and today was communicated to the young men it affects.

Suspect a British Army Is in Serbia

Detachments of Royal Artillery Have Been in Serbia Some Time

That the projected Austro-German invasion of Serbia, which the Kaiser's military advisers believe will force a way relentlessly to Turkish territory and open a road for supplies and supports for the Turks, will find itself suddenly opposed by a wall of well trained British troops, is the opinion of military men here. It is thought very probable by those who have given thorough consideration to the matter that Great Britain must have a good sized army already on Serbian soil.

As far back as July 6 Crawford Price the British eye-witness with the Serbian army, mentioned the fact that there were British troops in that country. This statement was made officially. The meagre announcement in despatches from London that the Serbian army was supported by British troops however is an indication that to a military observer is significant.

If Great Britain has hurried a large army down to the Montenegrin coast and landed at Antivari and Dulcigno, no sin will have accomplished a great stroke of military work. From Montenegro such a force could be marched down the valley of the Drina, through Bosnia, or might be launched in an eastward drive across Albania to the Greek frontier, where it would seriously interfere with any Bulgarian effort to help Germany. Or again, the force could be sent through the mountain passes and into Serbia, there to join the Serbian army.

It has been known for some time that detachments of royal artillery have been in Serbia, aiding that nation's soldiers with heavy ordnance. French aeroplanes too, are at work there.

The greater part of Lord Kitchener's army has been moved with much secrecy out of Great Britain. Where has this army gone? Much interest has been taken by military men here regarding the destination of the great force since the time of landing has passed and while no one in army circles will be quoted upon the matter, the opinion is almost undivided that it is or attempted to uncover one of the greatest coups de main attempted in Great Britain's history.

GERMANS ARE SHORT OF BEER

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Owing to the malt and barley supply to brewers being officially limited to sixty per cent. of their normal requirement and owing to the vast demand for beer for the armies in the field a decided shortage of beer is noted in order to obviate conditions the authorities have permitted brewers having sufficient supplies, to use their allotted quantity of raw material of the last quarter of 1915 for earlier consumption.

EQUAL PAY FOR WOMEN.

To Get the Same Wages as Men in English Munition Plants.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Women employed in the manufacture of war munitions will receive the same rates as men, if piece work and arrangements are under way for the establishment of day rates for women on the basis of equal pay for equal work.

This announcement was made in a letter from David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, which was read at the national conference of labor in session at the Central Hall, Westminster, in regard to the victory for "former militant suffragists," who recently have conducted an agitation calling upon the Government to pay women the same rates as men for the same work.

Joffre is a Born Strategist

Col. Barone, After a Visit to French Front, Says Public Should Be Patient

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Great confidence in the military situation on the western front and in the ability of General Joffre and the high French command is expressed by Colonel Barone, the Italian military critic.

After having paid a visit to the French lines and having examined the trenches and the positions where the most furious fighting has taken place, Colonel Barone is convinced that the supreme French command will adopt the offensive directly the opportune moment arrives, after that, then, "despite the great difficulties to be overcome, the action will be continuous, with the probability of victory all in favor of France."

Colonel Barone has reason to be in the first line trenches and in the secondary lines of defence the French troops are admirably trained, that an excellent understanding exists between them and their ... and that both the newly joined recruits and the seasoned campaigners are full of confidence and ... In France both the army and the people convinced of final victory, are prepared to make any sacrifice.

Colonel Barone has reason to believe that a very different spirit prevails among the German troops. The Germans have been obliged to reduce their ... on the ... western ... and their troops are convinced that very few of them will ever return to Germany. The number of desertions is increasing daily, a fact which he regards as peculiarly significant. In these circumstances, and also in view of the fact that the Germans are wasting their forces in Russia, he feels assured that the German Titan will soon be at his last gasp.

... Colonel Barone ... the French, British and Italian troops ... part in the ... with the Germans disappointed in wasting so much money on the eastern theatre. He urges the public, however, to be content to leave the choice of the right time to strike this decisive blow to those in authority, for he is persuaded that the French commander-in-chief is worthy of the full confidence.

Unassuming and phlegmatic, General Joffre, when it comes to questions of military technique, is a soldier of the best order and a born strategist. "Those who are impatiently waiting for some great action," says Colonel Barone, "will do much better to leave the conduct of affairs to him."

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. W. ... Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores ... feeble wasted nerve ...

When grease is spilt on the ... or table or floor pour cold ... on it at once to prevent it soaking ... the wood. It will quickly ha... and can be lifted with a knife.

To prevent the juice running out of a fruit pie make a roll of clean paper, hold it upright, and insert it through the crust. The steam then escapes, and the juice remains in the pie.

PILES Do not suffer another day with Itching, Blind, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles. Prompt relief and operation unnecessary.

Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. 60c. a box; at dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 2c. stamp to pay postage.

"Like you!" I cried, taking her by the shoulders. "Why, Elsie Hazzard, have never liked you and George half so much as I like you now. You two and the Smiths stand out like Gibraltars in my esteem. I adore all of you. I shan't be happy again until I know that you four—and no more—are coming back to Schloss Rothhoefen for an indefinite stay. Good Lord, how happy we shall be!"

I said it with a great deal of feeling. The tears rushed into her eyes.

"You are a dear, John," she sighed.

"You'll come?"

"In a minute," said she with vehemence, a genuine American girl once more.

"Just as soon as these pesky workmen are out of the place I'll drop you a line," said I, immeasurably exalted. "But I draw the line at noblemen."

CHAPTER XII.

I Am Invited Out to Dinner.

MR. PLESS went away with the others at half past 11, and that was the end of his first visit to my domain. For fear that you, kind reader, may be disappointed, I make haste to assure you that he was to come again.

Of course there was more or less turmoil and—I might say disaffection—attending his departure. He raised Cain with my servants because they did this and that when they shouldn't have done either; he (and the amiable baron) took me to task for having neglected to book compartments for them in the Orient express; he insisted upon having a luncheon put up in a tea basket and taken to the railway station by Britton, and he saw to it personally that three or four bottles of my best wine were neatly packed in with the rest. He said three or four, but Britton is firm in his belief that there was nearer a dozen, judging by the weight.

"Well, thank the Lord!" said I, as the ferry put off with the party, leaving me alone on the little landing. The rotten timbers seemed to echo the sentiment. At the top of the steep all the Schmicks were saying it, too; in the butler's pantry it was also being said; a score of workmen were grunting it, and the windlass that drew me up the hill was screaming it in wild, discordant glee. I repeated it once more when Britton returned from town and assured me that they had not missed the train.

Conrad, grinning from ear to ear, was waiting for me outside my bedroom door late in the day. He saluted me with unusual cordiality.

"A note, mein herr," said he, and handed me a dainty little pearl gray envelope.

"I shan't be home for dinner, Conrad," said I, my eyes aglow. "Tell Hawkes, will you?"

The countess welcomed me with a radiant smile. We shook hands.

"Well, he has gone," said I, drawing a deep breath.

"Thank the Lord!" said she. And then I knew that the symphony was complete. We all had sung it.

It must not be supposed for an instant that I had been guilty of neglecting my lovely charge during that season of travail and despair. No, indeed! I had visited her every day as a matter of precaution. She required a certain amount of watching.

I do not hesitate to say at this time that she seemed to be growing lovelier every day. In a hundred little ways she was changing, not only in appearance, but in manner.

Now, to be perfectly frank about it, I can't explain just what these little changes were—that is, not in so many words—but they were quite as pronounced as they were subtle. I may risk mentioning an improvement in her method of handling me. She was not taking quite so much for granted as she did at first. She was much more humble and considerate, I remarked. Instead of bullying me into things she now cajoled me; instead of making demands upon my patience and generosity she rather hesitated about putting me to the least trouble. She wasn't so arrogant nor so hard to manage. In a nutshell, I may say with some satisfaction she was beginning to show a surprising amount of respect for me and my opinions.

Her devotion to Rosemary was wonderful to see. By the way, while I think of it, the child was quite adorable. She was learning to pronounce my name and getting nearer and nearer to it every day. At the time of which I now write she was calling me (with great enthusiasm) by the name of "Go go," which reduced to aboriginal American means "Man-With-the-Strong-Arm-Who-Carries-Baby."

"It is very nice of you to ask me up to dine with you," said I.

"Isn't it about time I was doing something for you in return for all that you have done for me?" she inquired gayly. "We are having a particularly nice dinner this evening, and I thought you'd enjoy a change."

"A change!" said I, with a laugh. "As if we haven't been eating out of the same kettle for days!"

"I was not referring to the food," she said, and I was very properly squelched.

"Nevertheless, speaking of food," said I, "it may interest you to know that I expected to have rather a sumptuous repast of my own to celebrate the deliverance. A fine, plump pheasant, prepared a la Oscar, corn fritters like mother used to make, potatoes picard"—

"And a wonderful alligator pear salad," she interrupted, her eyes dancing.

I stared. "How in the world did you guess?"

She laughed in pure delight, and I began to understand. By the Lord Harry, the amazing creature was inviting me to eat my own dinner in her salle manger! "Well, may I be hanged! You do beat the Dutch!"

She was wearing a wonderful dinner gown of Irish lace, and she fairly sparkled with diamonds. As I looked at her standing there by the big oak table I couldn't help thinking that the count was not only a scoundrel but all kinds of a fool.

"It was necessary for me to bribe all of your servants, Mr. Smart," she said.

"You did not offer the rascals money, I hope," I said in a horrified tone.

"No, indeed!" She did not explain any further than that, but somehow I knew that money isn't everything to a servant after all. "I hope you don't mind my borrowing your butler and footman for the evening," she went on. "Not that we really need two to serve two, but it seems so much more like a function, as the newspapers would call it."

It was my turn to say "No, indeed."

"And now you must come in and kiss Rosemary good night," she said, glancing at my great Amsterdam clock in the corner.

We went into the nursery. It was past Rosemary's bedtime by nearly an hour, and the youngster was having great difficulty in keeping awake. She managed to put her arms around my neck when I took her up from the bed, all tucked away in her warm little nightie, and sleepily presented her own little throat for me to kiss, that particular spot being where the honey came from in her dispensation of sweets.

I was full of exuberance. An irresistible impulse to do a jig seized upon me. To my own intense amazement and to Blake's horror I began to dance about the room like a clumsy kangaroo. Rosemary shrieked delightedly into my ear, and I danced the harder for that. The countess, recovering from her surprise, cried out in laughter and began to clap time with her hands. Blake forgot himself and sat down rather heavily on the edge of the bed. I think the poor woman's knees gave way under her.

"Hurrah!" I shouted to Rosemary, but looking directly at the countess. "We're celebrating!"

Whereupon the girl that was left in the countess rose to the occasion and she pirouetted with graceful abandon before me in amazing contrast to my jumping jack efforts. Only Blake's reserve and somewhat dampening admonition brought me to my senses.

"Please don't drop the child, Mr. Smart," she said. I had the great satisfaction of hearing Rosemary cry when I delivered her up to Blake and started to sink out of the room in the wake of my warm cheeked hostess.

"You would be a wonderful father, sir," said Blake, relenting a little.

I had the grace to say, "Oh, pshaw!" and then got out while the illusion was still alive. (As I've said before, I do not like a crying baby.)

It was the most wonderful dinner in the world, notwithstanding it was served on a kitchen table moved into the living room for the occasion. Imposing candelabra adorned the four corners of the table and the very best plate in the castle was put to use. There were roses in the center of the board, a huge bowl of short stemmed Marechal Niel beauties.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Dusseau, Postmaster, Dugmayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good plan to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. SAND BAGS OF SILK

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 21.—Silk and velvet are now being utilized by the Germans for making sand bags for the trenches in Belgium, according to the correspondent at Rotterdam of the Telegraaf. This measure has been necessitated because the supply of jute has been exhausted.

The correspondent also says that wounded Germans are arriving at Rouders in a stream, and that the graveyard, in which the dead are interred, has been enlarged three times.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BOWSER DOESN'T FLY

Neither Does the Aerial Machine He Was Planning to Purchase.

EXPECTED TO RIVAL BIRDS.

Contraption Turns Out to Be a Scheme of the Promoter to Get a Few Drinks—as a Mixup the Philosopher Gets the Worst of It.

[Copyright, 1915, by W. G. McClure.]

A wife should be able to, and most of them can, tell the condition of her husband's mind on seeing him a block away. As Mr. Bowser dropped off the car the other evening Mrs. Bowser was sitting on the front steps waiting for him.

She noted that he walked with a swagger.

She took notice that he swung his arms in an important way.

She saw that his condition of mind was enthusiastic.

As he drew nearer a blank smile covered his face, and he started to swing his hat as he entered the gate.

"Did you find a quarter on the street car?" she asked as he came up the steps.

"Come along to dinner and I'll tell you all about it. Has a man been here inquiring for me within half an hour?"

"THAT IS WHAT IS GOING TO REVOLUTIONIZE THE WORLD."

"No. A man passed here about half an hour ago driving a hog, but he didn't stop to ask for you."

"Well, the right party will be along within an hour. Mrs. Bowser, I've struck it."

"For the five hundredth time. Is it a patent powder to shoot all the mosquitoes off the face of the earth?"

"Don't be sarcastic, now," he replied as they sat down to dinner. "I may have made a few failures, but what man hasn't? I've got something this time that is a sure thing. There isn't one chance in a billion for failure. There's fame and money in it—dead loads of the long green. In a month from now we'll have our manor house and steam yacht, and the Bowser National bank will be doing business with the front and back doors wide open."

"Is it a chicken farm?"

"Guess again."

"Going to raise squabs for market?"

"No squabs. You couldn't guess in a year. Mrs. Bowser, how long is it since the first man tried to navigate the air?"

"A thousand years, for all I know. I hope you haven't got that flea biting you."

"One hundred years ago, my dear woman, a man named Pete McCarthy set out to fly across the Irish channel. He had worked for two years on a flying machine. He didn't fly. He built his machine after the figure of a bird, but unfortunately got the tail in front, and it came down in the water and drowned him. Since that time hundreds of men have spent years and years and any amount of money trying to invent a successful flying machine."

Had Read of It.

"Yes. I have read of it in the papers. If those men had spent their time sawing wood instead humanity might have had some benefit from it. Fools and flying machines have never been far apart. And so that's the bee in your bonnet, eh?"

"Mrs. Bowser, listen to me. It is a sure thing that the air is to be navigated. We navigate the earth and the water and why not the air? People are tired of steamboats and railroad trains. They want a change of scenery. They want to keep the cinders out of their eyes. They want to go faster. They want to get there sooner. Yes, I may tell you that I have become interested in a flying machine."

"Is there anything too foolish for you to invest in?" she asked in acid tones.

Mr. Bowser flushed, but held on to himself, and after a minute he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, you don't understand. There is a worldwide demand that the air be navigated. Every government is interested in the subject. Every board of trade is interested. It must come. In war we must drop shells on the heads of the enemy, and in commercialism we must find more rapid transit. A week hence you may be reading in the papers of the Bowser lines to London, Paris, Berlin, California and South America. We figure that we can go a mile a minute and take freight and passengers for half price. No stops between terminals. Airships leave on time to the minute. Steamer and railroad lines will be in bankruptcy within two years. If I can get in on the first successful flier, what is there in it for us? Why, woman, I wouldn't take a bushel of pearls for my show!"

"Some one with a flying machine is trying to rope you in, is he?" she asked as they went up to the sitting room.

"Rope? Rope? Rope Bowser in?" he shouted. "Understand, woman, that I have never been roped, and never shall be. You insult my financial intelligence by using any such expression. A gentleman who has invented a flier wants capital to bring it to the attention of the world. Learning of the interest I take in all great enterprises, he came to me for encouragement. As soon as he shows up here this evening we are going to take a look at his invention. If he can convince me that the problem has been solved I shall invest—that is, if he will consent to rename it the Bowser flier. Have you got any more sarcastic remarks to get off?"

"No. I am not as ignorant on this matter as you think. I have read all that the papers have had to say for the last year. I know that two or three machines have succeeded in making short flights on perfectly calm days and that others have fiddlefaddled for a hundred yards and then came down with a bump. Man never has and never will invent a flying machine that a gusty day won't put out of business. Anything like a gale that will blow down brick factories must make short work of any machine light enough to fly through the air."

"And you are done, are you, madam?" asked Mr. Bowser as there came a ring at the bell, and he rose up.

Skeptical of Success.

"All except to say that you have my consent to invest and take all the flying trips you desire. Should you and this inventor decide to start for Brazil tonight please telephone me so that I may lock the front door before going to bed."

It was the man. The end of his nose was red with enthusiasm, and the light of victory shone in his eyes. The pair started off at once, but on reaching the corner the inventor hinted that beer would be in order. Mr. Bowser took him into a saloon and bought beer. One block down he bought more. Before they had reached the shed where the machine was stored he had bought five glasses, but had only drank one himself. The inventor explained that he always took a flier on beer before taking one on his machine. The shed was duly reached, the door unlocked, and then Mr. Bowser stood in the presence of IT. He instinctively removed his hat and bowed his head.

"There it is," said the man in an awed whisper. "But shan't we go across the street first and get another glass of beer?"

They went. Mr. Bowser was too agitated to drink the glass before him, and the inventor downed it. Then they returned to the shed and saw a common excelsior mattress spread out on two sawhorses and two homemade wings attached to its sides. For a tail it had a Japanese umbrella.

"There it is," repeated the inventor as he pointed. "That is what is going to revolutionize the world, but before going further suppose we take a drink."

They took one—that is, the stranger took two.

"What infernal nonsense is this?" demanded Mr. Bowser after walking around the sawhorses. "You don't mean to tell me that this thing will ever fly?"

"She'll sail like a bird, sir. After we has had another drink or two—"

"But we won't have another drink or two!"

"Say, Bowser, have you got $5 to spare? I want to paint its wings red."

"No, sir; no, sir. You have brought me down here and made a fool of me."

"But don't rip out that way. Wait and see this bird fly. I am disappointed in you. I thought you knew a good thing when you saw it. How much are you willing to put up?"

"Not a blamed cent, sir!"

"Will you lend me a dollar?"

"No, sir."

"Will you buy me another glass of beer?"

"No, sir!"

Then they clinched and rolled over on the ground and pounded each other, and when Mr. Bowser reached home with his skinned nose, his bleeding ear and his coat ripped up the back good Mrs. Bowser sympathetically exclaimed:

"Poor dear, you have fallen and hurt yourself! It's a shame how they let the sidewalks be out of repair!"

IS IT A COUGH?

Ontario Woman's Advice.

Hamilton, Ont.—"I am a great believer in Dr. Pierce's medicines. I am speaking from the actual use of them and the great benefit I have derived therefrom. Shortly after my marriage I began ailing, had a very bad cough and got very thin and was run down. My people thought I was going into a decline. They got 'Golden Medical Discovery' and this medicine completely cured me."—Mrs. AMELIA HIBBARD, 26 Cheever St., Hamilton, Ont.

Kilbride, Ont.—"When I was only eleven months old my mother procured 'Golden Medical Discovery' for me, which cured me of congestion of lungs and whooping cough. I have taken it several times myself since and about one year ago I gave it to my two children for whooping cough. They recovered very quickly with no bad results, after taking one bottle. I have recommended it to quite a number of late."—Mrs. W. J. SIMKINS, Kilbride, Ont.

The best time to cure a cough is when it starts. Ordinarily, a few doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure a cough at the beginning. But even when the cough is deep-seated and the body is wasted by emaciation, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will in most cases effect a permanent cure.

Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to-day from any medicine dealer; it is a powerful blood purifier, so penetrating that it even gets at the impure deposits in the joints and carries them out of the system.

Depend upon this grand remedy to give you the kind of blood that makes the skin clear, the mind alert, the vision keener, and puts ambition and energy into the entire body. You will not be disappointed. For free advice, write Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Symmetry.

The smoker who sat directly opposite had put his foot on the edge of the seat occupied by the professor.

It was encased in one of those easy going, hygienic shoes that look like a canvas covered barn.

"My friend," said the professor, eying it disapprovingly, "oblige me by removing that thing from my seat. It's bad form."—Chicago Tribune.

An Important Question.

A young man hurriedly entered a restaurant and sat down at the table nearest the kitchen. With shuffling feet the waitress advanced.

"Have you frog legs?" the young man anxiously inquired.

Teaching French School Children Not to Forget German Atrocities

PARIS, Sept. 20.—The Ministry of Public Instruction has distributed to all the school teachers in France a manual of information on what they should have in mind in teaching history to the children in their classes.

The manual contains a letter from Mr Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, who declares that France is so generous that she forgets too easily. He recalls documents relating to the war of 1870 with details of evidence that was adduced to show various atrocities committed by the invaders of France.

The President of the Chamber admonishes the teachers not to let their charges forget the lesson of 1914-15 as did their elders the lesson of 1870-71.

Fighting in the Anzac Region On the Gallipoli Peninsula Is Vividly Described

LONDON, Sept. 29.— A description of the fighting in the Anzac region on the Gallipoli Peninsula during the last week in August and the result achieved during this period is given by the Dardanelles correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company.

The capture of Hill No. 60 was important, says the correspondent, as it is the last crest of the last ridge separating the Anzac zone from the plains to the north, and thus constitutes a point of union between the British forces in the Anzac position and the line across the Suvla plain, besides giving access to a ravine leading to high ground beyond it.

The Turks, he says, clung to the hill with the utmost determination, and when they were thrown out of their trenches would fight their way back again, accepting terrible losses unflinchingly to regain the lost ground, with the result that when the trenches finally were captured they were filled with Turkish dead. It took three days to oust the Turks, and the ground around, he says, is still thickly strewn with their bodies and those of British soldiers who fell in the assaults.

Lost Fully 5,000

It is computed, declares the correspondent, that the Turks lost five thousand men before they surrendered the position. The Indian brigade and the Connaught Rangers took part in the fighting with the Australians and New Zealanders.

The correspondent expresses the opinion that the Turks will not attack the Anzac positions again after the terrible losses they sustained in previous attacks. They did succeed, he adds, in sweeping two British battalions off the ridge that previously had been won by the New Zealanders, but when they got across the crest into the ravine below they came under the fire of British machine guns.

"They came down in thousands," said a staff officer of the New Zealand brigade; "they went back in hundreds," the correspondent's story continues. Machine gunners, he says, claim that five thousand were killed.

Position Impregnable.

Danger to this part of the line, the correspondent thinks, could only come through physical overstrain of the troops, as they have made the position virtually impregnable, and even supplies for the men are now taken up through saps which run right down to the beaches, while the sides of the hills are covered with dugouts. The Turkish batteries make it exciting for landing parties, but once ashore there is now plenty of cover for the men, and since the August victories they have much more elbow room.

The French War Office has issued this statement:

In the Dardanelles from September 12 to September 17 there was no movement of importance. The Turks attacked several positions of our front by means of mines, which had not been employed by them up to this time. On the morning of the 17th an enemy mine gallery was destroyed, after it had been advanced for several days, by our counter-mines. The operation was perfectly successful without costing us a single loss."

A Constantinople telegram states that at a review of troops held in honor of Duke Johann Albrecht of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Commander-in-Chief of the Turkish forces at the Dardanelles, Enver Pasha said the presence of the Duke was the forerunner to the arrival of a great German army.

In the past week about 350 passengers from Austria and Germany have been passing through Roumania daily on their way to Turkey. It is an open secret that these are disguised officers and men destined for the Dardanelles. As a result, passenger traffic is now limited to non-combatants whose identity is fully established.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS

AND FOOD FERMENTATION

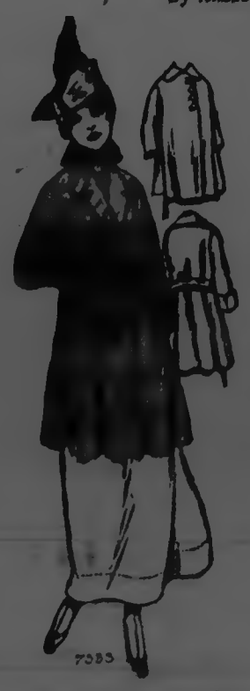
BY A STOMACH SPECIALIST

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is excessive acid in the stomach, aggravated by food fermentation. Hyper-acidity irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements acid and wind. In all such cases—and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid, and stop the fermentation, by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties. F. J. G.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S COAT.

By Anabel Worthington.



As the vogue of the moment is one piece dresses the separate coat is absolutely necessary to the well dressed woman. The model shown is one of the most practical, simple, comfortable and chic.

It is cut on plain, straight sacque lines, with considerable flare at the lower edge. It closes in front either close to the throat with a small roll collar or lower down with small revers edging the opening and the same collar at the neck. This can be buttoned over when the high fastening is desired.

The plain coat sleeve is used. This is wide and roomy and has a straight cuff at the wrist.

The new cloak materials show numbers of soft woolly fabrics which make beautiful coats of this type. There is one which resembles vicuna, soft and silky and of lovely color. Then there are many plaids and checks, which are more or less marked, and these are usually self-trimmed, as no velvet or silk or satin would look well with them. Buttons are their only ornament.

This is a nice coat to make of velvet or velveteen for wear in the evening for semi-dress. It can be of dark blue, dark green, brown or gray and can be worn with nearly every frock.

The coat pattern, No. 7,235, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3 3-8 yards of 54 inch material, with 7-8 yard of 27 inch satin.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Roumania, "Gendarme of Balkans," Not Likely to Remain Neutral

Stopped the Last Balkan War in 1913 by Show of Force and Got the Dobrudja Province, Promoted War in 1878 and Has No Love for Teutons or Bulgaria.

(By a Student of the Balkns, in N.Y. Herald.)

Diplomatists of all countries, neutral as well as belligerent, are watching anxiously the third struggle between Latin and Teuton that has begun since Austria's ultimatum to Serbia. This third struggle is between Roumania and Bulgaria, the earlier two were, of course, between Mr. Cambon and Prince Lichnowsky in London and that between Prince von Buelow and Baron Bonnino in Rome. In both the earlier tussles the German protagonist failed in his endeavour. What will result from the present encounter?

Such a lack of affection as exists between Roumania and her neighbour, Bulgaria, is no mere difference caused by propinquity. To be sure, the Bulgarians chant dismally about the fruits of victory being snatched from them by the treaty of Bucharest in August, 1913; but it is an odd fact that Roumania asks nothing from Bulgaria and covets no possession of her neighbour. All that she wants is a square deal. And if a Roumanian talks rather cynically about his country's hopes of ever getting a square deal from Bulgaria one must remember that his cynicism is not without some reason.

A fruitful, generous country sustains an easily governed population as a rule, and to this axiom Roumania is no exception. Her last participation in actual warfare was in 1878, when her troops, defeating Osman Pacha at Plevna, saved Russia from the Turk to a far greater degree than even Belgium saved France and England at Liege last year. It is no exaggeration to say that the people have trusted their rulers and their governments, and that her statesmen, for the most part, subordinating personal ambitions to the desire for the country's industrial development, have deserved well of that confidence. Bulgaria, on the other hand, has had new programmes forced on her by a rapid procession of Prime Ministers, each of them having the ear in turn of a weak, vacillating monarch.

Roumania held only one international policy for thirty-three years and changed it almost overnight, having discovered that being an appanage to Austria was unprofitable and reactionary. Thirty-three years of pipe-dreaming came to an end. Thereafter, since 1911, Roumania has leaned toward her natural relative and educator, France.

Now, above all nations, it was Bulgaria which was responsible for that change. At the conference of Berlin, in 1878, which settled peace between Russia and Turkey, Roumania was forced to give up her rich productive vineyards of Bessarabia—because that province was strategically necessary to Russia, and rights for the Little States, in the eyes of Bismarck, who presided at that conference, were about as real as dreams of Elysium—and to accept in exchange the small Dobrudja province, marshy, sandy and utterly infertile, which was to be handed over by the newly created State of Bulgaria, emancipated to Turkey by the treaty of the conference.

Bulgaria Holds the Dobrudja.

No Bulgarian statesman has ever explained why Bulgaria did not hand over the Dobrudja, as the treaty stipulated. For Roumania, the plain fact remained that the conference had done its work, signed its treaty and gone away, and that Bulgaria's dishonoured acceptance was never met; it was the Balkan prologue to Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's "scrap of paper."

It may well be imagined that staring hard for thirty years at a broken promise imbued Roumania with no kindlier feeling towards Bulgaria as time went on. And yet the desolate Dobrudja was not worth a war. Nor was the Concert of Europe vastly concerned by Roumanian grievance. To the Concert, indeed, it was as academic as somebody else's toothache. Roumania was incensed against Russia, which had snatched away Bessarabia, and turned to Austria. It paid Austria to act the part of the big brother; for one thing, such attitude kept the awkward question of Transylvania quiet. Public opinion in Roumania began to waver, then to alter. And then came the Balkan War of 1912.

At this point a bit of secret diplomatic history is worth recording. The present writer was in Bucharest in September, 1913, when the war between Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro and Serbia on the one side and Turkey on the other was begun by the withdrawal of the Montenegrin Minister from Constantinople. Three months previously it was known to a few, but never chronicled, that King Ferdinand of Bulgaria had privately met King Carol at Sinaia to obtain Roumania's promise of neutrality in the forthcoming war. King Carol, consulting with his Ministers, agreed, subject to King Ferdinand's assurance, equally enough given, that the war was to involve no territorial acquisition for any of the Balkan League, but was to be a war for the amelioration of the Christians in Macedonia suffering tortures under the Moslem heel.

Roumania's Influence.

When the Turks fell back at Lule Burgas and Kirl Kilisse, as the result of German army contractors' plundering in ammunition and their own Young Turks backwardness, the Bulgarians decided that they would like to keep the land they had won in the fighting. I make no doubt that King Ferdinand was quite sincere in June, 1913, but six months later Dr. Daneff had his war, and Guesheff, with his English commercial training and his notions of playing fair, had been deposed. Viewing the change of mind, seeing themselves being hoodwinked again by another Power, the third time in thirty-five years, Roumania's army was mobilized, and strolled, casually, like a lot of gamekeepers, into Bulgaria, while that unhappy land was engaged in fighting Greece and Serbia.

Not without some irony, in reply to King Ferdinand's protests, King Carol refused to regard the march of his own army as a military manoeuvre; his attitude earned him the sobriquet of the Gendarme of the Balkans." The Roumanian army fired not a shot, but King Carol made the warring States compose their differences, and the treaty of Bucharest was signed and sealed in a fortnight. Incidentally, the Roumanians got the Dobrudja, a little State, after all this waiting, and King Ferdinand got another Prime Minister. In less healthy countries Dr. Daneff would have had a fatal accident for making a fool of his royal master.

It will be seen from this chronicle that the conflict is between two opposing schools of thought, alike different in diplomacy and strategy. Like the Germans, the Bulgarians believe in shock tactics, in using all the strength at the beginning, and keeping up the effort until somebody is winded; like his German relatives, King Ferdinand is apt to allow principle to wait on expediency. Like the French, from whose ancestors, the Latins, they also spring, the Roumanians have long memories and they believe in using a reserve force quite swiftly at the right moment. In common, too, with the French, they have the intuition which tells them when that moment has arrived.

As a prophecy regarding what Roumania's course will be in this war, it would seem to one accustomed to their methods of thought that (even if they are not attacked by their gentle Teuton friends with the object of seeing that ammunition shall go through their neutral land to the sick man of Europe) Roumania probably will remember that in the Balkans neutrality has not been a policy that has paid. It certainly did not pay Roumania in 1913.

SELECT MEDICINE CAREFULLY

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Buchu Nut; they are exceedingly mild composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness, and disordered digestion, no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c box yourself.

A Good Way To Increase Weight

THIN UNDEVELOPED PEOPLE SHOULD MAKE THEIR FOOD PRODUCE MORE FLESH.

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Most thin people stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a normal balance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single extra pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal; can be strongly recommended. This well known preparation is a combination of recognized assimilative agents of highest value. It is harmless and wonderfully effective and a tablet allowed to digest with the food often has the effect as many ounces (nearly a week). Sargol is sold by all druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee to put on flesh, increase or money back.

Teuton Demands Provoke Swiss

Switzerland Claims That Germany is Exercising an Improper Pressure Upon Her

BERNE, Sept. 29.—Apparently Swiss merchants have had enough of the uncertainty of the situation which has prevailed during the last few months, mainly owing to Germany and Austria having demanded from the Swiss government compensation for their goods in the shape of raw materials and foodstuffs which, as they well knew, Switzerland does not produce but must obtain from the Allies.

Germany and Austria, in fact, are virtually trying to obtain through Switzerland some of the goods which the British blockade prevents them from procuring otherwise. Austria, for instance, refuses to sell Switzerland sugar except for rice and condensed milk. The exclusively Swiss control of the goods sent to Switzerby the Allies for her own consumption has been agreed to by the latter, this control being similar to that insisted upon by Germany. The stumbling block in the negotiations, however, occurred when Germany and Austria demanded compensation, as the Gazette de Lausanne frankly admits.

The Allies are even ready to allow the Swiss, within certain definite limits, to send Germany and Austria part of the raw materials and commodities furnished by the Allies, either as raw materials or in form of goods manufactured therefrom by the Swiss, and on condition that the said goods cannot be used for military purposes. It is felt, at any rate by large sections of the Swiss, that Germany and Austria, by demanding as compensation goods which they know Switzerland does not possess or produce, are exercising an improper pressure upon her and endeavoring to prevent her coming to any agreement with the Allies.

Combing Won't Rid Hair Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then to destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the trick.

Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

CONFERENCES WILL BE HELD

To Effect Closer Understanding Among The Allies

PARIS, Sept. 22. — The Franco-Italian conference, which has been in session at Como, closed with the adoption of an address to the Belgian government and toasting of the Franco-Italian alliance, says a Havas News Agency despatch. Another conference will be held in Paris, at a date to be decided upon later, in which representatives of Great Britain, Russia and Belgium will participate.

The conference was attended by French and Italian public men of eminence, but who are not now holders of public office, such as Mr. Gabriel Hanotaux, formerly Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Jean Louis Signor Luigi Luzzatti, who has been Premier of Italy. The object of the gathering was to draw the people of the two countries into a closer understanding and sympathy, the efforts being along the same lines as those of the Franco-American Committee of which Mr. Hanotaux is president. Other gatherings will follow.

Allied Aviators Score in Attacks on The Western Front

British Air Flotillas Attack German Camps at Middlekirke and Bombard Railway Lines While French Birdmen Drop Bombs on Station---Artillery Actions Reported at Many Points.

SERBIA READY FOR FOE'S ASSAULT

PARIS (French Official Communique) Sept. 22.—Allied aviators bombarded German railway junctions and troop trains with marked success in attacks at several points near the battlefront last night.

Several English birdmen attacked the German camps at Middlekirke, emptied their machines of bomb supplies and returned safely, despite a heavy German fire. Another English air flotilla sped along the Bruges-Thorout railway, bombarding a troop train below with good results. French airmen threw bombs on the railway station at Conflans.

This afternoon's communique reported violent rifle fusillades around Boesinghe and Arras. Rifle action followed a prolonged bombardment from both sides.

Intermittent cannonades occurred during the night between the Somme and the Oise. This afternoon's communique also reported artillery actions north of Camp Chalons between the Aisne and the Argonne, and in Lorraine.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Despite Berlin and Vienna despatches to-day reporting that Austro-Germans are bombarding the Serbian river defences with utmost vigor, the greatest confidence is felt in military circles here that the Serbians will be able to withstand the assaults.

"The Austro-Germans must use at least 400,000 men to make any headway at all against Serbia," said one London military critic to-day. "I do not believe they can spare that many men when you consider the fact that the Russians are checking the Germans in the east and the Kaiser must prepare to meet a possible offensive in France."

The Serbian army, it is known here, now has large supplies of ammunition, in marked contrast to the situation with Serbia early in the war.

Since the Serbians inflicted a crushing defeat on the Austrians last December, they have been supplied with every requirement of a modern army.

British officers have assisted in drilling the new levies which are well supplied with aerial scouts and new field pieces.

The Austro-German bombardment indicates a plan to advance along the Moravia Valley. The ground in this region gives great natural advantages to the Serbians.
